A Dwindling Asset

Disconcerting, to say the least, are the latest official figures of automobile tourist traffic across the international boundary between the United States and Canada.

With agriculture in the doldrums the people in this country have been watching with approval and a measure of comfort the growth of the American tourist trade in Canada, regarding it as a lusty young industry whose keen promise of soaking up for some of the losses sustained by agriculture, if not immediately, at any rate in the near future.

The tide of tourist traffic Canada-ward from the United States has been forming strongly across the international border in recent years and has been a growing and remunerative one-industry until the trend of the second largest industry of this country.

While, of course, the major portion of this comparatively new industry is made back and forth by the provinces of Ontario and Quebec in the east, and British Columbia in the west, one principality to their geographical proximity to American centres of some popularity, still the whole country has been reaping a modicum of benefit and enjoying some measure of the increase until now.

The Wrong Direction

Now, however, it would appear that the pendulum is showing a marked tendency to swing the other way, since official figures for the month of September not only show a reduction of American tourist automobile "entries" than in the corresponding month of 1927, while a decrease of 35,158 in the number of American cars entering Canada by the principal highways, it must be said in fairness, is a substantial figure when based on a total entry of 174,627 Americans cars for the month of September.

What makes the situation as a whole American cause considerable consternation Canadian tourist cars travelling southward by five to one, entries across the boundary along the pseudo prosperous, in other direction, there is no sign of any decrease in the number figures are any criticism of the native summer movement, and there is no reason to suppose they are not.

The figure show that during September a total of 6,617 northbound tourist travelled south across the boundary while only 4,617 northbound tourist automobiles passed through points of entry into Canada, a decrease of three to one as the wrong side of the economic ledger.

This appears serious enough when the figures demonstrate that for empty into American spending money in the province for gas and oil, meals and accommodation three prairie Canadians are spending cash for similar services in the United States, but that is only the whole story, for further statistics show that Canadians are spending considerable sums for the purchase of commodities in the United States and bringing them back under the $200 duty exemption clause, spelling a further key to business on the Canadian prairies.

During the six months ending September 30, Canadian tourists returning to this country brought into Canada under the duty free clause merchandise valued at approximately $6,000 and of this amount, $4,102,855 was in the United States. Nearly half that amount went in clothing and a round half million each was spent for household appliances and boots and shoes. Automobile accessories exchanged for radios and sporting goods, auto tires, tubes and accessories with a further $672,000 for miscellaneous commodities.

* * * *

The Obvious Cure

The cause for this situation is not far to seek, when a comparison is made between the condition of the highways in the prairie provinces during the past few years with those in the United States. It is not surprising to find that American tourists in increasing numbers decide to do their travelling on their own side of the boundary and that Canadians in the west in increasing numbers take their motor trips south of the line and travel over the smooth highways which are to be found in the western U.S.A. Add to this the incentive to save a little money on the trip and the use of a few day pleasure trip on the savings made on one hundred dollars' worth of purchases, and surprise that Western Canadians are crossing the border in increasing numbers should not be necessary.

The obvious remedy, of course, is to rehabilitate the disintegrating highways in the prairie provinces and to build more, and provide some reduction in the tariff on some of the commodities which are purchasable with such a saving on the other side of the line to bring the prairie tourist business back to the flow of tourist traffic from the south and stem the southward tide of Canadian tourists.

Had some of the $130,000,000 which has been spent on relief been expended on roads, work would have been found for many who have been forced to go on the prairies and the taxpayers would have had at least a more or less idle for years and the taxpayers would have had at least a partially self-liquidating asset in return for some of the expenditure.

Fireman Had Alibi

Volunteer firemen did not regard Nov. 13 when the fire alarm sounded at Hart, Mich., as a day of rest. Homes burned down. Town officials demanded an explanation. The firemen thought the siren sounded to mark Armistice Day," firemen unfortunately replied.

FRIDAY, JAN. 6, 1928

PROSPECT FOR 1929

Every indication points to the probability that the incoming year 1929 will be the most crucial one in the history of agriculture in Western Canada. The next twelve months contain potentialities for evil and good, for despair and for hope.

The agricultural region of the west is now at the crossroads. Its economy has been built on the production of wheat, the bulk of which is calculated to go into overseas markets. The bulk of the acreage is more suitable for high quality spring wheat production than for any other agricultural pursuit. If the congestion in the international wheat situation continues and low prices predominate, 1929 will indeed be an inauspicious year for the west. If a semblance of order is restored and wheat prices rise to a reasonable level, the west will begin to see daylight.

The world situation in wheat at the present time presents one of the biggest plots in history. A total world crop approaching in bushelage the the gigantic total of 4,425 million bushels, against consumption reaching only 3,945 million leaves an unconsumed carryover of 480 million bushels. Add to that the world carryover of 620 million as it existed on August 1st last and a total of 1,100 million bushels is given as the prospective carryover on August 1st, 1929.

With such a crop and under 1929 the world may be literally swamped in a morass of surplus wheat to an extent that would make the present burdensome surplus, which is at least the second largest on record, seem relatively small.

The above gives the dark side of the picture. The possibility of an immense wheat glut cannot be overlooked. For the sake of Western Canada and the wheat growers in many lands it is here protection is difficult and especially a large world wheat crop in 1929 is not desirable.

Prospects in Western Canada for grain production in 1929 are fairly good. This is true of Saskatchewan and Alberta in particular, while Manitoba can reasonably recuperate from the drought which persisted there in the fall months. Meteorologists desire are inclined to the belief that 1929 will be a wet year.

Everybody in Western Canada will be happy that the dark forebodings will not come to pass. Everybody hopes that this year will harvest a good grain crop and that prices will be such as to bring a reasonable return to the majority of producers. The welfare of the west, and in fact of the whole dominion, is of such paramount importance, that interest in every city of opinion in this matter.—The Hudson, Calgary.

RECORD WHEAT HARVEST FORECAST IN QUEENSLAND

Brisbane.—A record wheat harvest is expected in Queensland this year. Atmospheric conditions never can wetter wheat while poor, an increase of 10,000 acres as compared with last year. Growers anticipate a 20 per cent crop.

A COMMUNITY PRESS

In some states of the American Union a new idea is taking shape in the form of making the local weekly paper a community press. We have few in Canada, but not as many as on the American side. Every good municipality needs a local paper. It prints the minutes of the Municipal Council and keeps the ratepayers informed on all matters relating to the work of their local representatives on the Council. Another point is that when all ratepayers are getting the paper the cost per capita is lowered and the owner is able to turn out a better paper because he is not hampered with a long list of subscribers who are continually in arrears. In many other ways it is beneficial to both sides.

The Alix Free Press is about to make an offer to the Lanmore Council to make this paper a community publication. The subscription price will be lowered to $1.00 per year. The paper will be non-political and non-sectarian. This only refers to Editorial comment. Readers may still express their views in letters to the Editor, but must do so over their own signatures.

The paper will be greatly improved and a good plant installed gradually as fast as possible. Watch for it. We hope our readers will take to the idea and let your representative on the Council know your attitude. He will be influenced by the number of ratepayers who express their opinion. The question will come before the annual meeting and we are putting the question before you now so you will have time to think it over.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H. L. Strange.

We are all gravely concerned at the moment about the alarming decrease in the price of pass in the world's demand for export wheat; which decrease in turn has materially seriously reduced Canada's export trade.

The Canadian people are not yet agreed upon a plan that might stop the difficulty altogether. Of one thing, however, all are agreed upon, which is that the superior quality or "strength" of Canadian wheat must be maintained; and furthermore that the world must continually be reminded of that superior quality.

Recently I visited the famous International Hay and Grain show at Chicago. I was with satisfaction and pride that every Canadian visitor could see the evidence of that quality on the walls of the Cereal Exhibition Hall, a long list giving the names of Western Canadians who had won world championships for wheat.

The news of these high winnings is widely published, and is enabled to the far ends of the earth. It occured to me then our farmers, our Governments, and all of us, therefore, owe sincere thanks to the management of the Chicago Hay and Grain show for taking the world so generously about the championships which Canadians have won, and so about the high quality of our good wheat.

SALTING DOWN THE AIRLINES

A logical outcome of the recent development in the use of salt as a stabilizing agent in the construction of modern low-cost highways is the adoption by Trans-Canada Airlines of this versatile material in the construction of runways at many of its airports and landing fields across the Dominion. According to an article by Philip Cummings in the Financial Post, which appears in the current issue of the magazine of Canadian Industries Limited 165 tons of salt were used recently in the construction of the three runways at the new Edmonton airport and it has been used also at the Calgary, Regina, Carleton and North Bay airports. Like the highways that have been treated in similar manner, the new runways should be remarkably impervious to the vagaries of winter weather, with its alternate periods of thawing and freezing, which play havoc with the ordinary unstabilized roadway.

U.S. GET AN GROUP CHANGES ITS NAME

Philadelphia—In a move announced as a definite anti-Nazi stand the Philadelphia Turngemeinde recently changed its name to the Philadelphia Turners, and elected as its man Board of Directors to give the anti-Nazis complete control of the board of this athletic and social organization.

NEW LIFE FOR THE OLD FLAG

The forthcoming visit of the King and Queen to Canada has given flag manufactures many a sleepless night, worrying over production figures so that there may not be a shortage and at the same time no undue surplus. The Toronto Board of Education, according to the December issue of C-I-L Ovol, the magazine of Canadian Industries Limited, is at present making severe weather tests with not ordinary Union Jack and one that has been treated with a new finishing process which makes textile materials stain and proof, water repellent and in the case of flags, drop proof. The new process, it is claimed, promises to double the life of a flag.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

At all Christian Science Churches next Sunday, the subject of the Lesson-Sermon will be "Sacrament." The Golden Text is John 6:53. One of the Scriptural quotations reads: "And for their sakes I sanctify myself, that they also might be sanctified through the truth (John 17:19).

One of the correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, is: "We should consecrate existence, not to the unknown God whom we ignorantly worship, but to the eternal Builder, the everlasting Father, to the life which mortal sense cannot impair nor mortal belief destroy."

The information furnished by Christian Science Committees on Publication, 607 Marsh Building, Edmonton, Alberta.

FARM RESEARCH

Washington—Marking a "silver curve out of a cow's ear" is no more impossible than some of the miracles farm chemists are expected to perform at the Government's four new $1,500,000 research laboratories, locations of which were announced this week by Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture.

The Government has been experimenting in new commercial uses for farm products for many years, but never on a scale approaching that made possible under the 1926 Agricultural Adjustment Act, as a means of meeting the farm surplus problem.

As explained by Mr. Wallace, the mission of the new laboratories will be to counteract the losses to farmers through competition caused by improved processes in industry.

"We must all remember," he says, "that technological progress is a very real thing in the world today. Some of the technological changes have been made by giving them new competition."

Major surplus commodities to be concentrated on in the new laboratories are at first are cotton, sweet potatoes, and naval stores. The eastern laboratory will work on tobacco, apples, fresh potatoes, mild products, and cereals other than wheat; on corn, wheat, and agricultural waste products, and the western on fruits other than apples, vegetables, fresh potatoes, wheat and alfalfa.

Power Alcohol

One of the first accomplishments of the Peoria laboratory will be to study the feasibility of making power alcohol from grains and other farm products.

New agricultural by-products already developed by the Department give a hint as to what is ahead.

A synthetic fiber with the appearance of wool has been developed from casein, a milk by-product, by Stephen P. Reed and Carl O. Whitter of the Bureau of Dairy Industry.

Sweet potato starch is being produced commercially in Louisiana by a method developed by the Bureau of Chemistry and Soils.

A new gasoline substitute has been manufactured by the same Bureau of Chemistry and Soils. It has been found to yield a high octane rating content used for tanning leather.

New technical methods of making fast and brilliant dyes have increased the use of cotton in clothing and household fabrics.

Other developments are for waterproofing, mildewproofing, fireproofing, and rendering the deteriorating effect of sunlight on cotton increased the widely of cotton for awnings, tents, and other outdoor articles.

New uses are developed for the manufacture of cotton fabrics for roofing, for the construction of buildings, and coverings to shelter or eradicate weeds.

SAFE PARROWING ACCOMMODATION

A Remedy for Property Distress Now Available

One angle that the Canadian Printing Trade takes towards the problem of proper distribution of the job printing work of the country is long and comforting of low prices, is contained in a letter sent out by E. H. Tidy, Secretary-Industrial Relations, Canadian Book Packers, Ltd. stating:

"Wasteful competition practices are due to methods of production rather than a single year. The present methods of production are responsible, whether low prices are high or low, and whether business is plentiful or scarce. There is always such year a relative glut of hogs in the fall of the year and a shortage later.

"Simply stated the solution of the problem is to invest in August, September, and early October, a considerable part of the money you intend to put into Canadian Securities for the year. This will supply you with the dollars in November and December, from which you can draw to satisfy demands and supply the shortage in the fall of each year. Then prices would not vary so much."

Such wheat borrowing accommodation is a necessity with this situation, and is being provided by the Alberta Lumber Co., Ltd., offers the following accommodation of sale harvesting implements to keep farmers busy during the winter months. The terms are given as follows:

Among the promising proposals discussed at Winnipeg last week was one that Western Canada division of the National Research Council should be established at once to conduct research into new uses for wheat and other farm products. The provision of up-to-date laboratories at some point in the prairie provinces is urged.

This has been followed by the suggestion of the North West Grain Dealers' Association that an international research laboratory should be set up in London, staffed by internationally famous cereal chemists, to seek a solution of the recurring wheat problem. The international Wheat Advisory Committee meeting in London on January 16 and includes representatives of all wheat exporting countries. This latest plan to find new industrial uses for wheat and other grain includes, as well as a central laboratory in London, the establishment of similar research facilities in all countries where the disposal of wheat has become a problem. Canada, Canada is thus giving the lead in a movement that promises rich results, for it is recognized that materially wider industrial employees may be here to stay for a long time unless radical measures are adopted to discover other uses for wheat.—Calgary Herald.

CHANGE IN BORDER GLEN POLICY

A slight change has been made in the Dominion Horse Club Policy effective in 1929 in the provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Alberta. Formerly the first payment to a close relative in ineligible of the service fee on the natural increase of mares bred by club members. In 1929 the first payment will be a flat amount of $15 for each mare bred. The second payment formerly equal to one quarter of the service fee for each mare bred is four as one pays the registered owner of the mare bred as it establish bread by the club. The object of these changes is to avoid the hindering of the members of clubs to the same number as operated under the policy in 1928.

News has come from the East of the death of Rev. J. C. Lowrie, United Church clergyman at Meaford, Ont. The Rev. gentleman was only 45 years of age, and was at one time connected with the church in Alix. His death took place last month in the Great War Memorial Hospital at Perth.

The last meeting of the Ladies Aid was held at the home of Mrs. Brockhart. The election of officers took place and changes were made. New officers are: President, Mrs. D. Wilton; Secretary, Mrs. B. Oldring; Vice-President, Mrs. G. Rosser; Treasurer, Mrs. H. Price.

Well, we have done it. Put up a proposition to the Lamerton Council to make the Free Press a real community paper. With the free lot of people we do not hesitate to make the offer. We want to give Alix the best weekly paper possible consistent with our population. But we do not expect a revolution over night. We have got to build up gradually and keep out of debt. The whole question will be discussed at the Annual meeting next month and we hope our people will look at it from the standpoint of the general good of the whole community. Think it over.

A petition is being circulated in Alix and Mirror. Post Office officials of Ottawa to inaugurate a straight mail service on the C.N.R. line between Edmonton and Calgary including Alix and the route. We, as well as the majority of people in Mirror are opposed to the practice of sending mail from Mirror to Alix back by way of Edmonton to be re-routed over the C.P.R. The same thing happens between Daysmere and Alix. We are of the opinion that if enough strengthen the Alix petition if the people of Mirror would get up a similar petition and hand it to Mr. Jaques. What we of Alix are asking for is that all mail originating on the C.N.R. line between Edmonton and Calgary be carried straight to its destination without any switching or alternation in its route. Pay no attention to arguments that it costs cash and clerk would be necessary, and tell that the C.N.R. only runs alternate days. These are not reasons at all but only excuses. The present system, even on a three trains a week service way basis can beat the C.P.R. by 24 hours to Alix even on off days. Service to the to the public comes first, and we have a right to demand service.

Big Dance at Mirror

Another Youth Problem

A good deal is heard about the plight of the jobless youth of the country but not so much is said about the misfortunes of the many young men who are pitchforked into employment for which they are not fitted, either by inclination or education, or both and who, as a result, either presently find themselves out of work or else out a miserable existence on an inadequate wage with little hope of improving their lot because of their lengthy period of painful trial and error.

The existence of a substantial number of these square pegs in round holes in the industrial towns and cities, many of them originating from the farms and small villages, cannot but arouse the sympathy of the spectator and certainly go to the underlying causes of this condition.

"Well, he was a job anyway and look at the thousands who are unable to get any kind of work" is apt to be the reaction of some of the more fortunate who are successful in their chosen vocation, but who do not stop and ponder over the matter, and who, therefore, are not impressed with the realization that the situation represents a problem of economic and human waste which requires solution just as much as the problem of unemployment itself.

For it cannot be gainsaid that the young man who is struggling to achieve a living in employment which is incompatible and for which he has little or no aptitude, is likely sooner or later to become imbued with a spirit of frustration when he realizes, perhaps after several of the best years of his life, that he is faced with the alternative of starting afresh at the bottom in some other occupation or of remaining where he is with little prospect of advancement beyond the mediocre either extremely remote or entirely illusive. In either words the number of years that he has spent in fruitless effort has created a waste not only for himself but for the industry to which he is engaged.

Shortage Of Skilled Labor In Sight

There are many causes responsible for this condition, not the least of which is the present depression, which has brought about a stalemate from which industry has not yet recovered. In the earlier stages of the depression large numbers of men were discharged and the plants which were then closed or are now beyond working age and others, somewhat younger, have not yet been able to get back into their former vocations.

While some material items have, in the meantime, filled up gaps caused by death or the necessity to take on additional help with former experienced employees, others have taken on younger men at considerably lower wages on the assumption that they were economizing. Included in this group are many young men who have taken courses in the technical schools and who, principally, therefore, were equipped to fill the vacancies as well as many others who have had little or no training. For every vacant job there has been an overwhelming rush of applicants and, under the circumstances, it is not surprising that there are a good many of them square pegs in round holes.

Moreover, executives have found by experience that too often the products of these technical schools are not much better equipped for practical industrial conditions than men who have had little or no education and to remit the kid who appears in the workshop as a graduate finds that he must start practically from scratch or try to get work in some other branch of industry.

As a result hosts of industrial recruits are already vegetating a time in the not far distant future when there will actually be a shortage of skilled workmen, despite the large number of unemployed and the not inconsiderable number of youths who are being turned out of institutions devoted to training students in the technical arts and crafts.

Class Bulwarks Needed

The situation appears to warrant investigation into the possibility of a more tie-up between the technical institutions and industry, possibly the development of a system under which the student will spend a part of his time in the school and a part of his time in the workshop, not the workshop at the school but in the factory or the garage where he will meet practical everyday problems at first hand; in fact, a modern development of the old apprenticeship system.

It is along these lines that the Hanes are solving this problem with considerable success. Under their apprenticeship law, enacted in 1911 and extended in 1927, provision is made for apprenticeships of four years in length, the administration of which is carried out by trades committees and apprentices councils, on both of which there is equal representation of employers and employees.

In every case of apprenticeship there must be a contract between master and apprentice, recognized by the public authorities. In this contract the duration of the apprenticeship, including provision for a six-month probationary period, and wages to be paid are specified. Provision is made for apprenticeship schools, at his employer's expense, attend the classes in technical as well as cultural training at a local technical school recognized by the Minister of Trade.

Industry of to-day is complicated by the very rapid strides being made in the fields of technology and science. The progress and operations of to-day are soon antiquated and this condition necessitates a very close and intimate relationship between education and industry itself.

The Price Of Confidence

Average Worker At Forty Is Valuable To His Employer

The idea that men need women who have reached the age of 40 are no longer useful in industry is scoffed at by the American Legion re-employment director, states the Detroit Free Press.

And he cites studies made by the Labor Department, the American Association of Manufacturers and university researchers to show that because of the maturity and greater stability and sense of responsibility, an average worker at 40 years of age is just reaching the prime of his usefulness.

Common sense and industrial experience reach the same conclusion.

A job in which physical knowledge and dexterity are more important than mental maturity can be better done by men who have not passed the point of their physical strength. And yet even here no arbitrary limit can be set. A man at 60 who has taken care of himself will be able to stand the physical labor better than a man at 40, who has dissipated his strength and abused himself.

There are many jobs in industry, though, where physical strength is a secondary consideration. And in these jobs that employers have refused to consider men who are more than 40 are no valuable as, if not more valuable than, younger persons.

It is high time that such women if they are worth anything at all, certainly have acquired faculty responsibilities. They are likely, therefore, to be less radical and more stable than younger persons, have more faculty of judgment, which come only with years of experience, be followed by boys and girls without temporary loss to their employers.

All this is well known to business men and industrialists that it is not necessary, at this late date, to tell the country that "useful life begins at 40."

Grand Championships

Western Winners Are Named In Various Classes

Nels Lindee of Bieyone, Alta., not only was the National Wheat Champion at the 1936 Royal Winter Fair, but also took the barley Grand Championship. He won the wheat crown with a sample of Kenyon wheat, a hard red spring variety originated by the Cereal Division, Dominion Experimental Farms. It weighed 66 pounds to the bushel. The Grand Championship barley was a sample of the Trebi variety.

Nels Lindee went to Alberta from Minnesota over 30 years ago and farms about 1,000 acres at Claymore, near Wetaskiwin. He has been a member of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association for several years.

The reserve championship for wheat at the Royal went to Cecil Trowsil of Saltcoats, Sask., for his sample of Kenyon rye, too, is a product of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association.

The 1937 National Wheat Champion at the Regal Winter Fair, went to John Hargreaves of Lacombe, Alberta, a member of the Canadian Boys' and Girls' Farm Clubs. The year's first sample of wheat was placed fourth.

Other Nels Rigby, Wembley, Alberta, was awarded the Grand Championship for oats. He showed a sample of the Victory variety. The championship for pure seed of Dagnaud barley went to A. E. Husk, White Fox, Sask.; for potatoes to George Elchuk, Bonnyville, and for G. F. Hillend, Monarch, Alberta.

Civil Aviation In Canada

Pilots Now Fly More Than Ten Million Miles Yearly

Civil aviation in Canada, a $6,000,000 investment, is making progress in more than one and a half times as many miles flown this 10,000-mile miles a year as in 1928, the first year for which records were kept, according to figures released from Ottawa.

A report prepared by the Dominion bureau of statistics disclosed since 1928, aircraft mileage for civil purposes has taken on younger and lower wages on the assumption that they were economizing. Included in this group are many young men who have taken courses in the technical schools and who, principally, therefore, were equipped to fill the vacancies as well as many others who have had little or no training. For every vacant job there has been an overwhelming rush of applicants and, under the circumstances, it is not surprising that there are a good many of them square pegs in round holes.

Wheat Exports

Exports From Canada To The United Kingdom Are Increasing

The quality of Canadian wheat on the British market brings prestige to the Dominion, states the Canadian Trade Commissioner at Bristol, England. Due to its popularity, there is only enquiries from time to time from distributors of food products who wish to act as the export agent of a Canadian manufacturer. For the 12 months ended March, 1936, exports of wheat and flour from Canada to the United Kingdom amounted to 8,985,000 quarters, valued at $215,645,000, the previous twelve months, the amount was 4,736,977 pounds, valued at $113,000,000.

A Long Highway

Stream Of 15,000-Mile Road From Alaska To South America

A highway stretching from Fairbanks Mount of Alaska and ending in the southern source of Patagonia is gradually emerging from the frozen stage.

Along 12 000 miles of road, if the dream comes true, motorists from day way go from Canada and the United States to the 20 republics of Latin America.

A report in the Pan-American Confidence Bulletin says that the project has been made since the last conference at Montevideo five years ago. Delegates to the eighth conference, to be held in Lima, Peru, next December, will be asked to approve the plan.

Surveys for the highway have been taken through the United States, through Mexico City toward Guatemala City.

Engineers have also taken a direct interest in travel facilities between Alaska and the United States and Canada through British Columbia.

The Queen Mother

Will Supervise Code Of Young Princesses Of King And Queen

The visit of the King and Queen to Australia next year will bring Queen Mary from her self-imposed semi-retirement to supervise the care of their two daughters.

Princess Elizabeth, heir to the throne, and her sister, Princess Margaret Rose, will be under the official supervision of the queen mother but will be directly cared for by their governess, Miss Jean Crakelrod. They will follow their normal school routine, living at Buckingham Palace.

It is regarded, however, that Queen Mary's influence over the Princess will be much more frequent, although she will go daily to Buckingham House to visit their grandmother. She will assume the general practice of taking them for afternoon visits to places of public interest such as the Zoo, or out for tea and concerts.

Buckingham Palace sources said that the two young princesses have accepted the trip of their parents without enthusiasm, absorbing thoughts because they cannot go too.

The eighth annual National Contests for the Boys' and Girls' Farm Clubs conducted by the Canadian Council on Boys' and Girls' Club Work in conjunction with the Royal Winter Fair, Toronto, were held at the Fair on November 14, 1936. The annual contests are provided by the Council as a reward to the members of the provincial championship clubs for their efficiency in farm club work, the purpose of the National Contests being the advancement and co-ordination of junior farm club work in Canada. The organization of boys' and girls' farm clubs commenced in 1914, and there are now 37,264 members throughout the Dominion.

At this year's contests teams from Manitoba, Quebec and British Columbia, won the first place, Manitoba winning three, Quebec, two, and British Columbia, one. There were six projects in the competitions: Dairy Cattle, Beef Cattle, Swine, Poultry, Seed Grain, and Seed Potato. In all, 58 teams entered, number 84 members, eight of whom were girls. Each team consisted of two members and represented all the provinces of Canada; Nova Scotia, Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, and British Columbia sent four members, New Brunswick and Quebec, three each, and Prince Edward Island, two. All the teams, according to the conditions of the National Contests, were the winners in the respective provincial contests, their expenses in connection with the visit to the Winter Fair being paid by the Canadian Council.

U.S. Plane Production

Goal Of 1,000 Planes A Month Expected To Be Reached

United States aircraft manufacturers are working means of trying their output to keep pace with President Roosevelt's specific program of acquiring one of the world's strongest air forces.

A mass production goal of 1,800 planes a month, to be attained within a few years, was set when the president met a conference of manufacturers and government officials, informed persons declared.

Some of the president's advisers feel the country's present lack of industry's capacity (though not actual plants) may be stepped up to 1,000 planes a month.

Only Germany, officials believe, can turn out military planes now at the 1,000 monthly rate. American output of all types, including commercial aircraft, averaged only 230 planes a month the first nine months of this year.

Lota afternoon arrived. Abstract, edgy, as he worked, Hammond kept aware that there was a great deal of loud conversation of a jovial type from upstairs, where Glenn seemed to find a new pocket only that he might dig into another. Several of the more successful placer miners from above had joined Hammond Glenn's claim without, find, beg his pardon, Hammond Glenn.

It was not a new strike, he knew that—there was no shouting and running about. Rather, the placer miners of curious miners from other diggings. After a time Jack forgot the matter. Then the work dug out and his men made the clean-up. Hammond pouched the nuggets in their form, walked a bit with Kay on the trail to the cottage, and finally cut away from her that he might test quartzman and find Kenning at the new development—some short-cuts, driving deep into the earth upon a broad front, far from the hot trail pit which McKenzie Joe had dug, over against the slope, in the forest. "Waiter, I can't eat this steak. It's as tough as leather."

"Sorry, sir, I can't. You've lost the gravy."

"Well," Kay announced, "if you had, I'd have built a fire."

"Yes?"

"After all the lasting I did, to get Jack to take your advice."

"That would have been a hot one, wouldn't it?" Jack Hammond hastily realized that he was speaking. He still could remember little but that pan of gravel as repeated washings slowly carried away the dross and left behind only the heavy nodules of golden plasma. "If we'd gassed away that load—and then this crooked Englund outfit had come along and made a find—"

"Not much danger of that," Kenning answered. "I told you in the beginning that they never found the work it. Three years from now, we'll be able to buy back any land we sell them at our own price—if we want it."

"And the problem is?" Kay broke in, "to find something they don't want—" She leaned again to the window. "Looking for me, Miss Carson?" she called. The maid of all work came toward the lodge. "Tea's about ready, Miss Kay," she announced.

"Thanks, I'll walk up with you." She turned, at the door. "Good night, Jack."

"Oh — good night, Kay — good night."

"Aren't you going to kiss me?" He dropped the bundle of papers that he held and kissed her.

"That good's made an idiot of you," Kenning's hands clenched. "Gee, Kay! We've found it!"

"Put all the good in your head," she protested.

"That's it." he said humbly. "I'll give in, orders. I'm home—I'll tell you how to be happy. You can't—you mustn't—that drink has done for me. Dearest!"

Laughing, she pushed him away. "I've to get tea," she answered, and calling good-night to the engineers, hurried into the cottage. Mrs. Carson, Hammond walched her until she was lost in the twilight of the trees.

"Kay's been swell about not wanting to marry me until I became a big money," he said brusquely, as he rejoined Kenning. "I ought to be able to get a job for other ladies—just these Leon creek claims."

"Don't talk that way," Kenning protested. "It's just that I'm—I'm—"

"Mr. Kenning wants you up there at the bunch shed!" he exclaimed, "Something's happened. I've been rough to summon Kay. Then with her hesitation and gentle protest, he led to the upper diggings. Kenning was extremely impatient, awaiting them. "Don't tell him it was me reported it," he said bluntly. "It's against every rule I've figured. It's just that I can't sit."

He extended an clutched hands toward the fire. Kay gave a half scream and moved forward, Hammond caught her. Then the two palms were heaped with yellow gold. He cast sand of deep gravel still clung to the hollows of them.

"The gravel's choked with them!" Kenning cried. "Hammond, you've just stared at the yellow rumble.

"How did it get there?" he asked. "Is there more like this? Has some one been salted earth for—"

"Jack, you're crazy!" answered Kenning. "But there's gravel between."

"Certainly. You can find gravel almost anywhere. But for gold it to be there it must have come from the hills. We've not anywhere near bed rock! Kenning answered.

"You mean—" Kay suggested.

Brows knotted. "Well, that's—he began.

"I guess everybody's nervous," Hammond cut in. He wiped the sand of a hand across his wet forehead. "We've found it—here. Where we expected it to be. Kenning, I'm sorry I—I'm glad for you both. Good-night, Kay. Don't think I'm crazy. But are you sure? Are you home at night—"

The men nodded toward the gaping cabin.

"Get down there and shovel out a pocket and see for yourself," he ordered.

They were in Jack's cabin. Hammond was still shaken from the excitement of finding the gold. Kenning had never through a tin box which he had brought down from the claim. Hammond Shorter had taken a handful of gravel from its hiding place and brought down from the cabin. OUR COMMUNITY MOURNS

A dreadful accident happened on Sunday afternoon when Fred Ditto, youngest son of Mr. A.S. Ditto, was found unconscious at the home of Mr. V.A. Lyle as a result of a gunshot wound. There were no eye witnesses to the tragedy, and it is presumed that, owing to the very slippery barn floor where he was found, caused him to stumble, discharging the gun.

The entire community is shadowed in grief, and the deepest sympathy is conveyed to the sorrowing parents, brother and sister who mourn.

Fred enjoyed the respect of everyone who knew him. His courteous manner and kindly disposition marked him as one of our most promising youths.

The funeral held at the Roman Catholic church, was largely attended testifying to the respect in which he was held.

The C.O.F., of which the deceased was a member, contributed to the graveside service.

He leaves to mourn his passing, his parents Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Ditto, brother John, of Alix, and sister Agnes of Edmonton. Interment was made in the family plot of Alix cemetery. Fred Ditto was born in Alix on Sept. 17, 1916, and was in his 23rd year.

Our fellow-citizen, Mr. J. Caliento, has received a letter from the CFUN at Calgary, thanking the members of the Ladies' Club for their generous support. The writer explained that owing to the generous response it was timeous to the public to send over the air the great volume of names solicited and that part of the program had to be dropped. However, they wish to inform the public that 1,400 people were fed on Christmas day. That was the main idea and it was a decided success.

On Jan. 6th the members of the Gay 40 to 60 B-ridge Club met at the home of Mrs. C. Pinsell and a delightful time was spent playing Bridge. A SHOWER

South-west of town on January 16, a shower was held for Miss Ivon Thomas, when a beautiful and useful gifts were received by Miss Thomas from the hundred people in attendance showing the high esteem in which the popular young people are held in this district.

In the early part of the evening the guests were entertained by a short program of community singing, musical selections by Misses. Allyn Mann, Bill Goodenough and Miss Nilsen; solos by Miss Mable Gunselman and Mr. Clare Thomas, a tap dance by Misses Nola Todd and Janet Tallman.

A mock wedding topped the program. To the musical strains of the Battle March Miss A. McDermott entered on the arm of her father followed by the flower girl, Miss Merle McDermand and Dorothy Mann. Under the wedding arch Mr. McDermand gave his daughter's hand to the groom Mr. L. Waddy. The mock ceremony was officiated by Rev. Allyn Mann in a very comical way.

After this program an enjoyable hour was spent while the bride to be was opening the gifts. After which the couple thanked the donors in a capable manner with a few selected words. Lunch was served and dancing to music played by Messrs. R. Rouse and D. Thomas continued into the small hours of the morning.

The Great Western Problem

What is generally referred to as the great Canadian agricultural problem, that of ensuring a reasonable recompense to the sturdy growers of the western provinces for their labors has been very much to the fore during the past few months in view of the low prices which have prevailed in the open market for bread cereals and which, if some calculations are correct, are likely to continue for some time to come.

The best for the production of cereals at low prices is based on statistics which show a strong tendency on the part of the farmers to increase production, not only in Western Canada but in the other major wheat exporting countries, the United States and Australia and the ever-increasing trend of consumptive markets, represented by the increasingly successful efforts of many of the former purchasing countries to make themselves self-sustaining and diminishing population in most of the other customer territories as well as a tendency to substitute other foods for bread (potatoes and their derivative products).

Thus increasing production on the one hand and declining consumption on the other threaten the continued existence of the wheat grower in the new big producing countries who are dependent for the price they receive upon wide open world markets in which the law of supply and demand is the sole governing price factor.

* * * *

A Wheat Era For Future

The word "existence" is used for it is obvious, in the light of these facts that unless some definite and perhaps drastic action is taken to check and cope with the situation, the wheat growers of the customer countries must continue to produce indefinitely without driving themselves out of business, for it is axiomatic that the business can continue to operate at a loss without running into the ditch.

That the threat is a very real one was recently made quite clear by C. W. Peterson, editor of the Farm and Ranch Review of Calgary, Alta., when he pointed out that wheat consumption and world population figures have rather startling figures when he said that in that period the big four wheat producing and exporting countries "have increased acreage by 240 per cent. and have doubled their area sown to wheat from seven to 63 million acres."

In the light of these figures one is almost afraid to speculate what is likely to happen to wheat prices in the event of anything like a bumper crop year for the greater part of the wheat acreage in those four countries with consumption and population in customer countries on the downward trend.

It is not surprising that Mr. Peterson should have sounded an alarm in caution tones and insisted that some steps to stem the impending disaster be taken if the farmers of Western Canada are not to be allowed to "slip into the slum conditions that mark the peasants of Europe, who do not earn a living but just eke out existence from the land."

* * * *

Some Proposals Considered

It will be urged, of course, that membership is being done by way of government subsidy to prevent a cataclysm, insofar as the Western Canadian former is concerned the government, through the Canadian Wheat Board, hearing out a fixed minimum price of 90 cents a bushel, No. 1 Northern, basis Port William.

It may be well argued that this is a proper course, since the government is affording protection to the Eastern Canadian population through tariff measures. On the other hand there is no gainsaying the justice of a parental protection for the western farmer is to be a permanent one and, as pointed out by Mr. Peterson, it is a policy which may obtain for an indefinite time, as he considers, it is likely to encourage increased production, leading to further depress world wheat prices and increase the cost of protection to the country at large.

Many suggestions have been made to meet this grave outlook. These include agricultural diversification, finding new uses for the wheat, including the utilization of by-products of wheat, finding new markets for wheat, stimulating increased consumption of wheat domestically and in customer countries and exporting wheat into more attractive products.

All of these measures, where feasible, would undoubtedly be of some assistance, but whether alone they are sufficient to overcome the adverse thing is questionable and it has remained for Mr. Peterson to suggest that the time has arrived when the producers of the four big exporting countries, through their governments should get together with the avowed object of determining the price at which wheat shall be sold in the open world markets. It is true that a similar effort made a few years ago fell through when the American broke its quota agreement but, as Mr. Peterson says, there were extenuating circumstances at that time.

Many the four countries exporting countries are responsible for 86 per cent. of the wheat thrown on the open market, Mr. Peterson's plan may be feasible and is at least worthy of some consideration.

According To Expert Opinion

There Is No Such Thing As 100 Per Cent. Pure Race

There is no such thing as a "pure race", Historians tell per cent. Aryan idea is non-existent, nor it is possible to speak of a "pure Jewish race".

These facts come from a professor of anthropology, which the distinguished study of men and mankind, both in the past and present. He is Prof. F. G. Richards, assistant director of the Royal Ontario Museum of Archaeology, Toronto.

"The hooked nose commonly spoken of as the Hebraic nose isn't really Jewish at all. He carried illustrations, to my knowledge, in many Christian carvings. At some time there must have been inter-marriage between the Hittites and the "brown race" somewhere in Asia Minor, to which the Hebrew religious group belonged," explained Prof. McDevitt.

To this "brown race" belong all the Semitic peoples, including the southern Europe and north Africa.

Before this strength of the Aryan groups, the Hebrews probably looked much like the Palestine Arabs of today," he added.

Anthropologists are inclined to scoff when they report upon long theories of racial superiority or inferiority. If some racial fanatics did not follow up their theories with such extreme action their ideas would be almost amusing. In time the study the racial theory of mankind. Here is the reason:

"The most common perception seems to that of one time there were several "pure" races in the world, each with its own characteristics; and that while intermingling has long caused mixture, their original races still exist in their "pure" form.

"More likely just the opposite is true," declares Prof. McDevitt. "Instead of being composed of several different types man is essentially a biological unity. There can be no pure types because of the climatic characteristic groups have simply grown out of this unity by specialization."

* * * *

Both these processes, mixture and specialization, are constantly taking place at the same time. Anthropologists admit it might be difficult to prove whether the first men on earth started out all of a kind, or in varied groups.

"But this constant shifting and mixing of the human stock is going on for perhaps 60,000 or 70,000 years, so it is futile to pretend that anything like a "pure" race still exists, if ever there were any," Prof. McDevitt stated.

Incendiary Bombs

Says Large Numbers Can Reduce Any Town Burned

A large bomber can carry 2,000 incendiary bombs of the new "silvisterine" type and release 20 per second, each starting a fire over a wide area, it was declared at a meeting in London of the Society of Chemical Industry by Arthur Ralph Ackery, chemical engineer in the air raids precautions department of the home office.

Twenty bombs released each second at a height of 5,000 feet over a target measuring 3 by 2 miles, he said, bags might be able to start a fire over 60 or 70 per cent. of every such target. Fires grow off jets of flame throwing magnesium as far as 50 feet, and temperatures of 2,000 or 30 minutes.

Two Women Teachers Carry On Work In Hebrides

Two women in the Hebrides have the loneliest teaching posts in Britain, says Miss Dolly Smith in recently taken up a post at Ardvey in Lewis, 18 miles across trackless moors from the nearest village. Hitcher is often cut off from the rest of the Hebrides for days at a time by wireless telephone from Monarch light-house is the only means of communication.

The first aeroplane flight in America was made at San Diego, Calif., in 1911.

Air Supremacy

Say Great Britain Is Bent On Attaining This End

If Great Britain is bent on attaining commercial supremacy in the air, as announced in London, the eagles have an uphill fight fraught with international politics and complicated by the assumption of commercial control.

Captain Harold Balfour, under secretary for air, declared Sir Kingsley Wood, secretary for air, was aiming at "world supremacy for British aviation."

Examination of the world trade route shows, by big commercial airplane standards, that Britain occupies a very lucky among European and colonial fields for transport companies, is associated intimately with considerations of military defense.

Where commercial aeroplanes liner air trade and establish bases, railway planes can follow.

But while a "brown race" belongs to the Mediterranean and northern Europe and north Africa.

Before this strength of the Aryan groups, the Hebrews probably looked much like the Palestine Arabs of today," he added.

THE ENGLISHMAN'S DILEMMA

A very significant sentence is used in Beverley Baxter's Letter to Maclean's Magazine in Jan. 14th edition. The article is on the subject "Will Britain Adopt Conscription?" Mr. Chamberlain is side-stepping the issue. He wants to see recruiting done on a voluntary basis. The recruiting for the army is not satisfactory and is lagging to the great anxiety of those who are responsible for building up this branch of the service. Opinion is divided. Premier Chamberlain has asserted that there will be no conscription during the life of the present parliament, and he is the boss. He does not want this question injected in the next election as a subject for the people to vote on, because, as Baxter affirms it would give the Socialists, or Labor party, a good axe to swing at the present National Government in that "the country would demand conscription of wealth if they introduced conscription of human life."

As the present Imperial Government is none too sure of winning the next election they are reluctant to supply their opponents with ammunition to use against them in the next campaign.

The idea of conscripting wealth is a subject of horror to a certain influential class in England. Even Chamberlain, who has built up a considerable fortune out of making sewerpails, would hesitate about parting with it. What would the upper class Englishman do, or he, without his material wealth to uphold his position? While they freely recognize the danger the country is in, they do not want to make the necessary sacrifice in parting with their pounds sterling.

Any man who can solve this problem for the Englishman will be regarded as a savior indeed.

BUSINESS CONDITIONS

Business is quiet; too quiet One of the contributing causes is the underlying threat of war. If that threat were removed commerce would flow in natural channels and more a feeling of confidence that are now lying in warehouses in the dusty line alone Canada has been over 2 million pounds better piled up. This would all move out if obstructions were removed from trade. There are countries in Europe crying for the very goods we have to dispose of but cannot, because of the obstructions are spending money like drunken sailors in an effort to get ready for war.

We need more population and could easily get it, but there is no money for anything except preparations for war. Money is needed for development purposes all over Canada, but all we can spare is being poured into national red hole popularity called war.

War, War, War, that's all we can think of, and all our resources and men are being utilized to frustrate the greed of dictators. If war is inevitable let's get on the job. Everybody, why not now?

OLDEST NEWSPAPER IN THE WORLD

Peiping Bao, the oldest newspaper in the world, which has been appearing for 1,500 years, has just been suppressed. This newspaper was founded in 400 A.D. by Sou-Choung, and was printed up to the time of its disappearance with wooden type.

In the course of centuries 1,500 editors of the Peiping Bao have been beheaded.

After the occupation of Peking, the Japanese banned this paper. Then they allowed it to appear once more, but the Peiping Bao remained faithful to its ancient traditions they have now suppressed it once and for all.—World Review.

The Duties Of Citizenship

With daily newspapers in the west publishing talk on economics, the stirring of changes that matters governments are attempting to make the central government at Ottawa on some of their powers and the production of innumerable metal, political and economic cults and "issues" all over the country, the outlook for Dominion unity and stability is not at the first of it, appear very bright.

Just how seriously these alarms and excursions should be regarded is somewhat difficult to diagnose and what they portend for the future of this country and its people is not easy to decide, but if straws show which way the wind is blowing, it would appear that the time is dawning nigh for a spiritual renaissance if Canada is to maintain the solidarity on which it was founded and the happiness and future welfare of her people are to be assured.

Generally speaking, the majority of the people of all parts of this Dominion have expressed a desire, wherever they have been given an opportunity of indicating their views at the polls and through their representatives in Parliament assembled, that the fundamentals of our democratic management and undivided the birthright which have been handed down to them through British history and handed on to them through the fathers of Confederation.

* * * *

Happy Canada Observes

Sometimes, however, one is tempted to fear that there are signs of a weakening in the faith and courage which dominated the people of this country when it was first settled and when they were enabled them to make progress despite the slings and arrows of misfortune and in the face of temporary setbacks and difficulties.

If this is the case, indeed, there is a need for reinvigorating of that spirit in which Sir Anthony Eden referred in his recent broadcast from New York when he announced to this continent that the people of Great Britain some what may intend to stand firm on the rock of democracy and without selling for world aid.

That there are differences of opinion, even on questions of major policy, in this country as elsewhere, is to be expected and even encouraged, for of such is the very essence of democracy; that such differences of opinion should be brought into the open and thoroughly debated is highly desirable. For that also is the way the manual of the democratic spirit, but once the great majority have spoken their mind, their decision should be respected and observed, at least until such time as minority doctrine may have become the supreme law of the country.

Th danger signals being set, however, when too many people forget that democratic rule entails individual responsibility and that when there is a demand for appreciable assistance to forget or ignore their obligations to the state the rule of the state becoming omnipotent is enhanced and that time the day is drawing when a minority or an individual may make the state a component and expose a dictatorship.

* * * *

Dangerous Responsibility

It has been laid down as axiomatic that the people get the kind of government they deserve. It might be well said that sometimes people now better governed than they deserve, but such a condition could not last very long in a day and generation which values the right to democratic self-government and work day and night to prove their objectives. If a substantial portion of the present political ills remains inefficient in the communal nation.

And there are signs of a dangerous trend in this direction when an increasing number of people refrain from exercising their franchise in national and provincial and municipal elections. If people should adopt the attitude towards their own affairs they should not be surprised if their rights and privileges, including even those privileges of freedom of speech, freedom of worship and freedom of assembly are snatched from them. The attitude of "let George do it," if persisted in, will ultimately result in letting it actually or probably in a manner which will be highly detrimental to the great majority.

In a democracy what is required for the preservation of a united democracy amid a nation with it not only strength to face dangers from without, but also to maintain those rights which have been inherited and established it time at the price that has been paid for them, is a responsible state in mental individual obligation.

The state can be brought about by an educational program which should be waged not only among the rising generation in the schools and educational institutions of the land, but also among adults who may have been inducted into the false belief that they can ignore the duties of citizenship and still retain the privileges which have come to be taken for granted, even on the air that is breathed and the water that is drunk.

Along with the enshrinement of "citizenship", children in the schools and adults outside of them should be reminded incessantly that a treaty peace of individual responsibility is essential if the form of government they now enjoy is to be preserved, and that the greater this recognition the more surely perfect will administration become.

Without a quickening sense of personal responsibility on the part ill the people democracy is nonsense or later doomed.

Something Quite Different

Polish-style Premium To Shower Very Popular In England

An overpopulation problem is a land of cyclists and pedestrians and the number of people who take their regular exercise in both manners and unfortunately, are a great deal of them, enjoy beautiful country in addition into many thousands.

But the peculiar premium is supplied the cyclist if adverse estimates of the rate of Wilfred Pontius are considered.

For the information of the unlimited, Wilfred Pontius is the name which the British cycle trade has conferred upon the inventor of the cycle family a relatively inexpensive, light and cheap-to-operate pedal-cycle which does not reach 30 miles an hour and can do 20 miles on a gallon of gasoline.

Wilfred is different. Even if something de a happen to him mechanism he is not likely to push or to pedal and he is so cheap to buy and is in real fact so economical to run that he made a great hit at the cycl. shows. Just think, one of Wilfred's riders can pootle at will through the streets or along the highways at a speed of 20 or 30 miles an hour, and the cost of such agreeable transportation is less than three a farthing for the mile!

Unless we are mistaken Wilfred has a higher cycle in Britain but probably in North America as well. Certainly there are no 30 miles an hour pootlers in the United Kingdom before mid-summer, the manufacturers of the new machine are confident in expect a few Wilfreds to this country, or at least, to permit Canadian firms to manufacture Wilfreds under license and then the pootler will become an international figure

Who wouldn't be a pootler when pootling covers so much ground at such slight expense?

Sir Charles Gordon Urges United Front for Canadians

BANK OF MONTREAL'S 121st ANNUAL MEETING

Bankers Review Economic Situation—Loans Show Increase —Hopeful View of Business Outlook Expressed

Depressing financial situation and inflationary energy surrounding Sir Charles Gordon of the Bank of Montreal urged his countrymen to face with a united front the grave issues the hour has to unfold for them, in his address to the annual meeting of the bank's shareholders in Montreal.

In his characteristic manner, touching economic questions among 1938 Sir Charles first particularly with that part of the international and financial situation in the light of the present hard situation. He spoke with very satisfaction of the study existing between the United States and United States but departed the meaning of phenomena between Canada as in the and West.

What he added, are one grave hazard connected with the trade treaties and arrangements which the government has entered into, namely that of over 17 million dollars, with total amount at $974,000,000, the highest since the peak year of 1930.

Profits, he said, are not bound, the gross earnings observed "This is highly satisfactory development While, for either legal or sound trade reasons, expansion of our home cannot be greatly, every application to extend such activities should be carefully considered in order to avoid undue expansion in view of possible and responsibilities that greatly to bring to the bank may at times lead to misunderstandings but he added which is contrary to the basic principles of commercial banking would be in harmony with our idea of the responsibility which we owe to our depositors.

Business Conditions

Sir Charles in discussing business in Canada characterizes the past year as "unsatisfactory," he has in view the conditions which have prevailed in our country.

Most of our industries, he said, have been working at less than full capacity and unemployment has been severe in some lines. This has been offset largely by other directions with the marked activity of mining contributed in some measure to imperial measures to the welfare of many subsidiary enterprises from coast to coast."

General Manager's Address

Mr. Pitcher on behalf of himself and his fellow general managers, Mr. Dodds, jrm said one of the strongest financial statements in the bank's history showing increases in all the principal items. He spoke in terms to Canadian business firm's and particularly to the farmers of the west. He said that the bank was in a position to finance any legitimate business that may present itself.

Has Many Advantages

Radio Tele-Type Device Guest Aid By Police Force

Telegraphic Image Sent Almost Instantaneously

The successful test of apparatus and equipment to send and receive printed messages by radio on a major scale which will be developed to such a degree of efficiency.

Advantages of the new system are many, it is claimed.

1. Security. Criminals have been known to escape capture because they were tipped in advance by friends. No code system messages can be sent which will be understood except by those in the proper frequency.

2. Speed. All material would be received in the office of the police and sheriff's offices and the system is practically instantaneous. Even if more complete records as it would avoid the present system of repeating messages by telephone.

3. Simplicity. Heavy machinery would be unnecessary. Material would instantly turn on when the broadcast started, regardless of whether there was an attendant. The message would be received in typed form. The police officer would then automatically turn off the receiver at completion of the message. In this way every station would receive a reception of the message.

Under the system an operator sits at an electrically operated typewriter and types off the message to be sent. The tape is inserted in the transmitter, which is turned on and automatically completes transmission of the message at a rate of about 60 words a minute. The receiving machine turns on automatically and receives the message in typewritten form on a tape. At the receiving device is small and is readily installed in patrol cars.

Empire Unity

Ardent Imperialist Announces Formation Of League

Thos Fenton, well-known Canadian and ardent imperialist, announced formation of the Empire Unity League, designed to maintain a united Empire and to combat "propaganda about the decadence of the Empire."

His league is launching an immediate drive for 100,000 ($467,000) which will be devoted to building up Empire unity and defense and to terms of counter-propaganda on the strength of the Empire.

Mr. Fulden, editor of the Empire and Mail and Imperial Review, in director general of the league. He says it is aimed chiefly to meet "malicious propaganda" which he charges the totalitarian states are issuing about the decadence of the British Empire and to uphold the principles of democracy.

For the first time in his life, Jack heard Kay scream. Then she began to sags, her clenched hands extended, her features drawn out in with

"Shall I give you the hours, days and dates? And perhaps you mean out at night and for the exercise? In your pajamas?"

"Jack!" Kay tried appeal. "Are you going to believe this wretched little liar? If you only knew—"

"I know," Jack interrupted. "All you're referring to my life with Lou Sands."

"Kay," the man interrupted dangerously, "has all this been just a game with you? Have I been a fool? Has she staggering to his feet after unconsciousness. "You've been juggling me—you've been fooled us utterly me? Just holding me at arm's length—"

"Men are easier to handle that way," Jeanne suggested.

"You should know!" Kay was pacing. Her eyes glazed: her usually smooth hair in disorder.

"I couldn't help watching you."

"Then you should have helped me."

"Think what you please, both of you!" she snapped. "If her word means more to you—go ahead—I only don't come to me with it." A sob choked her voice for the first time. "Thank God for one thing, I won't have you proving me a liar in court."

"Court!"

"Don't speak to me! she shot at him. "You've put your own interests, your house inside you—ruin to hurt me. Well, I'll show you!"

"And you'll show Jeanne Dumont, Jeanne jealous.

"You've cooked it up—every word of it."

"Then why do you admit it?" The Northern Light's voice was cold. She faced the scoundrel. "Call out Mrs. Hammer. Have her on either side. Then you'll be afraid to answer questions. She'll tell you how many times she's been out with Bruce Kenning."

"Don't tell her that," the snapped at last. "And what are you going to do about it?"

"Ask her," the door slammed. Jack and Jeanne stood alone in the deepening night.

"I'm going to find Bruce Kenning," he said abruptly. "This time I'd better see him alone."

She hugged him to wait for morning; Jack countered with hastily framed excuses. At last he was alone, moving through the shadows toward Kenning's Jack's last check, prepared

"Don't Hurt Me," He Begged. "I'm Not Kenning."

It was easy to reconstruct the rest of the gangster's movements from Jeanne's taciturnity and his deaths for them. Kenning evidently knew his danger. Jeanne's car was there to pull out and go on once relations with Hammer were severed. Kenning to Jos had gone. And Bruce Kenning had continued, surreptitiously, to keep every scrap of evidence concerning and prological experience had in his safe deposit box.

Then, with the inner had discovered, a quantity of screwed ground Jeanne's car, the scoundrel had left the house, and Jack had washed that enough had been covered with gold. And upon the two dead they found the key to their money than ever before. It is amazing to contrast newspapers of to-day with those of 20 or even 10 years ago.

In three or four days $200,000 was raised in Bugland for the Czechs.

A Chance Experiment

Brought Nice Haul Of Trout To Cornwall Engineer

A chance experiment made four years ago has brought a handsome and profitable industry to Cornwall and extended its out fower season from three to six months. Travelling in France in 1934, A Cornish resident was so impressed with the beauty of the public markets which he visited that he conceived the idea that winter months that he brought back some of the variety De Lisle and popular fish to his native land. Upon his return to Cornwall he began to experiment with the mild Cornish climate as to the suitability of growing some fish and soon became were on one way to Cornwall Garden, London's county Bower market, where they found a popular swing to the excellent way they had fish obtained arranged and increased and so began the new Cornish industry of Artemone gourmet.

To-day numerous farms cluster on surrounding land in the district and spots along the Devon and Cornish coast in Cornwall alone there are over 1 000 growers which the acreage under cultivation has increased from 80 to 400 acres in the seven years. This year the numerous traffic promises to beat all records for the number of fish sent away and at the end of last month, over six tons, representing 600 cases, were arrived at Paddington Station, London, en route for the London Market Stands Then he went on to the Cornish Riviera to meet the Cornish Express at Plymouth, and there he was met by a number of the Cornish growers. Among the leather mask, he noticed one of the Cornishmen. Then two more. Kenning was not there. At last the lights of Penzance loomed.

Bequest Has Been Lost

Will Dated 43 Years Ago Has Just Been Found

A will last 41 years ago has just been found in the probate office at Whole fund of wounds bequeathed in the will is still intact, and so comes to light a most unusual bequest.

The story of a lost testament dates from the testator's death but is revealed in a letter from Lake Dalmeny Lobelle Company, to the Rock Shipping Company, Montreal. The writer in Paul Dubuc, who says that he has found the name of the man whose will has just been found.

The letter reads in part as follows:

"Since you are shipbrokers, would you have the goodness to tell us if there is still any fund accompanying the French White Fleet ships that came into the St. Lawrence River in the last century?

"I have found a last will that had been robbed from the death bed of my grandfather, Charles Alexander Dubuc in date of Dec. 27, 1897. Grandfather died that same year, and the will was proved on Nov. 30, 1898.

For your own reference, to help in search to discover data for me, I will give you the name of the notary photographs from a document that was registered at the Superior Court of Quebec:

"Charles Alexander Dubuc emigrated to Canada as a wine merchant. He is the owner of the French White Fleet ships that used to be loaded at Bordeaux and Marseilles. He arrived at Paddington Station, London, en route for the London Market Stands Then he went on to the Cornish Riviera to meet the Cornish Express at Plymouth, and there he was met by a number of the Cornish growers. Changes That Japanese Are Squeezing Out Formerly British Interests

Changes that the Japanese are consuming the necessities trade in Manchukuo, according to Dr. Hu Baten American educator connected with the University of Nanking, in a report transmitted to the New York press.

The report says 30,000 persons, one-eighth of the population of Manchuria, have been displaced property by heroin supplied by Japanese-controlled traps and that every month at least 8,000,000 Chinese dollars is being realized in the Nanking area by dope traffickers Nanking, in allied with the Japanese Army.

Dr. Baten based his report on personal research, on observations of outside friends, on statements of dealers in narcotics and on reputations of the Chinese puppet administration in Manchuria. Dr. Baten who is a Professor of History of high reputation, has made a number of other studies on Nanking conditions, including a statement on Japanese-Chinese relations in North China.

His estimate of 30,000 including children, crippled by the insane habit, does not include thousands more addicted to the use of morphine, cocaine and other drugs. Nanking was the strongest of the four trafficking organizations. Nanking was assisted by the Mongol warfare service, of the Japanese Army. The Mongol government is a puppet of the Japanese government.

"Nanking is abandoned," Dr. Baten declared testimony that the troops option companies from Tientsin through Shanghai," had report counties.

Stanley Baldwin Says Empire Must Be Strong For Peace

Great Britain has "recognized" Italy's conquest of Ethiopia.

Premier Chamberlain happens are not compelled to recognize this conquest by the same way it is being realized by the Italian people.

Stanley Baldwin edict at a 74 per cent, tax on capital and real estate in the most revealing news out of the British Empire since the Munich crisis.

Mr. Baldwin announced the decision to be used developing Ethiopia. A tax of 10 per cent. was levied last year.

Ethiopia will have cost Italy 17.5 per cent. of its income, capital and real estate, plus the cost of the Ethiopian campaign and reconstruction. It must be seen able to find. The two years amount to $175,000,000. A huge sum, especially for a destitute nation.—Chatham News.

RADIO-TELEPHONE FOR SHEEPS

This recent picture of Sunshine Lodge, near Banff in the Canadian Rockies, with 16,000-foot Brewster Back and the Grand Divide in the background, shows the masts for the new short-wave radio-telephone station between the lodge and Banff. The new method of communication promises to make the loneliest sheep herder more famous than Bo Peep. Above, Jim Ray Simmons, foreman of the lodge, sends her daily messages from the 5,000-foot ski cabin to Ben Johnson at the switch-board in Banff, 16 miles away.

HITLER'S AIR ARMADA GROWS RAPIDLY

A year ago these giant bombers were merely tracings on the drawing board of the airplane designer, now hundreds of them have been found in various units of the R.A.F. Carrying a crew of seven, these machines have cruising speeds exceeding 200 m.p.h., and were specially built for long-distance flying.

What's "Boucle" ?

PRESENTLY you may have seen the word Bouclé here and there throughout the Canadian country in connection with a fabric of yarn. Do you know what it means?

Well, it's a French word meaning curled. Bouclé yarns are made with little loops that give a soft, rough-nubby appearance to the fabric. Usually these yarns are all-wool but sometimes rayon, silk and cotton mixed with wool is used. Coats made from these are good practical investments.

When the term is applied to women's coat fabrics all-wool fabrics that are used in both the warp and the weaving of the fabric. The nubbed yarn is usually found in higher-priced garments.

Occasionally you may be overcome by the wonderful name appearing in the Catalogue. When you see it you'll be glad to know that we are and that we pay interest on that is a subject concerning the particular fabric under discussion and any salesman I am personally acquainted. Drop always to see you may be sure of our personal attention.

THE NEW APPOINTMENT

The Truths Tribune

The appointment last week of Dan E. U. Campbell, formerly news editor of radio station CFCN at Calgary, as public relations counsel for the Provincial Government, is being regarded as showing that Aberhart, his cabinet and his supporters realize that the Government's past policy of having its members attack the Press and other institutions in an effort to gain publicity apparently has not worked out. Mr. Campbell, an able newspaper man of many years' standing in Alberta, has been among those whom Mr. Aberhart has critized in the past three years, because he reported facts that did not reflect to the Government's credit.

Part of the trouble in the past has been that Premier Aberhart, who has no more conception of what is or isn't newsworthy than a 15-year old school boy, expected and demanded that newspapers print what he wanted regardless of the facts and its news value.

Now, with an experienced newspaper man in Mr. Campbell's post, there is an excellent chance for the public to get Government news that is authentic and factual.

DAIRYMEN PLAN ANNUAL CONVENTION

The Annual Convention of the Alberta Dairymen's Association will be held in the Palliser Hotel, Calgary, on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Feb. 7th 8th and 9th. Arrangements and plans were discussed at a Committee meeting in the Palliser Hotel on Wednesday at which Mr. J.R. Sweeny, Deputy Minister of Agriculture was present.

Among the outstanding speakers at the Convention will be Dr. W. E. Petersen of the Family of Agriculture, University of Minnesota. The Producers' Section will also have on their program Dr. J. F. Booth, head of the Economics Division of the Marketing Service of the Dominion Department of Agriculture and W.C. Cameron, Associate Director of the Dominion Government Service Bureau. Dr. E.G. Hood head of the Dairy Research Division of the Dominion Government, will speak to the Manufacturers' Section. Mr. J. Singleton, Associate Director of Marketing for Canada and Mr. Lorne Gibson, Dairy Commissioner for Manitoba will be present to address the Manufacturer's Section.

Arrangements are being made for one of the largest attendances in the history of the Convention and the programme, both from the point of view of outside and local speakers, ranks in items of practical interest to Producers and Creamery men. A special Ladies' Committee under the chairmanship of Miss Vera Atkinson of the Union Milk Company, is making arrangements to entertain wives of out of town visitors. Luncheons and teas have been arranged for the ladies, and it is expected that they will attend the regular meeting of the Women's Dairymen's Club on Wednesday afternoon.

FARMERS SHORT COURSE FOR ALIX

The Junior U.F.A. are holding a dance in the U.F.A. Hall, on Friday, Jan. 27.

A rock slide at Hedley, B.C., a little mining town in the interior, nearly wiped out the entire village. Two people were killed.

Right here is an illustration in money manipulation that literally "carves you up". It is with the case of the Alix station who borrowed $2,000 in 1919. He paid back $9,000 and still owes $2,000. The money from 1926 were responsible for his being unable to pay.

Weather conditions remain favorable in the Alix district for another week. There has been no extreme either way but we have had some wind that made hats and tool drinks a drag on the market. The weather here is even more changeable at the coast, if reports be true.

HISTLIGHT

The community at large, the Gadsby Lake School District in particular, have lost a veritable "landmark" in the passing last Saturday, after a few days illness, of Edward Bartford Martin. Death was due to heart complication, which, while he had carried on with his work for the last few months, became suddenly acute the previous Monday, an attack from which he could not rally.

In addition to many friends he leaves to mourn him his loving wife, and six daughters, Mrs. Geo. McMillan of Hivrac, Mrs. Herb McAgnes of Alix, Mrs. Carl Jodel of Beaboe and Mrs. Gordon Reuben of Mirror, Ruby and Ella both at home, all of whom were with him at the end. He was born on Ind in 1879 at the age of eleven. Born at Brighton, Ontario, he left in 1891, he married and came to Canada in 1905, where he first settled for a year on the railway in Toronto in 1906 he homesteaded on his present farm where he has lived since. In his early days in this country and for many years he identified himself to the Presbyterian Church, in which he was an Elder, and the services for which he took regularly at the schoolhouse in the district. Later on them at Synod for several years he later years he attended the Anglican Church.

One of his chief interests and concerns was the sch-ool, on the Board almost continuously since the school started, and administered of that time, he attended regularly, where he was a well known figure, and his work for and interest in the local school is not meant a great deal to the district; unfortunately opposed to the principle of the larger School Unit, he retired from Board recently. A considerate, a non-smoker, fond of all games, a good conversationalist, chairman and impromptu speaker, he was the life and soul of many meetings, parties and concerts; the young men of the district will probably always remember his ability in coaching and fielding a baseball, for which he got them the use of a mitt (being as an cricketer). Possessed of the most outstanding trait of his character was his distinctive love to his fellow men, and his loyalty to his friends. Interment took place at the Mirror Cemetery, the services being conducted by the Rev. J. Stewart from the Anglican Church, a very large attendance being on hand pall bearers were Messrs McBride, Walton, Plaister, Ferguson, Stewart and Rogers. Flowers will be widely extended to the bereaved wife and children.

A bulletin recently issued by the Dominion Government warns farmers against feeding their cattle on the road. Most being cheap, the farmers are shoveling the grain to keep with the cattle and they are putting on far too much fat. Fat cattle are all right for fall ships are the best sellers are badly marketed. At over fat beef is utterly ruined for the export market and consequently to the Old Country. Use discretion in the business. The Dominion Government has informed us repeatedly on the best type of bacon hog. Today they are marvelling a lot grain to a few hogs, buy more and sell early in the fall before heavy type. By doing this you will retain the overseas trade, which is the backbone of dollars yearly to the farmers of Canada.

At all Christian Science Churches next Sunday, the subject of the Lesson-Sermon is "Love". The Golden Text is Psalm 36:7. One of the Scriptural citations is "And this commandment have we from him, That he who loveth God love his brother also" (1 John 4:21). One of the correlative citations is "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, is "Adhere to the divine Principal of Christian Science and follow the behests of God, abiding steadfastly in wisdom, Truth and Love" (p. 495).

FOR SURE ALISTS

Graham Lincoln was once shown a picture done by an amateur, and was asked to give his opinion of it.

"I can truthfully say," replied Lincoln, "That the painter of this picture is a very good painter, or is that he observes the Commandments."

"What do you mean by that?" asked someone.

"I mean that he hath not taken to himself the likeness of anything that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth, nearly all of which I could find in Canada."

Projects With Possibilities

If Western Canada is to derive the maximum of benefits from the plans and operations of Ducks Unlimited, whose projects reached the stage of actual field work during the summer just past, close co-operation between and co-ordination of the activities of all departments of the federal and western provincial governments is highly essential.

At the outset of its active career in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, Ducks Unlimited established a close contact with the Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Administration and the two organizations, with a joint objective of conservation of water, but for different reasons, have maintained not only friendly relations but have exchanged information and have collaborated closely in carrying out their respective projects.

This is as it should be but the co-operation and co-ordination with and co-operation of the P.F.R.A. is extended to harmonize with and further promote the activities of the provincial governmental departments, including those devoted to construction and maintenance of highways and those devoted to the administration of game laws and conservation of game and fur, as well as those concerned with agriculture, the development of the natural resources and generally to make many governmental activities which otherwise would very well be tied in with water conservation to the ultimate advantage of all concerned.

A Laudable Ambition

For the benefit of those who may not be very familiar with the scope of operations and ambitions of Ducks Unlimited, it might be appropriate at this stage to say that the primary objective of this organization is to conserve existing breeding and resting grounds for ducks in the northern reaches of the three prairie provinces, to extend them and to develop new ones wherever conservation of water and topographical features lend promise to such an undertaking.

Where such areas are not already game preserves the bird sanctuaries it is proposed, of course, to create in them safe harbourage for game birds and other wild life and the program includes provisions for public hunting grounds where sportsmen who are willing to conform to the laws of wild life conservation within the boundaries of proper control measures may take their pleasure in reason.

A report on the first season's work carried out in the field by Ducks Unlimited reveals that three major projects, one in the each of the three prairie provinces, involving the construction of dams and other appurtenant work have already been completed and these, together with two additional contemplated projects will impound round water acreage and, in spots, the equivalent of a river, "rushes in natural, profitable use, 100,000 acres of water, mouth and upland each area capable of producing 100 ducks" or a total of two million ducks.

Country Under Water

It requires little imagination to sense what such an undertaking may well mean to the people of the province which are co-operating with Ducks Unlimited. It will open up subsidiary industries and provide profitable pastimes for visiting hunters sportsmen and nature lovers from all parts of the continent, provided the necessary steps are taken to let them know that such pleasure and recreation and rest exist and means to make them accessible are furnished.

Such an objective necessarily entails the construction and maintenance of adequate highways coupled with an effective program of publicity by those areas from which tourists with leisure and means can be drawn to enjoy the the available attractions and incidentally, leave some of their good money in these provinces. The latter is a natural and inevitable corollary of the former.

With all governmental departments combining to provide all the necessary facilities to make the most of the site of these projects and all of them which undoubtedly will follow in the future, it is not difficult to foresee that the results may well have a profound and beneficial effect on the economic life of the country.

• • • •

Independent Goodwill

The possibilities for the future are well summed up in the closing paragraph of a report on the activities of the organization in the following words:

"Ducks Unlimited is a co-operative enterprise in sport and conservation of international scope. Its immediate purpose is to restore and increase ducks to an adequate part of a sound development of the continent. Its ultimate results will include the generation of understanding and goodwill throughout the whole continent."

Highway Opening Up Vast Mineral Areas In Manitoba

But for the present, the highway will penetrate the vast mineral area which has been discovered in the Flinflon district, and will open up the country for the development of many years.

Until 50 miles of new road, at the most, are necessary to offer a link guarantee that the trade will benefit from those mineral areas of the future will access to Manitobans, the highway will open new road. Northern Mail, The Pas.

Indians Going Modern

B.C. Braves Using Standard To Indicate Old Custom Cold

The Indian of the Cariboo is going modern.

Out at Canim Lake, an Indian village 70 miles east of Williams Lake, B.C., the Braves hunting teams used arrows to humbler their pine-log shacks against the rigors of the northern winter.

The cabins are fitted inside with a glossy partition which dates to the log wall leaving just enough space into which they pack the pungent dust.

This idea developed when the Indians heard of the white man utilizing sawdust as fuel. The braves couldn't imagine how such a new sensation plus was born. Canadian Press.

Always A Hard Worker

Anthony Ed a Thorough Is Anything He May Undertake

About a decade ago Anthony Eden was referred to as "that terrible young man with curly hair." Now he has earned a Military Cross in finding out what was wrong during the war, and he knows against obstacles how fully gratified he personally must be that Lord Cecil and he started the pacifying influence of the League of Nations. He showed in a natural way his sympathetic and dignity of his own country but it was paved with by happy hopes by European civilization. Religion Of A Scientist

Two Will Defend An Atheistic Attitude On The Problem Of Mankind

Few scientists of to-day will defend an atheistic attitude on the evolution of mankind, according to Dr Arthur Compton, Chicago nobel Physics professor and Nobel prize winner

In an address in New York on the Religion of a Scientist", Dr. Compton said that "we have learned more about the world, the probability of its having resulted by chance processes become more and more remote."

The world is still in the early stages of evolution and in this development he probably will take over from God presumably the direction of life on earth, the Chicago scientist said.

"Life in God may be a thoroughly scientific attitude, Dr Compton declared, even though it be not possible to establish the correctness of the belief

Such a faith is presumably based on the experience that the hypothesis of God gives a more reasonable interpretation of the world than any other," he said.

Analyzing the present stage of evolution Dr Compton said man is now master of the world built on earth and to a large extent even the means of controlling his own evolution.

"Evidently the responsibility is largely shifted by God to human shoulders. As science advances it seems inevitable that this responsibility will approach completeness," he said.

One Of Deadliest Weapons

Motor Car Improperly Handled Can Be Untold Damage

Many motorists are now the deadly nature of the weapon in their charge when carelessly handled. The motor car is itself is foolproof, properly cared for. The trouble, when there is trouble, usually is due to the hand back of the wheel.

"Canadian Underwriter", which notes much of a recent issue to highway accidents, prints this: "Sagacious many fatal accidents when crashes into a solid object at 60 miles per hour neither the cause flows of speed that the would if it is driven off the road of a 15-story building.

No sane motorist would drive off a 15-story building. How many "going do" crashes the danger?

A car going 60 represents nine times the energy of one going 20 miles an hour. It takes nine times as hard to stop. Crowds also times the far before stopping, hits any object that happens to be in its path, and brings death and stone as often.

The insurance journal also offers this for thought: At 20 miles per hour, according to the law of averages, there is one death in 61 accidents; at 30 to 39 miles, one death in 43; at 50 to 59 miles, one in 25 accidents; over 60, one in 14.

Cabot Follows Old Custom

One of the oldest and most widespread usages of colour connects a specific one with each of the four points of the compass. Broadly north is white, east is yellow, south red and west black. In many parts of the Orient this colour custom still is followed in the painting of city gates that face squarely in these directions.

He did not find the man Gamebreaker merely stared at his questions or said they hadn't seen him Hammond took it for what it was worth; a good gunsmith leaves his customers alone.

Then he found him, in Dime Novel Alley. He came in like a fire alarm. That guy's nuts on revolvers. He couldn't get in the lathe fast enough. Had a lot of gold on him, Hammy lets like a crazy man.

"What for?"

Asked the World Afraid pressed him.

"Am I running a charity bazaar?" she queried. Answering her own question, "Come to think of it, I guess I am. He didn't make a good bet all night. Finally began getting drunk on Hick. Say," she exclaimed, "he was into me for ten thousand berries. Of harmonet money before I could tell him I didn't lend to gamblers. I'm glad I got that. That chance I've got to get it back."

"Oh, he can pay it. He's got the money."

"Yah!" Annie became more heated. "You know, I've been wondering if it wasn't a gag. This little rat of a Lew Sands comes in just when we're arguing—

"I thought he worked for you."

"Thanks for old. I fired him after standing. Tonight, he was all excited. He rushed up to Hammy and whispered something, and Hammy started to hoot it. But I wouldn't let him. I'm not running any crooked shop. He's going to get his money out of his bank in the morning, sure, he let us that as to borrow—"

Hammond changed the subject.

"You don't happen to know where Lew Sands lives?"

Annoyed the World Annie sneered at the question.

"What, now, let's see if I can tell you how to get there. Take a left hand fork at the left after you've just flung Lucas Dugdale's" A hard look at Hammond's face and Annie changed her tone.

Hills cabin set deep in the forest. Pat laid the bench, the bed, the bedding yet unstained. The door had opened, revealing Lew Sands who paused to say something to a remaining occupant, then hurried out along the trail. Hammond could have touched him as he passed. Jack waited long minutes after that. Then he moved slowly cautiously. Then he tangled underbrush until he could look into the cabin. The first emergence seemed him, he ran for the door.

A kick and it flew open. Across the room, white-faced, hastily pulling a shirt over a mass of fur and defense, was Bruce Kenning.

There was a moment of glower ing hatred. Hammond broken under the pressure of anxiety. His hands had tightened involuntarily. Then Jack Hammond found the man in his hazy shoulders. His head set a peculiar forward attitude brows low-red over watchful eyes, his mouth a thin line.

Suddenly he dodged. A queer cry had come from Kenning's throat, as Jack Hammond had broken under the pressure of anxiety. His hands had tightened involuntarily. CONDENSERY RAISES MILK PRICE TWO CENTS

On February 1 the Central Alberta Dairy Pool condensery will step up its milk price two cents per pound butterfat. This will be the third rise in the price since November and is justified by the increased demand for the condensery product. More fresh milk could be used by the condensery to advantage, and with the new increase in price, shippers will have no excuse not to ship their whole milk. The Pool shippers have stood by their condensery through difficult times when they received practically nothing for the skim milk value in their milk. Now they will give them a reasonable return. The prospects for the condensery are distinctly encouraging and the loyal support given by both milk and cream shippers to their Pool is proving a valuable factor in developing this new industry in Central Alberta.—Red Deer Advocate.

GOVERNMENT RELIEF

Approximately 1,000 persons with in Alberta received relief amounting to $20,000 during the month of June 1937 in. The 71,000 persons included families and single homeless unemployed who applied for and received relief. The grant ranged in kind and cash relief according to agriculture and farm settlement projects. The cost of administering this work was $161,429.00 or nearly $20 per cent of the total.

In addition to relief included in these figures, certain work programs were undertaken and provided wages in lieu of relief. Under these projects 2,155 families, representing 10,774 persons, earned an average of $66.00 per family. These families were off relief while they were working but were given further assistance if need if they needed it. These persons, who would otherwise have applied for relief had it not been for the work programs, purchased 32,300 railway ties for $16,150.00 and produced 4,900 telephone poles 250 120 linear feet of fencing and posts and rails, and 4,300,000 board feet of manufactured lumber and shingles. The sale of the material did not interfere in any way with Alberta markets because the railway ties were for use in other parts of Canada and the telephone poles and lumber provided, from wood sources, materials which would have been imported had the work programs not been undertaken.

The relief costs for maintenance of transient families, who are a charge of the Provincial Government, could be cut virtually in half if these families could be placed on the land. A recent survey shows that the Government has at its disposal approximately 5,000 farm homes of which 200 are now available and in good shape. There are 200 transient families in Provincial relief. Of these 166 are in Edmonton 200 in Calgary and 314 elsewhere throughout the Province.

Vocational training and instruction in the manufacture of rugs, mats, basket, and other household fixtures was given to 180 families in Edmonton. The furniture made by these families will be used by other families under our relief system. Other activities of work will be sold and all the money received will be distributed among the families responsible for their manufacture.

A total of about 2000 single homeless men, many of whom are not a responsibility of the Alberta Government, were given work under a Dominion-Provincial program. Each government contributed 50 per cent of this cost but the work was found and administered by the Provincial Government. It operated from April 1st to July 31st, 1937, at which time the Dominion withdrew its assistance. The average cost of the work was $60.00 per man per month. Each man was given a portion of his earnings during the term of his employment but a large section was retained by the government and was later made available to him in monthly instalments payable at any point in western Canada.

Under the Dominion-Provincial Farm Placement Plan 4,113 single homeless men were placed on farms—the Dominion and Provincial Governments sharing the cost. The plan will arrange rail to the Province for men in depots or recreation camps was approximately $12. per man per month. Under the Farm Placement Plan the cost, including railway and transportation, payment, of $5.00 per month to the man and a bonus of $5.00 to the farmer was approximately the so on the cost of keeping a man in a depot but the Farm Placement Plan proved more advantageous to many ways and the Dominion Government shared half the cost—there not here for men in depots.

Approximately 4,000 patients were given medical services and hospitalization. For this purpose the Provincial Government retained the services of 32 physicians and three nurses who were available to needy persons in the pioneer and outlying districts where they practised. Medical services of this kind are relief and organized on the fee-for-service basis of approved physicians.

Twenty below at 8 a.m. on Monday with a cold northwest wind. It is better for us to have our winter weather now than later on.

At Alix on Wednesday morning, at 9 o'clock it was 30 below zero, as recorded by our hardest working town boy—prospector. The Edmonton airport, on Wednesday morning, announced a reading of 40 below. In December our lowest point was 42 below. Change appears at a blizzard with two and a half feet of snow and all traffic tied up. Quite a number of fatalities are reported in the East.

Reports indicate that the financial conditions among Alberta Municipalities are improving. Many report a surplus and others are reducing their debt structure and in quite a number of cases bond issues are being paid up. A great sign for recovery.

East Or West, Home's Best

"Honest patience are always the greatest" and "Business leads are abundant to the wider" are questions which are frequently heard across the thought that it is a common business thing to believe that because something is far away it must be better than something which is near at hand and that, therefore, that which is difficult of attainment must necessarily be more desirable than that which can be easily received.

The danger is somewhat akin to the oft quoted declaration that "A prophet is not without honor, save in his own country and in his own home," and the same idea is contained in the remark of the Bible about the sunshine and the pot of gold at the foot the sun.

The principle mentioned in these fallacies is the catchword of the belief of those who subscribe to the doctrine that there are opportunities of fortune around us ever we but to open our eyes and discern them.

It is surprising how many people, apparently otherwise reasonably, agree with the impression that the bush must be remote and conversely that the bushes produce cannot possibly be so worthy.

Here often, for example, can one find the spectacle of people flocking in large numbers and paying substantial fees to hear the visiting virtuoso from foreign lands and almost ignore their own talent which is equally capable in worth and be capable of giving as great enjoyment. How frequently are people prone to locate and lend statesmen, philosophers, scientists, literateurs, lecturers and leaders of thought if they come from some other country as their native heath and habitat and even sneer at their own.

And so it is in all spheres, walks and activities of life. If it is of foreign origin or distant it must be good, but if it is native or nigh it is something to be deprecated or slighted.

Stove and Three

In the matter of higher education, for instance, it would be interesting to know why a number of westerners who are able to give their sons and daughters a university education deem it necessary or advisable to send their offspring to eastern universities or institutions in the United States or overseas, when the colleges of Western Canada are just as good and in some respects better.

There is abundant evidence in support of this contention, available from students who have gone outside the Canadian West to receive training which could have been obtained in their home, or adjoining, provinces and from parents of such students. Their comparisons frequently confirm the statement that they could have done just as well, and sometimes better, had they taken their courses and graduated at home and of course, at less expense.

There is a fondness and virility in the atmosphere of Western Canadian universities entirely absent from those older established institutions of learning in the east and in other countries, and students who have grown up to date in many respects and the courses they offer are more appropriate points to the problems conditions and circumstances which will surround their students after graduation, when they are thrown on their own resources to make a living for themselves.

Further than this, there appears to be a greater incentive among the students to work and to think for themselves in Western Canada universities than in eastern institutions elsewhere, partly due no doubt to their environment, the high standards that are set, the calibre of the teaching staff and the earnest attitude on life which is the natural heritage of youth who have been reared under the spartan pioneering conditions which exist in a young country.

In many of the universities elsewhere there is a tendency to cram those destitute of more rapidly than in Western Canada, leading to the detention of the development of a spirit of aesthetic from which the West, fortunately is comparatively free. Moreover obstructions which tend to encourage students to further away touch of their time in frivolous pursuits are less abundant in university centres in Western Canada than in some of the larger centres in the east and abroad.

While in the United States there are many universities whose graduates have achieved a high educational standard within their walls, on the other hand, there are many whose standards are very low and where even the best and most earnest students are not as well equipped after graduation to compete on equal terms with the products of home institutions in highly competitive fields of endeavor.

Boring Them Stiff

Boring them finite is said it is not surprising that students of Western Canadian universities should be in demand in the business life of the large towns in the south and that there is much truth in the complaint, hence frequently heard recently, that money is being spent on the education of trade students for the benefit of American business and American organizations and institutions.

On the other hand, there is occasion for considerable surprise that parents and students too, should express preference for tuition in "outside" universities and colleges in the illusory hope of securing advantages which are not to be compared with those offered by similar institutions here.

Cause For Every Paper

Canada-Slovakia Has All News Appeared Monday in Prague

The editorial office of each daily newspaper in Czecho-Slovakia has a corner with cold determined to be at for publication. Since the September crisis newspapers have been compelled to submit their finished copy to the censor before it is sent to the mold be issued on the streets placed in mails or delivered to homes. The censor reads and edits the copy, has to decide what could be published and what could not have either cut out or he not into type and approved. That means that many items were not published at all. The newspaper whose material has been deleted at the last minute has no time to substitute and to editorial offices will see every issue of page in the making and will express their judgment heavily.

TAKE THE LEAD OUT OF YOUR LEGS

Get Strength in Your Blood and You'll Get the Pep that Sends You Bounding Up the Stairs

Are you tired, weak, run down? Do you feel as if you had no energy, no ambition, no pep at all, that is a common complaint of thousands of people who have thin, weak blood. Your blood is the life-giving stream that carries to every part of your body the nourishment it needs to keep you well and strong. That's why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are so helpful to people who are run down. They make new, rich blood which strengthens the nerves and builds up the whole system. Mrs. Wm. Hall, Bridgetown, N.S., says: "I was very much run down and had no appetite. I was pale and weak and had dizzy spells. I got Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and after using them for a short time I felt much better. I continued using them and now I am strong and well." You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Old Time Barber

Winnipeg Veteran Still Smells Them Every Day in The Shop

Edgar Dozer, barber at Winnipeg for 50 years, claims customers of the present day were more easily satisfied than those of the pioneer days—according to Dozer, the old-timers with the handle-bar moustache, which had to be trimmed just so or else.

Back in 1882, when he came to Winnipeg from Perrysville Missouri, where he was born in 1870, it was just ordinary handlebars for a barber and a straggling moustache was a severe waiter for a chaser. Those the customer has to be reminded to but upwards before and after shaving. The sparsely shaving clippers have made the old-time hand clipped obsolete.

Most owners of this customers accounts are now of the country he visited the late Sir Hugh John Macdonald, the Rockefeller of Nelson; then Thomas Greenway, all former premiers of Manitoba, and Henry S. Stanley, explorer who was the first Doctor David Livingstone, lost in South Africa.

He also met Major Albert B. Rogers who was engaged to be wed in 1881 through the Rocky Mountains now known as Rogers Pass, which named for him. He also met Sir Donald Smith when he was engaged through the mountains on the Canadian Pacific Railway.

He is married and has four children. His favorite sport is golf and he also enjoys motoring. He has resided in Winnipeg so long as he is able remember he likes it.

A Fortune In Trees

Black Walnut Timber Valued At A Million Dollars

Justice of Ontario in a lover of trees. His devotion to them has made him a millionaire, quite apart from his other investments. After he retired he ate this fortune by stocking down forests during land of his wealth in timber. He made it by the reverse process, by the planting of trees.

At his summer home 30 miles north of the William had a Black Walnut timber grove which is valued at $1,000,000. Three decades ago the trees were but saplings. Now they are quite good sized and tound to grow. Some are suitable to veneer purposes of the panel.

Trees are a hobby with Sir William, and he has made of it a profitable one. He has planted on his country estate seven types, all of which will develop into wood which is in great demand. The evolution of world supply of black walnut, oak, etc., is rapidly diminishing, thus adding to the value of the remaining trees of these varieties.—Wheaton Star.

Power Of British Empire

Strength Live In Honesty And Sincerity, Of People

"Political strength of the people in the United States was manifested at the Democratic convention next day in the nomination," by W. J. Cameron of Dearborn, Mich., in an address to the Canadian Club at Ottawa.

The Canadian Government we heard was just about to be overthrown on the question of Bonus" through Parliament. The country is disorganized, then the "rag-pickers" attempted in the past few years to push up business as the Republic.

Mr. Cameron, turning to the European scene, found the Republican strain. Far when peace there was in the world to-day the United States is more changed than Britain and Czecho-Slovakia people.

"Britain never signed" he said, but in a way that seemed to open to the gaze of all the inane nobility of the world.

He traced the momentous result of the rather one paper the Berlin speech of Hitler against the address delivered in London next day by Neville Chamberlain. That of the German dictator was "the very essence of brutality, the glorification of power," said Mr. Cameron, while the speech of the British Premier were full of honesty, courage and sincerity.

With a small group which included Henry Ford the motor magnate, Mr. Cameron had called on Hitler. At the conclusion of the British Prime Minister's, Mr. Ford said, "I wonder if we could persuade why the British rule the world?"

CRESTED WHEAT GRASS

This hardy perennial grass was introduced from Siberia to the United States about forty years ago. However, it is only recently that its real value as a forage plant in western Canada has been demonstrated. At present, it is in the test grass available for hay and pasture purposes under dryland conditions; as well as for the re-seeding of abandoned hay and depleted native pastures. While "Fairway" is the best strain of crested wheat grass at present new types are being developed which may prove superior under very dry conditions.

C.N. DEVELOPMENT DRAWS PRAISE

Saskatoon.—"When looking into the railway question, do not be misled by profit and loss accounts, which do not and cannot tell the whole story. Viewed in proper perspective, the policy of extensive development of Canada's natural resource, by the construction of railways, has actually produced a great state and national wealth." The concept of the Canadian National Railways, as an instrument of national development, brazenly spanning a sound and has been fully justified by the growth of national wealth. Canada without railways and without them could not be the wealthy and important nation she is", declared S.W. Fairweather, chief of research and development, Canadian National Railways, guest speaker at the annual dinner of the Saskatoon board of trade here recently.

He pointed out that criticism of the Canadian National Railways should not be directed towards damning the organization for past errors, but should be directed to an examination of the service rendered and whether that service was justified on the plan of national expansion and whether the organization was being administered economically.

Mr. Aberhart will, in future, take a different view of the privileges he will have been subjected by the weekly press of Alberta, after reading the latest issue of The Rebel, a Calgary publication. In comparison, Mr. Aberhart has been treated with the greatest respect by the provincial press. They have handled him with velvet gloves, spoken in soft tones and shaded lights. The last issue of The Rebel indulges in language quite unparliamentary and unsupportable. The whole edition is against Aberhart, the man, from a purely personal standpoint. The claim is made that the members of the legislature could run him out at the coming session of the House, and loudly calls upon them to do so.

OF LOCAL INTEREST

There was no meeting of the village council on Monday evening. The only member present was Mr. Whitfield.

At the nomination meeting on Monday, Returning Officer, Mrs. Pears, reports that only one nomination was received, that of Mr. R. Mentis, and was duly declared elected. The council for this year will consist of Messrs. Meikle, Whitfield and Strain.

"Canned Sunlight"

It is interesting to note that for centuries chemists engaged in scientific research have looked to the day when sunshine rays would be trapped and harnessed by man. In the eighteenth century, Joseph Addison wrote a humorous story of an Englishman who put sunlight in cucumbers and would preserve fruit.

To date, no one has succeeded in "canning" sunlight, but there is a machine in the EATON Research Bureau called a Fade-Ometer which produces a light that practically duplicates the effects of sunlight in its action on paints and materials.

Such assurance as "Guaranteed Not to Fade" in EATON advertising are based on the results of experiment by such machines working with a Fade-Ometer. Woolens, Silks, Rayons, Wallpapers and many other products must stand up to a test of from 96 to 160 consecutive hours' exposure of the "canned sunlight" before we will refer to them by their terms in our Catalogue.

When you buy merchandise from EATON'S with specific guarantee of ability to resist ravages of the sun, you can buy with complete confidence.

Flirting With Death

The study of a report issued in December by the Board of Transport Commissioners for Canada on "Dangerous Practices at Railroads, Drivers of other Vehicles and Pedestrians at Protected Crossings" leaves the student not only unsurprised at the statement that "motor accidents are becoming more frequent, but astounded that there are not more deaths at railway crossings than the information and statistics record.

The report covers in detail a number of dangerous practices observed at some of the more important protected railway crossings across the continent from Halifax to Vancouver during, roughly, a six-month period of 1930.

The crossings selected in the report are those protected by various devices to prevent motorists running into heavy steam trains approaching. Some of these are equipped with trip wags, warning lights and bells, some are manned by flagmen and others equipped with gates, automatic and whistle control.

The data contained in these tabulated reports gives date, hour and location and the number of the license of the automobile or truck involved in some dangerous practice observed, presumably by some official who was stationed in the vicinity at the time of the reported occurrence.

Since at any particular crossing spe- ified in the report only two or three dates are listed in each month and usually about the same hour of the day it is obvious that the specific cases cited are merely an indefinite and fraction of the number of violations of commonsense and traffic regulations that certainly occur, not only at any one and every one of these protected crossings, but that hundreds, nay thousands of motorists are daily taking ill-unsane-risky unprotected crossings throughout the country.

* * * *

Dangerous Dodging

That the game of trying to beat the train to the crossing is being engaged in daily all over the country by hundreds, if not thousands, of drivers is quite evident from a casual perusal and analysis of a summary of the report, although this bunk numerically all other "offenses" at protected crossings.

Out of a list of 36 forms of dangerous practices observed at protected railway crossings across the Dominion, with a total of 346 cases cited, no less than 146, or 7 of the total are listed under the caption "Crossed in front of approaching train", despite the fact that every form of warning signal was in operation at the time

How dangerously anxious many motorists are to get across the tracks ahead of the oncoming train is illustrated in the statement that of the 346 cases recorded a total of 42, or 12.1 per cent. of the total drove under the gates while the train was crossing, and even in the fact that gates were actually down in but the way, did not deter 31 drivers or 8.9 per cent of the total continuing their headlong course and crashing through and damaging the gates.

When such recklessness is displayed on the highways by a large number of drivers it is no wonder that accidents are increasing and that the end of the year sees a total of 1,000 persons killed in the United States alone, and a correspondingly large number in Canada, while the number of injuries and the damage to property is increasing at a still more alarming rate.

Many and varied are the campaigns that are being waged in an effort to reduce the number of accidents and the toll of human life and property damage, but the fact that the number of accidents and the toll of human life and property damage is increasing at a still more alarming rate

The Bren Gun Contract

After an inquiry into the Bren gun contract the only definite opinion expressed by Commissioner Davis is to the effect that there was no evidence of corruption on the part of either the Senate, House of Commons, or members of the Government. All are exonerated from complicity in any fraud or dishonesty.

The Commissioner himself refused to bring in a verdict on the inquiry as a whole, thinking it best to leave the question to parliament—to become a political football.

The inquiry now resolves itself into a question, not of right or wrong, but one of method. To put it in a few words it means: Should the contract have been let under competitive bids or under the cost plus system. Both these systems have their advocates and it still makes the question a matter of debate.

Even Maclean's Magazine, which started the trouble, refuses to make a charge, and in an article in their Feb. 15th edition, states their side of the case, and then asks its readers to "Judge for Yourself." In this way the question comes to the electors who will make up their minds according to their political leanings and so will the members of parliament.

The Opposition, being in desperate need of campaign ammunition, will make the most of it. The Liberals will have certain parts of the report to which they can "point to with pride," but the taxpayers can dig into their jeans and fill the hole left after the commission has made its haul.

Commissions of the type mentioned above, so far as their rules to the public is concerned, are not worth a cancelled postage stamp.

OPPOSED TO AMALGAMATION

In a debate in the House of Commons recently on the railway question Dr. Manion said he had opposed it since 1925 but had not noticed Liberal ministers opposing it recently. "I believe my right honorable friend (the prime minister) is opposed to amalgamation but I would like to hear him say so once more."

"I say it now." Prime Minister Mackenzie King interjected.

"I am glad I have been able to stir the right honorable gentleman to commanding," the conservative leader said. "'tis a matter of fact the only man in this house who ever came out for amalgamation was the minister of trade and commerce" (Hon. W. D. Euler).

"But always under public ownership," said Mr. Euler.

Sir Edward Beatty, of the C.P.R. is still vocal on the subject of amalgamation. He has been handcuffed in Toronto publishing a sheet with the object of converting Britons all over Canada to the idea of making the C.P.R. a present of our national system. Beatty is wasting his money.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

At all Christian Science Churches next Sunday, the subject of the lesson-Sermon will be "Mind". The Golden Text is I Peter 5:5. One of the Scriptural citations is "I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus" (Philippians 3:14). One of the correlative passages from Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, is "Let the perfect model be present to your thoughts instead of its demoralized opposite. This spiritualization of thought lets in the light, and brings the divine Mind, Life not God, into your consciousness" (p. 261).

The Wheat Problem

Not for the first time has it been said that a more intensive development of the national resources, other than those of the top six feet of the soil, is the three prairie provinces should be promoted, as an aid to their ideal industry agriculture.

With such far export wheat gradually restricting instead of expanding, as they should do to keep pace with the extension of wheat growing areas in this and other countries in recent decades, farmers themselves have come to the conclusion that hundreds are more likely to prove embarrassing than a solution to the grain growers' problem, such an agreement can be reached between the exporting countries to curtail production, directly or indirectly.

If as at the present time at this date no export quota agreement can be made effective as between the big four exporting countries, the problem of the wheat grower in Western Canada will have to be attacked from some other angle if wheat farmers are to be able to reap reasonable returns for their labors without admonitions and from the government which means, of course, immediate relief for the taxpayers of the country.

It is true of course that for the current crop year wheat farmers are receiving aid from the government in the form of a guarantee of fixed minimum prices for their product but even though the guaranteed price is regarded by farmers as lower than it should be to ensure maintenance of a good standard of living existence plus the loss to the country as a whole at a very substantial figure.

If the farmer's relations are correct it said it would be difficult to refute them it means that had the minimum guaranteed fixed price been not at adequate figure the industry which the Dominion would have been built would have been very much greater and if existing world demand continues on the present day pace possibly beyond the ability of the country to meet over a period of years and more so would it have been the case in years of heavy yields which would tend to further depress prices in the open market.

Under such circumstances it might be difficult to persuade any government to pursue a guaranteed price policy at a figure adequate to ensure to the farmers a standard of living to which they have been accustomed in the pre-depression era.

* * *

Many Substitutes Offered

Faced with these possibilities it would appear to be the part of wisdom for the prairie governments, the federal government and the farmers themselves to canvass the possibility of placing more agriculture on a basis more certain than at present but even though the guaranteed price is regarded by farmers as lower than it should be to ensure maintenance of a good standard of living existence plus the loss to the country as a whole at a very substantial figure.

LIVED UP TO ITS TITLE

Reverend Jack Goddard of Dalhurst, chaplain of the Alberta Curling Association, pulled the best stunt that the annual bonspiel produced and it produced some honeys. With impressive ritual and fitting ceremony, he presented President George Laight with a little black book. The cover announced the title to be "What a Skip Can Teach His Rink." George being a skip accepted it eagerly. He made no secret about the fact that the title intrigued him greatly. When he opened the precious volume he found every page was a total blank. That's one book that lived up fully to its title.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

(By F. G. L. Strange)

Competition to sell Canadian wheat on world markets will be keener than ever during the next few years. Every country farmer, however, can himself give substantial assistance to helping to sell Canadian wheat on world markets. This he can do by the simple method of producing a crop of the highest quality.

There is no better method known of doing this than to sow a few bushels of the best seed obtainable, of a pure-strain world variety, on a few acres of summer-fallowed land. Registered and Certified seed sealed in the bush is, of course, the very best quality available.

If every farmer were to do this simple and inexpensive thing, then it is certain that the average quality of wheat on which for export would be improved, foreign sales would be greatly assured our surplus would decline, and as prices would rise; and then all farmers and all the rest of us would substantially benefit.

Twenty Tons of Voice

ENGINEERS of the Bell System supervise their streamlined creation as finishing touches are put on the twenty-ton, multi-record sound reproducer truck, with a moving speaker system it will serve as a voice of "private enterprise" in visitors touring the Imperial Motors "Highways and Horizons" exhibit at the New York World's Fair. In the machine, 120 specially spaced photoelectric cell devices scan a motion picture film at the same time through out its length. Then 120 different parts of the same story are being told separately, at once, therefore, from the exhibit, carry spectators before a model panorama of tomorrow's highway system. Each car is equipped with receivers which give a perfectly synchronized description of the exact scene before which the visitor is passing. This is said to be the most intricate sound instrument of its kind ever developed.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

At all Christian Science Churches on Sunday, the subject of the Lesson-Sermon will be "Christ Jesus." The Golden Text is Colossians 2:9,10. One of the Scriptural citations is "And a great multitude followed him, because they saw his miracles which he did on them that were diseased." Also one of the citations from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, reads as follows: "Jesus' students were not taught to look for help to any person, but to God, who alone can heal."

A Worthy Objective

There are few Canadians who have not heard something of the work and achievements of Jack Miner. Canada's pioneer game conservationist, and thousands of Americans as well as Canadians have made the pilgrimage lower to thank for the opportunities they now enjoy in both countries in hunting such noble birds as the Canada geese and other species of wild fowl which might to-day be extinct had it not been for the path blazed by Jack Miner over a quarter of a century ago.

While Jack Miner has become almost an international figure on this sentiment during that period and the fame of his home and bird sanctuary at Kingsville, Ontario, have spread far and wide, it is not generally known that farmers everywhere then be now getting in necessary if the institution which he has founded and operated so successfully for so many years is to be preserved to posterity and future generations are to be assured of the opportunity of visiting one of the foremost of this continent's beauties.

The sanctuary which he established so far back as 1904 has served as a breeding ground for wild fowl in increasing numbers ever since and as a result has provided a breeding ground for birds for sportsmen in both Canada and the United States. In other words this haven has been for years and still is a source of supply of breeding stock, the overflow from which to-day enables large numbers of hunters to enjoy a sport which would otherwise have vanished ere this time.

As a result of Jack Miner's system of tagging the birds which have migrated southward his hospitality, ever since 1909, he has a great deal of data available to support his contention that his refuge has been and still is a source of supply for the entire continent.

* * * * *

A Point Of Inspection.

One of the greatest benefits which have been devised on both sides of the international boundary as a result of Jack Miner's work and his influence has been the establishment of inspection points to the value and importance of wild life as an asset to both Canada and the United States and of its importance as a stimulus to tourist traffic.

The efforts of this 72-year-old pioneer conservationist have, since he commenced his work, served as an inspiration to individual citizens, sportsmen's organizations and other groups as well as Dominion and State governments on both sides of the line to "go and do likewise". As a result in more recent years a chain of bird refuges and sanctuaries patterned after the famous Jack Miner sanctuary have been established throughout the United States, and in Canada thousands of acres have been set aside and developed in another purpose. Without these, and back of them the inspiration instituted by Jack Miner many of the best species of waterfowl would have suffered from the fate of the carrier pigeon which were slaughtered by the million days with an abandoned ruthlessness that staggered the world.

Were it not for insistent public demand, largely aroused by Jack Miner's unselfish devotion of a life-time to a conservation program, the laws which have been placed on the statute books of legislatures and parliaments in both countries would never have been enacted and would be changed to meet between the two countries which has afforded additional protection to migratory birds have been implemented, or if it had been, it would not have been effective.

* * * * *

Age Is Needed

Jack Miner, though still well and active, has already passed the allotted span of mankind, but to what extent the work that he has done will be continued and the full measure of which he has exerted to bird life will be perpetuated, is not at all certain, unless those who are interested in preserving such a valuable asset and have the means, rally to the cause in a tangible fashion.

The Jack Miner Migratory Bird Foundation has been incorporated in Ontario as well as in Ontario by a special act of Parliament with the hope of raising a trust fund to endow and perpetuate Jack Miner's home and the sanctuary so that the valuable enterprise will be able to carry on after Mr. Miner has passed on.

One can only hope that many wealthy Americans who, as sportsmen and bird lovers, have derived so much benefit from Jack Miner's achievements and who are interested in establishing similar projects for themselves will give some consideration to this important project. Measures for the safeguarding of sportsmen have been enacted and would be enacted but for the fact that there is no doubt that there is no doubt that there is a greater value to the scheme of things, but how much more important and permanent would be the greater value if the institution like Jack Miner's which has as its worthy objective the preservation and propagation of living wild life, a source of joy and pleasure not only to those who are living to-day but for countless generations in the future.

Larger Farm Income

Prospect Of Upturned In Business Is Re-ceived For 1936

Greater production on farms in western Canada, linked with prospects for upturnsin in business both at home and abroad, bases for the farm management department of the Canadian Pacific Railways to foresee that the total farm income during 1936 would be higher than in 1935.

Following an address to delegates attending the annual meeting of the Saskatchewan Agricultural Extension association at the university, Professor R. H. Hope, head of the farm management department's survey branch, said: "Indications for the year 1936," to the public. "In the forecast, based on many conversations collecting primary products was compiled by Professor Hope and by Hud'ey Van Vliet, also of the farm management staff.

In discussing of the outlook, Professor Hope drew attention to an important trend from the standpoint of consumption of agricultural products. "If history repeats itself, we will now begin to expand our economy in building and construction in Canada and the United States.

"The peak of the cycle of building and construction will be reached in the middle's 1940's and the peak of business activity will be reached at about that time. It is therefore to be expected that the consumption of agricultural products will increase accordingly."

With prospects for an upturn in business here and abroad, the government expected ending of trade restrictions to follow. This was the general result, of discussions at the recent meeting of the Canadian Trade Commissioners in London, it was learned in press past by his department as more than 80 per cent. of exports to the United States in 1935, however, there had been a gradual increase in recent years. In 1932 for example, 72 per cent. to 80 per cent. last year, he declared.

Seventieth Annual Meeting
Royal Bank of Canada

Canadian and International Economic Situation Discussed

By Morris W. Wilson, President and Managing Director. —Commends New Trade Agreements.—Pokes Out Failure of Economic Policies of Totalitarian States.

Sydney G. Dobson, General Manager, Reviews Balance Sheet. — Continued Progress Shown. — Present Outlook Distinctly Encouraging.

A comprehensive review of economic conditions in Canada and abroad, with particular reference to the dangers of the economic zone being created in Germany and Italy, featured the address of Morris W. Wilson, President and Managing Director of the 70th Annual Meeting of The Royal Bank of Canada.

Mr. Wilson referred with satisfaction to the fact that conditions in Canada had been relatively stable despite the setbacks in the United States. Conservative in character, which was general during the closing months of 1937 and the early part of 1938 had made notable progress and business in Canada had now resumed its upward trend.

MINING INDUSTRY

Since the inception of the depression in 1930 mining had commenced to play a more important role in the most encouraging factor in Canadian industrial life. Value of production had been increased by nearly one-half in many instances exceeding the high figures of 1927. The output of gold had again established a new record of approximately $360,000,000 an increase of $40,000,000 or nearly 13% over 1937. The speculative interest in the "gold" factor, Mr. Wilson said, was also noteworthy stated Mr. Wilson. By the end of November 40 cruise oil wells were in production and drilling was under way in 11 others, with output during 1938 1937.

Unemployment and relief were difficult problems, although continued improvement was reported.

Tourist trade returns had been most encouraging expenditures by tourists in Canada totalling approximately $275,000,000 during 1938.

NEW TRADE AGREEMENTS

Mr. Wilson commented highly the new trade agreements between Canada and the United States, and between the United States and Great Britain. They represent a definite departure from the policies of trade restriction and national self-sufficiency since the World War, and are a step back to common outlook and neutrality upon which peoples. It is striking that the agreements provide for a much more volume of trade and avoidance of the hampering of reductions of duties on many items, including those of British and German items in the Great War.

Coronation Prince Bed

New Crossroads Highest Point On The London Market

Canadian prime beef climbed in triumph into become the coronation of London's famed Smithfield market, where it commands a higher price than Scottish beef, Hon. Duncan Marshall (Lib., Huron) said during debate on the address in the senate.

Senator Marshall said the new method of shipment had been developed by Dr. A. M. Shaw, of the Dominion animal husbandry department's marketing service. Hung up in chilled railroad cars, the sides of beef are maintained at the same temperature enjoyed by the cattle when they were roaming the Atlantic and during voyage to the market. Shipping had cooperated in see that the car temperatures did not go below 30 degrees.

Chilling killed in the city of Toronto—and within a few months this will also be true of cattle killed at Winnipeg—is the method of killing cattle killed in Edmonton and Calgary is shipped to the Smithfield market in London, where it commands a higher price than prime Scottish," the senator said.

And when you speak about any thing Hereford you necessary speak of Canada, he added, for it is the breed of cattle which raises have sold on the Smithfield market for a higher price and for a longer period of time than any other kind of beef that is sold there. Canada has used in Toronto, for it to the mainland, load it onto the ship, and when it arrived in London it is distributed, then we'll for the beauty our cattle breed that's the most encouraging factor in Canadian industrial life," Senator Marshall said.

Many instances exceeding the high figures of 1937. The output of gold had again established a new record of approximately $360,000,000 an increase of 14%, over 1937. GENERAL MANAGER'S ADDRESS

Mr. Sydney G. Dobson, General Manager in reviewing the Balance Sheet remarked that the year's total assets reached the highest point since 1929 and total net deposits were the highest recorded. Current loans increased moderately during the year but a substantial increase occurred in the amount of investments.

Taxes had, however, become an increasingly heavy burden. "The year's net dollar distributed to industries in Canada by the eighteen big banks operating in Canada totalled $1,000,000,000.

Answering the criticism sometimes voiced that banks were not lending freely to Government bonds, Mr. Dobson said: "Banks are not lending to Government bonds because the Government has not been borrowing. The Government has not been borrowing because it has not been spending. Therefore, if unemployment is to be relieved, and business is to be stimulated, the Government must borrow and spend. Let us not be afraid of the Government debt. It is a debt we owe to ourselves."

INTEREST RATES

"Too frequently hear it asserted that the burden of the public debt is quite intolerable and that relief can only be brought about by drastic measures. A forced conversion of public debt is frequently suggested accompanied by reference to the reform of 1914 to 1921." Continuing, Mr. Dobson said: "Those who are quoting at this point of view, Mr. Dobson said, that the burden of the public debt is not the amount of the debt but the interest charges. Mr. Dobson said that the average rate of interest on Canada's outstanding debt has been reduced and bank rate 3%. The best way to lower the burden of debt as high as possible, consistent with the ability to maintain your credit at high standing and thereby obtain the benefit of low current rates. The rate at which the Government can borrow must necessarily with that at which it can lend."

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

The economic shroud remained defiant, stated Mr. Wilson, and expressed the opinion that "this will overtake the totalitarian countries in due course. If their difficulties become strong, there can confidence on the military panel of view and disregard the first principles of sound economics. We are doing at present." The decline in German exports had become acute since the September crisis.

China available outlook," he said, "that as little total exports were actually less than in 1932 and 1933, the under of the year's depression and the last two years must be the Nazi regime."

Material business in Germany is exceedingly active and full employment has been attained, largely, not at the cost of colonial deficits in that unfortunate country. Indeed, one German authority has stated that an amount equal to 50% of the national income is absorbed by armaments and party dues. Of its own account, said Mr. Wilson, the country could possibly not be paid without producing serious inflation. And, under the present regime, he could not see "anything but a short-run deterioration in the standard of living in Germany. These remarks apply equally to Italy and the Italian colonies."

On the decline in business activity in Great Britain had been halted and was showing in the United States, since May last, shown the most encouraging improvement in the statistical month.

Mr. Wilson also spoke with satisfaction of the larger co-operation and national unity that had achieved in previous years between Great Britain, the United States and also with the countries of North and South America, as evidenced at the recent Lima Conference

"The outlook for Canadian business again depends upon the world trend would seem to be definitely more favourable," Mr. Wilson. "The international situation is still obscure, but there are many definite causes for encouragement. I can view the future with confidence."

Taxes had, however, become an increasingly heavy burden. "The year's net dollar distributed to industries in Canada by the eighteen big banks operating in Canada totalled $1,000,000,000.

Answering the criticism sometimes voiced that banks were not lending freely to Government bonds, Mr. Dobson said: "Banks are not lending to Government bonds because the Government has not been borrowing. The Government has not been borrowing because it has not been spending. Therefore, if unemployment is to be relieved, and business is to be stimulated, the Government must borrow and spend. Let us not be afraid of the Government debt. It is a debt we owe to ourselves."

INTEREST RATES

"Too frequently hear it asserted that the burden of the public debt is quite intolerable and that relief can only be brought about by drastic measures. A forced conversion of public debt is frequently suggested accompanied by reference to the reform of 1914 to 1921." Continuing, Mr. Dobson said: "Those who are quoting at this point of view, Mr. Dobson said, that the burden of the public debt is not the amount of the debt but the interest charges. Mr. Dobson said that the average rate of interest on Canada's outstanding debt has been reduced and bank rate 3%. The best way to lower the burden of debt as high as possible, consistent with the ability to maintain your credit at high standing and thereby obtain the benefit of low current rates. The rate at which the Government can borrow must necessarily with that at which it can lend."

BUSINESS OUTLOOK

Canada had entered the autumn season cheerful of the prospects of business which first appeared in the middle of the States slump eighteen months ago, concluded Mr. Dobson. "The people in Canada had become comparatively stable and results of the harvest in the Prairie provinces as reasonably satisfactory. The general outlook for business in the face of factors which are distinctly encouraging," he said, "and I look forward to the future with confidence. The prospects for business have no promising a future as has existed."

CHAPTER XI—Continued

"Got fire fighting equipment?"

"Plenty."

"Hose and hookups?"

"Yes—and plenty of them."

Hammond's face was tense. Everything up a lot of Indians from around Nelson to help them haul logs. Then one night he left Nelson. Couldn't find him anywhere. Couldn't find him anywhere. Couldn't find him anywhere. Couldn't find him anywhere.

The forest crew had run to the river's edge and the boats were unfastened. Logs still smoking, the baked earth steamed with the heat. Hammond's face was blackened with smoke. Cinders had burned holes in his clothes.

"What's wrong with you?" Jack demanded. "The fire isn't over?"

Hammond stepped ashore with a short cant pantaloon motioned him into the boat. "Better come down here."

Hammond obeyed, and at once he saw. On the ground was the charred body of a man, his clothing burned away.

"Dead?" Hammond asked. There was a queer tremor in his voice.

"Yes, I found the kid of it," a fire fighter answered. "The poor devil's all frying."

The victim lay face downward, clawed hands still clutching the sand as he knew and gently turned the man on his back.

"I identified it," he said jerkily. It was Bruce Kemsley.

Hammond knelt, for the men still on fire his gloves and dusted the sand off the face of the dead man. Then he rose and looked at the men who had been helping him. "Where were you last night?" he asked.

"Right in the old bunkhouse," answered Kemsley. "Everybody was there. Everybody was there. Everybody was there.

TECHNOCRACY OUTLINED

The technocracy meeting held in the U.F.A. hall on Friday evening was very well received and the attendance and interest as shown by questions are based on scientific facts and statistical data obtained from the most dependable sources and this sentiment is believe that the announcements of Technocracy can be nothing but the truth.

The speaker dealt with the great surplus we of food or starts produced in Alberta, particularly wheat and butter and explained the proposals made by the existing set up to remedy the inability of (Price) "at all which we do not produce ourselves and said but little or no effort on the existing problem of surpluses and prices as how they spoil ruin for the farmer.

The mechanism of Technocracy were also outlined in which the production of all goods and services in the North American Continent would be under the direction of only the most competent Engineers Scientists and Technocrats, that these leaders would be trained from the different sequences in which they had travelled assuring that only the most efficient would be in authority

Dealing with the necessity of a technical control system, Bennett described some of the new machines and labor saving devices that are throwing so many workers on the relief rod s and the utter futility of ever being able to solve unemployment by trying to create jobs. Work is done by machines not by men and one of our most staggering surpluses is "Human Labor"

It was also stressed that there was no attempt being made by Technocracy to destroy the present price system, but that the price system was destroying itself and that it would be but a few s ort years until it would cease to function owing to the rapid decline in the return on investment, the ever increasing nonpaying relief rolls and that Technocracy was building up a trained and disciplined personnel that would step into the breach when the ruins of the price system had been swept away by the ever increasing contradictions.

It was further emphasized that Technocracy was not a political party and had nothing in common with Socialism, Communism, Fascism, or any other social philosophy but is the technological sense of the "Social Sciences" an organization with a social objective purely humanistic, educational and unified by North American whose aim is to give North Americans wisdom to give North America back to its rightful owners (The Citizens) of this continent.

Technocracy will guarantee to every citizen a very high standard of living. Security of income, and economic security from the cradle to the grave with a much shorter hours than their fondest dreams ever visualized!

All were urged to investigate Technocracy and for this reason a local organization will be formed that will have as it objects the distribution of knowledge on the subject.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

At all Christian Science Churches next Sunday, the subject of the Lesson-Sermon is "Man". The Golden Text is Ecclesiastes 7:20. One of the Scriptural citations is "And both Jesus was called, and his disciples, to the marriage." (John 2:2). One of the correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, is "May Christ, Truth, be present at every bridal altar to turn the water into wine and give to human life an inspiration by which man's spiritual and eternal existence may be discerned" (p. 65.)

U. F. A

On March 9th Thursday, at 8.30 p.m. in the U.F.A. Hall, Alix, a meeting called inviting all farmers in this district to attend who have any desire to better their own business and to better the Agriculture Industry as a whole. The following speakers will address he meeting:

Mr Norman Stewart, Lomond, Alta., whom Paul director, His subject will be "The Dominion Government's Wheat Policy." Everyone who is growing wheat is or should be interested in this aspect.

Mr George Bennett, Penne Liver, and Mrs. George Carter, Pincher. Their subject will be, U.F.A. and C.F.W.A Rally."

The meeting is being called under the auspices of the Alix U.F.A. and U.F.W.A., Locals and executives assemble and cordially invite all farmers, whether present or not to attend the meeting to help us to better our business and look in, instead of throwing your weight into your organizations, very little can be accomplished.

POOL'S ATTITUDE ON WHEAT POLICY

An official statement issued by the Alberta Wheat Pool gives that organization's views on the proposed future wheat policy as follows:

"The attitude of the Alberta Wheat Pool has been and is in favor of the establishment of an equitable Wheat Board and a pegged price for wheat."

"It is true that a pegged price for wheat is of no aid to the farmer who has lost his crop, and helps a man with a good crop more than a farmer with a small crop, but victims of crop failure should be helped by crop insurance and other forms of farm relief. The farmers who grow crops are deserving of at least a reasonable price for their product.

"The wheat pool suggests a world carryover of 1,200 million bushels on Aug 1st next. The chances of obtaining a carry over in the open market in view of the prospect of this tremendous crop appear very exceedingly slim. Given an average world crop this year the supply may reach the proportions of an Armageddon.

In spite of the Turgeon Commission's recommendations it appears to be a risky business for western farmers to depend on the Board on wheat prices fixed by world supply and demand. He may very well happen problem wheat at prices at present declarable on the open markets of the world. If a world break do not improve materially, 1939 looks like a disastrous year for the western farmer.

If the pegging is discontinued next July then it looks like the beginning of wheat war among the exporting nations. In any other war the probable result will be plenty of casualties and no victor."

THIS AND THAT

At a game in Toronto last Saturday, the Grads defeated the home team by 68-35.

Alberta's Campaneah-a Head shows a deficit of $418,981 for 1938.

Joshua Von Ribbentrop is quoted as saying: "The English are too flabby to fight." That is just what the Kaiser thought in 1914.

Miss Noel Macdonald, captain of the Grads, has been voted Canada's outstanding woman athlete and will receive the Rose Bowl, emblematic of that title.

It now appears certain that the number of seats in the local Legislature will be reduced to 57. At present it is 63. Calgary and Edmonton will lose one member each.

In all things throughout the world, the man who look for the crooked will see the crooked, the man who look for the straight will see the straight.—Ruskin.

Meetings sponsored by the Alberta Wheat Pool, are being held in various districts to protest against the removal of the Wheat Board and the guaranteed minimum price.

As we approach the forthcoming Federal election, let us speculate among other benifits, the extra returns given the Western farmer. In wheat production, multiply your wheat sales by an approximate figure of 25c per bus and you can estimate the amount received over what you would have received were it not for the pegged price.

Reduction in livestock duty from 2½ to 1½c adds $15 per head to the returns of every 1000 lb steer sold. These facts alone warrant carefull consideration and your support is necessary that they may be continued.

A branch of the Three Hills Treasury house will shortly be established at Dalhousie. Ralph Gould will be the local agent.

Good Seed Available

A large number of registered and certified seed wheat, oats and barley for distribution to grain growers at reduced prices and cheaper freight rates are available in the provinces. Because of prevailing low prices and the interest shown by growers in the various distribution arrangements, it is anticipated that the area sown to improved seed in 1929 will be greater than in any previous year.

Three separate policies are in effect. By availing themselves of any or all these, growers will be enabled to sow improved seed in the certain knowledge that they will reap an increased yield of better quality grain which will help retain for Alberta the high position now held in the export market. The policies are:

1. Bulk sales direct from the bins of registered growers at a reduced cost per bushel.

2. Sack sales of registered or certified seed sealed by the Dominion Plant Products Protection Service.

3. Seed Exchange, by which a group of growers, acting through a central agency, may obtain shipments of seed in carload or lesser lots on a grain exchange or straight purchase basis. A premium of 1½c per bushel is paid on grain tendered for exchange under this policy. Reduced freight rates on all shipments of seed made under any of these policies will be effective up to the 15th day of March.

All seed distributed under the bulk sales arrangement has been threshed from fields inspected by departmental officials. Cleaned to the grades and standards set out by The Seeds Act, it conforms to all requirements of purity and quality.

The seed being shipped directly from the grower's bin, there are no charges for sacks and it is thus available to purchasers at greatly reduced cost. The crops, however, are not eligible for registration as are the crops from sacked and sealed registered seed.

Under terms of the exchange policy, growers are reminded that application must be made through a central agency acting for a group of growers. Price lists are in the hands of elevator agents and municipal secretaries, and no time should be lost in making application as the amount of money available for this service is strictly limited.

The Refugee Problem

The result of representations recently made to the federal government, the people of this country, through their representatives in Parliament, are likely to be found in the immediate future with the question of deciding a problem which may be brought with important consequences to the future welfare of the Dominion.

The question referred to is that of giving admission and accepting into citizenship a percentage of the estimated 1,200,000 refugees and victims of political persecution now in Germany, former Austria and Czechoslovakia. While the estimate of 1,200,000 has been given, there is reason to believe that the figure is underestimated and may reach 1,500,000 as more information becomes available and the transfer of these unfortunates is made [illegible]

Of the estimated number to be transferred to other countries as of the end of 1938, it is reported that about 600,000 are Jews, the balance being non-Aryan Christians, Czechoslovaks and political and religious refugees.

The quest on has been brought to the front in the present session of the Canadian National Committee on Refugees and Victims of Political Persecution, headed by former Premier Ernest Lapointe, and by Senator Cairine Wilson who's stated in these words is the present time that there is not urging any large scale mass immigration, but a generous policy in admitting carefully selected individuals or groups of refugees to sanctuary on Canadian soil.

In view of the fact that in more recent years there has been a strong body of public opinion in Western Canada opposed to indiscriminate immigration, and to mass immigration on a colonization basis, the question is one which deserves very careful consideration in the light of all facts available and of the probable results before any definite decision is reached.

Factors To Be Considered

While the humanitarian aspect of the question is one which undoubtedly will weigh heavily in the minds of a great many people there are other factors which must also be given consideration and these are of an economic, financial and political kind of the problem.

That the national committee has carefully weighed these phases of the question in quite evident in the brief submitted to the government, for on those bases they have presented some strong arguments in support of their plea for permission for a substantial number of these refugees to seek refuge in this country and to give them an opportunity to rehabilitate themselves in Canada.

Considering the question from an economic standpoint, the committee points out for example that many of them have been skilled workers in their respective trades, that many of them are highly educated business and professional men and have the initiative and courage to start and develop new industries, that their trades included artisans in pottery, glassware, fine leatherwork, many forms of chemicals, specialized textiles and dyes, and other specialized lines for which there are vested interests, and that with their capital they will be in a position not only to create new industries but to give employment in some of our own unemployed in support of their contentions, the committee states that 11,000 refugee Jews who have migrated to Great Britain have established industries giving employment to 10,000 Englishmen, between them.

To what extent immigrants of this class, if permitted to enter, would settle in Western Canada, it would be difficult to say though undoubtedly some of them would gravitate to the west, but in any case the fact which they could bring to bear upon the development of the natural resources and convert them into sound products and the extent to which they could make use of their skilled knowledge in such fields would determine their value to the country. Some of the professional men would undoubtedly be a great asset to make some contribution to the sum of scientific knowledge and practice.

"The technical skill of the Czechoslovak refugees from the Sudeten areas," the committee reports, "is based upon long training in one of the most technical systems in the world which demanded eight years school education, three years apprenticeship and the completion of high technical courses. From such sources," the committee adds, "could be selected the experiences who would be permitted to enter Canada under conditions which would ensure that they would not become charges on the public."

* * *

Not A Subversive Influence

As for the political consequences of such immigration, it is pointed out that at least the great majority of these refugees are in their present plight because of the suppression of the democratic form of government to which Canada is bent and to which the people of this country subscribe and it is, therefore, a reasonable assumption that they are not likely to be a disturbing political element nor to lend their support to those who would upset the Canadian form of government, especially after their experience in the old country.

As intimated at the outset the question is one which is deserving of careful consideration since it appears likely that some policy in relation to these people will have to be reached in the near future. If they are to be allowed to come to these shores and to make their home here, it is assumed that it be on the basis of careful selectivity, to ensure that results in the future will not be regrettable.

Temptation To Criminals

Two Mong Revolvers In The Hands Of Private Citizens

The Commissioner of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, according to his annual report registered crimes during the year of 103,289 pickets and convictions to private ownership, safe deposit boxes, banks and business houses.

Commissioner Wood points out that "whether they have any really good reason for retaining these weapons."

As Commissioner Wood points out, pistols and revolvers are the cause of many fatal accidents in homes often "form the source from which criminals obtain their first weapon with which to commit other crimes."

In many instances," he says, through the present registration law it has been possible to trace back to their original owners weapons in the possession of men not under arrest, pending the completion of investigations.

The Commissioner reports that registration of revolvers in the hands of private citizens has facilitated the tracking down of criminals, and that in so many cases, it has undoubtedly so long as this enormous source of supply remains in force, police guns will find their way to criminal hands and crime will flourish. Control of registered weapons should give thought to the Commissioner's words. Do they feel they are justified in retaining these guns which serve no useful purpose in peaceful civil life as a constant temptation to criminals?—Ottawa Journal.

Spirit Of Pioneers Badly Needed In World Today

If inheritance and environmental together shape the destiny of men, then these agential virtues become an institution, perseverance and determination are without any equivalent whatever. In spite of what hack-saw and psychologists preach, men and women have risen in great heights and carried with them the handicap of poor environments and soul-killing surroundings

There is much talk about what the country is doing for youth and too little thought given to what youth are doing for their country. It is not fair to deny youth an opportunity for service and a place in the economic and industrial world. How ever, youth can never be denied nor permanently kept down. Natural instinct will assert itself.

There is nothing says that if youth is denied opportunity they will not manufacture itself by natural methods. Youth will find a place in the world and will not be denied. Its own environment will be it for good or bad. Youth will not be denied. Instinctively youth is found by its own natural instinct.

The world is what it is because it has been shaped by the pioneering spirit of the past generations. They did a great work when it was almost as hard as now to get a start in life.

There is a tendency in these times for youth, and for adults as well to expect something from the government or from anybody handed to them. Whatever gains are made are generally where dole and relief have been supplemented by the spirit of work supported by initiative courage, and determination, in fact becoming a thing of the past.—Farmer's Advocate.

SHARP PAINS SHOT THROUGH KNEES

Woman Suffered 10 Years

Since coming here from England 10 years ago with a husband and children, I have suffered badly from rheumatic pains. I bought medicine between times, but it only gave me temporary relief. I was told to get "Dodd's Kidney Pills" and after using the first box I felt much better. To-day I'd try that! By this time my pains had practically left me and the aches in my back and legs terrible. I am a firm believer in Dodd's Kidney Pills and took a bottle of every one of them. They did me more good than anything. It had no effect. But its true and my friends give it a chance to act. Well I did and be in many instances," he says, through the present registration law it has been possible to trace back to their original owners weapons in the possession of men not under arrest, pending the completion of investigations.

Finland Preserving Forests

Making Sure This Source Of Wealth Will Be Continuous

Finland is farming its forests. It is getting only as much timber as will grow naturally within the year — and in this fashion hopes to keep its forests as a continual source of wealth, said Miss Meekins, director of the Finnish Forest Service, and Dr. Elmo Smart, professor of Forest Economics at the University of Nebraska on a visit to Canada.

Both are making an investigation of canadian methods of timber growing.

"We have a well-organized profession in this contingent Professor Smart said. "Here in Finland have other things and have got certain principles of work, either from our own experience or from natural inclination.

"The old saying says that if there is a path where it will soon appear of itself by natural modification of the feet that pass there. In the same way the forest will tend to do as it pleases if we will but do as it pleases if we will but do as it pleases if we will but

COMMUNITY PRESS

To the Ratepayers of Lacombe
M.D. No. 300.

Ladies and Gentlemen—Permit us to point out to you a specific advantage in having a Community Press. This paper is fortunately located in a district that is largely made up of people who are members of the U.F.A. Since the organization has decided to abandon politics, its membership is rapidly increasing all over the district. Consequently it is of the greatest importance to the executives of the U.F.A. and to the membership that a medium exists that will enable them to convey to the members of their society such information as will be to their advantage and interest, keeping them in touch with the policies of the U.F.A.

The Farmers' Organization is one of our best outside advertisers and it will be of distinct advantage to the officials if, through one publication, they can reach every ratepayer in this municipality.

Not only will it be of advantage to the U.F.A. executives but it will be of equal importance to the membership to know that through their own local paper they can keep in touch with the objectives of their organization (both local and provincial) and govern themselves accordingly.

The U.U.G. is another organization that wants to keep in close touch with farmers. They, too, are good advertisers and offer many suggestions that are worth noting.

Both these organizations have the farmers' interests at heart, both politically and economically, and are engaged in furthering the cause of those who make their living as primary producers.

GET BUSY

Every farm organization in the West is working to save the pegged price of wheat at 80c. A reason is spreading that the price for the 1930 crop may be as low as 60c a bushel for No. 1 at Fort William. This spells disaster for the western farmer. It will mean that Alberta farmers will only get about 41 or 42c a bushel—less than the cost of production. The U.F.A. has started a campaign with a view of organizing support for a policy of protection of the wheat growers' position. The suggestion is being made that every farmer, or groups of farmers, should write to the Minister of Agriculture, Hon. J. G. Gardiner, and demand at least 60c a bushel for wheat.

There is a gang of C.P.R. "yes" men in Toronto who are issuing propaganda in favor of handing the C.N.R. over to the C.P.R. Among other statements they make is that the C.N.R. did not pay operating costs 1921-'22-'23. Here is the record of the C.N.R. announced that the C.N.R. has always paid operating costs, and we will take their word against the opposition, who are quite likely in the pay of the C.P.R. At any point they neglected to mention is that they have been paying the dividends of the C.P.R. and to buy Consolidated from R. B. Bennett, that President, to keep the dividends of his office.

Alberta Women Honored

Pictures of five Alberta women received with a cheer for members of their sex the right to be recognized as "persons" were presented to the provincial government, Tuesday, at a ceremony in the council chamber of the legislative buildings. The gift was received and accepted in behalf of the government by Premier Alex. Barr.

"Because it is a pleasure to give credit where credit is due and honor where honor is due," the premier said, "we are delighted to accept these pictures to hang in the halls of the legislative buildings."

The political pioneers so honored were Mrs. Irene Parlby of Alix, Mrs. Nellie McClung of Victoria, the late Mrs. Emily Murphy of Edmonton, the late Mrs. Louise McKinney of Claresholm, and the late Mrs. O. C. Edwards of Medicine Hat.

Rev. J. C. Roberts, lieutenant-governor, and Hon. Mr. Brown, as well as the premier and Mr. Lucas himself, were present at the ceremony, which was attended also by relatives and friends of the women honored, members of the Local Council of Women, and others.

IN MEMORIAM

In Memory of Mr. Henry Hagyer, of Iyer, who passed away on March 7th, 1930.

Days of sadness still come o'er us,
Tears, in silence, often flow,
For memory keeps you ever near us,
Though you died three years ago.
The midnight stars are shining
Upon your silent grave,
Beneath it sleeps our dear father
From whom we could not save.
Sometimes a note of an old-fashioned song,
Brings us a thought of you;
Sometimes a flower as we pass along,
Or a sky of azure blue.
Or a silver lining in the clouds
When the sun shines purpling through
When the evening shades are falling
And we sit in quiet, alone
To our heart there come a longing
If you could only come home.
Friends may think we have forgotten
When at times they see us smile,
But their smile hides the heart-ache
Our smiles hide all the while.
The flowers we place upon your grave
May wither and decay
But love for you, dear father, who sleeps beneath
Will never fade away.
—A Friend of the Family.

"A Pig in a Poke"

IN early days the word poke, meaning a bag, pouch or sack, was commonly used. We've told that a favorite trick on fairs was to tie a cat in a bag and sell it as a genuine lure for a nothing pig. If he opened the sack at the fair he "let the cat out of the bag." If he didn't discover the deception till he got home, he was laughed at for buying "a pig in a poke."

There's no such thing as "a pig in a poke" at EATON'S. Before each Catalogue is printed the experts in the EATON Research Bureau read every statement as to goods regarding all the merchandise presented. Hence, if we say or picture All-Wool—it is All-Wool. There's nothing vague or misleading in anything that can be taken two ways. Always, you KNOW what you're getting.

That's why, at railway stations, docks and airports in the West, you see mail bags by the hundred marked for the use from EATON'S—proof positive of the confidence our customers have in us.

What might have been a serious fire was averted by the quick action of Mrs. H Channon, on Friday of last week. The little boy got hold of some matches, and his aim crib on fire. Fortunately the mother was not far away. When she arrived on the scene the bedding on one end of the crib was on fire and the little fellow was standing by on the other end. However, quick action soon overcame the trouble and the little boy was never frightened than here. A few minutes further delay would have been disastrous to the whole building.

U.F.A.

A meeting was held in the U.F.A. hall, Thursday, 9th March, which heard interesting addresses on Co-operation and the Wheat Pool.

The meeting was held in the interests of the far-ming Community, but as is so often the case, the majority of the farming community was unconscious of the meeting. It is due to the credit of the Alix district that when Speakers take the trouble to come here to discuss matters vital to farming, that farmers will not take the trouble to rouse out and hear them. The speakers were Mr. Gradon from the Wheat Pool, and Mr Stewart representing the U.F.A.

Mr. Gradon explained the Quota System of marketing wheat. If 30 per cent were not willing to subscribe to the Quota system, there would be a further acreage to Quota according to individual circumstances Mr. Stewart spoke of the necessity of a strong membership in the U.F.A. to put pressure on the Government in order to continue the Wheat Board and the minimum price. A motion, a thing the Government to continue the Board and the minimum price was unanimously passed, and the Secretary instructed to forward it to Ottawa.

WAKE UP FARMERS!

Now that the U.F.A. has definitely and absolutely gone out of Politics, and no longer a party Economic body, but an Educational Body, we sincerely hope that all farmers will take a keen interest in forming a Political Party to engage in it.

Individuals can belong to any political party that suits them, and be active and loyal members of the U.F.A. The U.F.A. is not to interfere with the Personal Political opinions of its members, but to unite them in a solid body to fight for the principles for which the U.F.A. was formed.

Alberta and at the present time, and only 2052 have seen fit to join their own organization the U.F.A.

It does not take much imagination to realize what a power for better economic conditions could be e-xhibited by 60,000 United farmers. No fiber cement could afford to refuse their requests.

All other industries are professions have their Unions loyally supported and their interests conserved.

Why don't farmers organize combine to protect their interests?

To make the U.F.A. a real power and 100 per cent efficient it is necessary that every individual farmer join up.

Be individual Farmer if you are content with present conditions, by all means stay where you are, but if you are not content, join the farmers' organization where object is to improve your conditions and help you out of your difficulties.

Every individual who joins adds to the efficiency of the organization Everyone who holds back lessens it.

W PARLBY.

Canada and the Next War

If there are two questions more than any others more frequently on the lips or in the background of the minds of the great majority of Canadians, and have been since the crisis of September 1938, they are these "When is the next big war likely to break out?" and "When it does, will Canada be in it?"

The first question presupposes the opinion that sooner or later—and generally sooner—an outbreak of hostilities on a large scale is inevitable. Certainly if a part of the reasons could be taken for granted, much more would be found in support of the contention that war is in the offing and that were appeals to have continued more firmly since the Munich pact was signed.

The great majority of the people of this country hope, of course, that there will be no major conflict in which Canada may or may not become involved, but as the trend of European events and policies since the Munich pact indicate themselves, hope wears thin and yields to doubt; and in turn gives place to unwelcome certainty in the minds of many.

With this state of belief pervading the natural question in sequence is "when?" and this is a question which most avoid for an answer upon events yet to come and the results of policies which are now being pursued by the nations of the world, and others which may be devised and put into effect in the immediate future. In the light of the many unknown factors involved it would take more than a prophet to give an accurate and reliable answer to the question.

* * * *

Sir Thomas Wardle

If the first question must go unanswered, it appears almost as difficult to give an unequivocal reply to the other query "Will Canada be a participant in the next great general war?"

It may be stated without fear of contradiction that the majority of the people of this country do not want to participate in any war in which they would adopt the role of aggressors nor are they anxious to have to take up arms as a defensive measure but in the latter case there may be no choice in the matter. Circumstances over which this country has no control, might easily arise in a general conflagration, which would force the issue, so far as Canada is concerned. This is a contingency which cannot be overlooked when this question is canvassed.

Apart altogether from such questions as expediency, necessity or even moral obligation, the matter of popular sentiment is an important factor in deciding whether or not a country shall take up arms or in the alternative make concessions to the extent perhaps of great sacrifices to preserve the peace. In an aggregate equation X may be an unknown quantity but if it is stated that the popular sentiment is not only unanimous but overwhelmingly in favor of participation in a war in the event of Britain becoming involved in a European war. The answer may "Yes" or a firm to one major question was answered in the negative to a survey made before the Peace of Munich.

Since significantly illustrative of the change in public opinion in a few months is the following. To the question in Fortune's survey, how would the democratic powers, including the U.S., now stand firm together at any cost to prevent Hitler or Mussolini from taking any more territory at the expense of other nations?" The poll, regarded as an accurate cross section of opinion, registered the following result: Yes, 56.3 per cent., No, 21.0 per cent.; don't know, 12.7 per cent.

Mussolini On Canada

It undoubtedly affords Canadians a good deal of satisfaction to know too, that public opinion in the United States strongly supports the comparatively recent utterances of some of their public leaders to the effect that they would not stand idly on the side lines if Canada were attacked by foreign aggressors. This, also was demonstrated in Fortune's January survey when 73.1 per cent. of opinion canvassed expressed willingness to take up arms to protect Canada from invasion.

Canada has a long way from the theatre of war in the 1914-18 conflict, but in another conflict it is quite possible that warfare might be carried to the end of this country. In such an event it would be very interesting to the people of this country if they had to rely entirely upon the friendly feeling of a good and powerful neighbor without being able to strike a blow in their own defence, because they had no arms available.

With the world situation as it is to-day and the gloomy outlook over seas it would seem the part of wisdom for Canada to strengthen her defence forces to at least a reasonable extent.

Bridge Work

New York Princess Exhibits Dental Job At Clubs

We know a girl who has spent the past three months buying some sparkling intricate bridgework installed The last time she visited the dentist, for a final checkup, he told her, with a good deal of embarrassment, that he had a great favor to ask of her

Enquiries as how as proud of the job that he wanted to exhibit it at a dental clinic The girl certainly agreed to appear and says now that it was really lots of fun She sat on a platform with three or four other decidedly notable people, opening her mouth for all comers.

"Do you mind?" they would say, and she'd say, "Not at all." Then they would produce pocket flashlights and peer in at her bridge, with little cries of admiration. The girl says she'd never had any other thrilling last time.—The New Yorker.

Lower Accident Rate

United States Reduces Accidental Deaths In 1938

The United States showed accidental deaths in 10,000 from 1937, and the greatest improvement ever recorded in a single year the National Safety Council announced. The provisional figure was the lowest since 1926. Accident prevention programmes were successful everywhere except in the home. For the first time in a decade home accidents exceeded the nation's traffic deaths.

The second and home accidents increased two per cent. from 32,500 to 33,000 in 32,000 last year while traffic fatalities dropped 10 per cent from 39,643 in 1937 to 32,000 during 1938. They represented a saving of 7,643 lives.

The traffic death decline was not due to less travel for motor vehicle mile-age was as great in 1938 as the year before," the council explained.

Only 35 persons were killed last year while operating aircraft, the safest domestic air flights averaged with 53 in 1937, a 33 per cent. reduction. Passenger deaths totalled 35, a rate of four deaths per 100,000,000 passenger miles.

Death from steam railroad accidents during the first 10 months last year amounted to 4,753, a decrease of 10 per cent from the 1937 total of 5,286. The number of deaths per million increase in deaths was for passengers riding in buses, which rose from 12 to 45 largely because of the Mountain View motor bus loss.

Accidental deaths during 1938 the accidental death rate per 100 000 population was 78.0, each hour betrayed by only a s r years above 1909

Coal Mined In Year Would Fill Train 4,000 Miles Long

If all the coal produced in Canada in one year were loaded into freight cars and these coupled together, the train would reach half a million miles, a distance sufficient to encircle the earth 20 times, or reach from Montreal to Vancouver and back again. According to announcement of the Canadian National Magazine. Writing on mining in the Canadian National Magazine he points out that the structural materials cement, sand and gravel stone in last year's mining program was valued at $17,000,000 more than enough from Montreal to Vancouver and a train carrying the other non-metallics asbestos, gypsum, quartz, salt, sulphur would reach from Montreal to Halifax.

It is estimated that copper production in Canada in 1938 will be 450 000 000 pounds, a record, from the Sudbury district which would be nearly two miles long and one of the blue producing areas in the world, two and a half miles long. The Canadian nickel industry has a capacity of 300,000,000 pounds a year, which is more than the world consumption of nickel in any year before 1937. Canada's production of nickel was about 24 000 000 pounds.

COURAGE

The editor of the Lacombe Globe takes a rather short sighted view of the emigration of 2,000 Sudeten Germans from their native land to Canada. We need more population in this country—lots more. What are 2,000 people to a country like this? It would be better still if the number were 20,000. The Germans are a fine class of people. We mean the real Germans—not the counterfeits that follow Hitler. These people are not coming as paupers. They are complying with the laws of Canada which literally state that anyone with $1,500 capital may enter our country, provided they can pass the health authorities.

Let us show a little faith in these people. They have been weighed in the balance and, like the brave people they are, have have sacrificed all their material possessions rather than be the slaves of a dictator. That is the kind of people we need in Alberta—people who have demonstrated their loyalty to Democratic institutions.

Courage and faith will take us further than timidity and fear; boldness is better than cowardice in a case like this. Nothing ventured, nothing won.

If the pioneers of Alberta and other eastern provinces had had no more courage than some of our western editors this country would not be a howling wilderness. Being armed with faith and confidence they came here—and won.

Science And Agriculture

Perhaps never in the history of Western Canada has what is currently designated the agricultural problem received as much attention as it is doing at the present time, but the problems of enabling the farmer to reap a margin of profit on his operations, even sufficient to cover the cost of production and marketing has not yet been solved.

To a greater or less degree the problem is one that is vexing the whole world, for the agricultural industry is in the doldrums in almost every country on the globe, but due to the character of the industry in Western Canada where the farmer must sell his meager product in a highly competitive market and buy the requirements of production and necessities of life in a protected industrial sphere the problem to more acute here than anywhere and this difficulty has been accentuated in recent years by the vagaries of climatic conditions.

It is not, therefore, surprising to find that the question is uppermost in the minds of all men in the west; that it is receiving foremost attention wherever and whenever men congregate in convention, that the question is being wrestled with greater fervency than any other in the legislative assemblies of the country, that discussions on it and many phases of it occupies much space in the newspapers, from magazines and other periodicals issued and that it is the subject of inquiry by innumerable organizations and commissions.

With all this discussion going on, on a subject which everyone more nigh nor less vitally one in Western Canadian history, it seems a remarkable assumption that if there is a solution, and there must be one if this country is to prosper and have an assured future, it will be found.

As has been suggested before, innumerable proposals have been made as a solution to the great problem. They include ane-ag other, international agreements between the great wheat producing countries, sectional action in the form of subsidization of the agricultural industry by the country as a whole, a method which is now being given a trial with as yet indeterminate result, the discovery of new markets, the expansion of existing markets, the stimulation of the home market in the direction of increased consumption, greater diversification of agricultural practice, the conversion of agricultural production to industrial use.

In Several Directions

Whole volumes might be written on all these proposals, all of which have some merit and some defects but space and time forbid. Let us turn our other plans for the rehabilitation of western agriculture are being heard by the group headed by Premier Bracken of Manitoba, which is now making a comprehensive survey of the whole question in the hope of finding the answer to the riddle.

As has been suggested before however it is probable that the ultimate solution of this engrossing problem does not lie wholly in any one of these orbits, but most likely in a combination of many or all of them and there are some indications that readjustment in actually taking place painful and lengthy though the process may be.

It has undoubtedly occurred to many who have given serious thought and study to this problem that at least a partial and a happy solution might be found in some course which would result in a closer relationship between agriculture and the manufacturing industries, for to the extent which these two branches of industrial life can be made dependent upon one another, to that extent will both be benefited and the solution of the problems of both be closer to solution.

A Closer Tie-Up

That is something is being done along these lines as the result of recent efforts and the practical application of laboratory findings, was indicated in a recent confirmation in the House of Commons by W. G. Weir, Liberal Minister for MacDonald, who described some of the things science is doing to bring industry and agriculture together in the United States.

Mr. Weir pointed out that Henry Ford is using in his factories enormous quantities of cotton, 400,000 bushels of corn, 2,500,000 gallons of molasses, 1,200,000 pounds of wool 1,200,000 square feet of lumber 250,000 pounds of rubber and an unlimited supply of soya beans.

Mr. MacDonald stated that three products have been developed from oats and are now being sold in the United States — flour and flour with possible preserving qualities, a pleasing perfume which is competing assuredly for a share of the $800,000,000 spent yearly in the U.S. for cosmetics, and furfural, which when mixed with a bituminous binder and dirt, is being used in the satisfactory market roads at a cost of $2,500 a mile."

"Alcohol," said Mr. MacDonald, "is now successfully made from corn, sorghums, barley, rye, wheat, and potatoes. Gasoline carrying ten per cent. of this type of alcohol is now being sold to 2,000 U.S. filling stations at prices competitive with gasoline," and quoted an authority for the statement that "within ten years the U.S. will be using 20 per cent of such grain alcohol blended with gasoline for motor cars, and that within 20 years this industry will be producing 50 million gallons of 'agricoals' at a selling price of 10 cents per gallon and employing a million handsome profits."

Mr. MacDonald made his citation in support of a plea for the expenditure of further money and money for research work, a plea which should be considered in the light of results that have been achieved on the other side of the international boundary and the necessity of applying science to the peculiar problems of Western Canadian agriculture.

FRIDAY, MAR. 20, 1925

The C.N.R. and Amalgamation

Canadian materials and supplies to the value of $61,000,000 were purchased during 1923 by the C. N. railways from some 9,000 firms throughout the Dominion. The C. N. R. continues to be the largest buyer of Canadian materials. That is accounted for by the fact that they have almost one-third more mileage to maintain and operate in Canada than that of any other railroad. Of the $61,000,000 expenditure, approximately $11,000,000 was for new equipment and $10,000,000 for fuel from Canadian mines.

There are two statements current to bring about amalgamation. One is called "unification" and the other "compulsory cooperation". Mr. Beatty admits that "compulsory unification" means "bilkation in disguise." Hungerford states that the C. N. R. during the period from 1923 to 1937 (inclusive) earned it's full operating expenses, plus an excess of operating revenue over operating expenses of $481,000,000, or an average of $34,000,000 per annum.

The heavy burden of interest charges is the result of a former Government (Meighen) taking over five major railway systems (all virtually bankrupt) and assuming outstanding obligations of more than a billion dollars, and in such a run down condition that some $400,000,000 had to be spent to put them in operating condition. All this enormous debt was saddled on to the C.N. R. by politicians. Any agreement that the C. P. R. does not relieve the taxpayer of this burde . It still has to be paid. The C. P. R. is helping to pay it, when over a period of 15 years it was able to hand over to the Government an average net operating surplus of $34,500,000. If the C. P. R. got hold of the system would they contribute to that month? Not in a million years. Under their present franchise, they are supposed to return to the Government all earnings in excess of their actual requirements, to pay back to the Government some of the $180,000,000 already returned to them to build the road. Will they do this? Not a nickle has ever been returned. They would rather take it and run, and put it on their road-bed than give say back to the Government. Which helped them when there were in such dire need.

The Government has already paid out since 1919 over $60,000,000 in relief. Under the C. P.R. unification idea they propose to abandon 1,600 miles of rail way lines, which would mean the displacement of 20 to 40 thousand workers. Add these to the relief roll and how many more will still be on be? It really means that the wage-roll would be do owned in order to increase the dividend payments and Canada would be the loser just to that extent. Of the C.P.R. stock 61.13 per cent of the preference stock is held outside Canada.

Jack Walgar won the novice amateur light- heavy-weight wrestling title of Alberta. The contest was held in Edmonton recently. This makes him eligible for further events at Wetaskiwin. Jack resides in the Mountain City Belair.

CORRESPONDENCE

" Be not the dumb, driven cattle,
Be a hero to the earth."

These words of Longfellow are very appropriate to the farmer of today. There is no excuse for it except the apathy of the individual. Success is particularly like a salty cow, one cannot be satisfied by those who eat the prize be gets for what he does. Another by those who eat the price of what he buys. A cow is not fed to be milked. The ranch, which is nearly sliced, is all that is left for himself. Farmers must be organized to be successful. Even the organization is not perfect. Unity and Co-Operation.

The U. F. A., stands now nation, for these the opportunity. These are the days of opportunity. Success waits for the organized farmer with his co-operative and devine sense of unity.

There are some 50 000 farmers in Alberta. At present only about 5 000 are paid up members of the U. F. A., a large minority. It does not take much imagination to guess what the result of a election would be if all the 50,000 were working together instead of a few. Co-operation is the foundation of success, devine success. The remedy is Unity and Co-Operation.

RECIPES

BRAISED SHORT RIBS

To each pound of meat, allow about 1 cup water and 1 teaspoonful salt. Season the meat then brown in hot fat in kettle, turning meat at end of first hour. Add more water if necessary during cooking to prevent burning. Cook slowly until tender, allowing most of the liquid cooked to evaporate. Remove meat to hot platter, thicken gravy if desired, let cook for about half an hour, season to taste and pour over the meat. Garnish with parsley.

Experimenting In Socialization

State medical care and hospitalization on province-wide basis has not yet been put into operation in any of the Canadian prairie provinces, though in one or two of these provinces have preparatory legislation on the statute books. Announcement or proclamation of the hospitalization plan may come when the time may be suggested which is probably another step of saying when the provincial government can see its way clear to financing such a project.

In other provinces the demand for province-wide state medicine is growing to volume and vociferousness and the time may not be far distant when one or another of these provinces will adopt a measure to meet the needs—and bring some of the climate for it.

The persistent call for provincial state medical aid and hospitalization is one of the outcroppings of the depression decade from which it is to be hoped the west is about to emerge. Its successful operation, however, is dependent among other things upon proper financing and, of course, it is not surprising to find that governments are loath to undertake new projects involving a large amount of money at the outset, at a time when people are unable to pay existing levies for other services and when, as a result, governments are heavily in debt which they are unable to meet.

It is largely because of the lack of private income that people are pressing such urged requests for provincial medical and hospitalization plans. Taxation and a lot of sundry fees for the same reason that governments are chary about embarking in new ventures of this nature at a time when they are most needed.

When and if the country is again prosperous and governments can more readily commit themselves to finance projects of this kind, the state medicine and hospitalization will somewhat diminish and it will be interesting to see whether or not, on that account, the demand for it will die down if, in the mean time, the governments have not yielded to the pressure that is now being brought to bear upon them.

Socialized Medicine

In the meantime experimentation in group medical and hospitalization is being carried on in the west, both on municipal and cooperative lines on a smaller scale. The success, or otherwise, of this experimentation will be watched with much interest, not only by participants in the various schemes of such measures but by the entire populace of the west.

Within the past twelve months several groups in the larger centres have organized medical benefit societies in the hope of securing medical and hospital services for their members at reduced rates as a result of co-operative bargaining power and are financing their plans by flat rate monthly levies upon the membership, thus organizing costs of sickness under a budgeting plan. Most of these organizations, purely voluntary in character have not been in operation long enough to be able to determine whether or not they will be successful, and in fact, most of them are yet in the embryo stage.

On the other hand, the spring will see the first state medical and hospitalization project in Western Canada, perhaps the first in the Dominion, put into effect on a municipal compulsory basis

The electors of the Rural Municipality of McKillop in Saskatchewan "voted" in November to embark on a municipal state health scheme by a 96 per cent majority poll. The rural municipality embraces one town and two villages and these urban units are considering with the municipality to set up the first health insurance district in the province to cover a complete range of medical and hospital services, including surgical and X-ray work and medicines for all the residents of the district. The plan is being financed by an annual levy of $5 on every resident of the rural municipality and of the town and the two villages payable quarterly in advance. Agreements have been made with two physicians resident in the town to take care of all the medical requirements of a population of 3,350 and negotiations for hospitalization are under way with two city hospitals outside the boundaries of the municipality.

* * *

Will Be Closely Watched

This municipal scheme is compulsory on the residents of the municipality and will be administered by a district board of [illegible] members, and "one" [illegible]

Provincial legislation is required to authorize the imposition of the proposed levy and this, it is said, has been promised and will be sufficiently wide to enable other municipalities within the province to launch similar measures on a unit of the electors.

Since this is a compulsory, once it has been adopted by a vote of the electors and is, therefore, closely akin to a full fledged provincially financed measure on state medical and hospitalization schemes, although on a smaller scale, its operations will be watched with keen interest throughout the entire west. If it should prove a success, doubtless other municipalities will adopt a similar measure at the first opportunity, and it is quite possible that in this manner a municipal project may grow into a province-wide measure.

Many factors will determine the success, or otherwise of this first municipal venture. They include the ability and willingness of the ratepayers to pay the levy as and when required, the confidence of the people in the doctors which have been selected and the co-operation of the hospitals with which agreements are being made and the nature of the agreements with both doctors and hospitals

Two Of A Kind

The right hand of Mona Lisa, painted by Leonardo da Vinci, is said to be the most perfect hand ever painted.

The virtue and the spice were walking together at the evening's service. Suddenly the virtue, very peeved, burst out

"Did you hear Robinson singing in church this morning?"

"Yes, I did," replied the Spice's reply. "The wonderful wake up to"

The world's record for whirlwind departures is still held, Cook's believe, by one woman who took a round-the-world cruise on two-and-a-half days' notice.

Game Regulations Are Rigid In Regard To Trappers

Game regulations are rigid in the Northwest Territories, according to the Department of the Northern Game Regulations, according to the Department of Mines and Resources, Ottawa. With the exception of the recently [illegible] Mounted Police are never present regulations penalty aircraft may only be used by trappers as a means of transporting [illegible] to and from the points of outfitting and the trapper's base camps Every trapper using aircraft for transportation purposes is required to complete an additional setting out [illegible] of his trap line during particulars concerning his [illegible] operations. In the Mackenzie Mountains [illegible] the use of aircraft for transportation in connection with trapping is prohibited.

The regulation of the use of aircraft by trappers is necessary to the welfare of the native population of the Territories which depends to a large extent upon the game and fur-bearing animals for a livelihood. Until comparatively recent years many of the Indians and Eskimos of the North were virtually wild life wanderers who saw no law but their own unscrupulous by ordinary means of travel Airplane transportation has made it possible for trappers prospectors tourists and others to reach these outlying regions, with [illegible] time to time revisions of the regulations have been necessary to provide adequate protection for wild life At present [illegible] and trapping in the Northwest Territories is practically restricted to natives and half-breeds as licences to other persons are issued only to quainted residents of the district holding hunting and trapping licences.

THE PRE. ENTION OF SLEEPING SICKNESS IN HORSES

Should the Equine Encephalomyelitis disease occur in Alberta this year and follow the course that it has taken elsewhere, we may expect it to be of a more virulent form and more wide spread than it was during the past season when it occured in more or less restricted areas For these reasons it is essential that farmers and horsemen acquire all the information they can regarding the preventive measures that may be taken

Vaccination has been found to be the most effective method of control Experiments conducted in Canada and the United States upheld this statement The administration of vaccine, however, is a preventive, treatment and a cure, and vaccination to be effective must be done before the disease is contracted

The first and only manufactory vaccine was developed for use on a large scale in 1928 It is known as "Chick" vaccine and large quantities of it are now available in the prairie provinces under a co-operative arrangement made between the governments of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, and the manufacturers, the Leeds Laboratories in New York, and Cutters Laboratories in Berkely, California.

Vaccine will be available at drug stores, new legal offices and from registered veterinarians all schedule for the vaccine has been made in districts where the veterinarian is not available arrangements have been made for some other authorized person to receive special instructions on the proper procedure for vaccinating animals

Authorities agree that horses in foal may be vaccinated with safety, providing the vaccine is properly administered. Young foals are very susceptible to the disease, and the Department recommends that they be vaccinated when two or three days old providing they are weaned at the time. Only about one quarter of the doses for an adult horse should be administered to a young foal.

In conclusion, the Department of Agriculture strongly urges that all horse owners vaccinate their horses with "Chick" vaccine during the month of April. If this is done, there will be little chance of an outbreak causing appreciable losses and owners may forget their worries in regard to the danger of the disease is confirmed.

The sudden death on Tuesday, March 25, of Mrs. R. V. Chambers came as a great shock to the family. Mrs. Chambers took sick on Saturday, but was not thought capable of danger She has been in poor health for some weeks, but all were hopeful for her eventual recovery. The direct cause of her death was heart trouble, but this was hastened by an attack of acute indigestion. She passed away quietly in her sleep at 1.30 on Thursday afternoon. The deceased was in her 58th year, She leaves to mourn her loss her husband; four daughters, Mrs. Glenn Rank, Mexico; Mrs. Bert Richards, High River; Mrs Arnold Bellier, Calgary; Mrs. Peter Rath, Los Angeles, four sons, Messrs. THE WORLD OF WHEAT
(B. L. Strange)

There has never been, I suppose, in the whole history of Western agriculture, a time when there were so many wheat varieties available to the farmer.

This very abundance of good things may, however, bring difficulties for many farmers. re experimenting, by growing a number of these varieties Such experimenting I suggest, from my own personal experience, must be done with the greatest of care, otherwise farmers may find their crops becoming badly mixed.

Most wheat varieties tend naturally to cross with each other; whenever this occurs a variable stream of hybrids are thrown off many of them poor in yield and poor in quality. Year after year these undesirable new strains increase, reaching eventually in severe money losses to the farmer.

Different varieties of wheat grown on one farm, therefore, should be kept separate from each other by a wide runway, either of clean land, or by a drill row of Oats, and even then the greatest of care must be taken in seeding, harvesting and threshing, so that the different varieties do not become mixed with each other.

It is much better, however, I suggest, for a farmer to grow only one variety on a large scale, and then let the Institutions do the experimental work.

OF LOCAL INTEREST

"The Middle Watch" a 3-act Comedy, is being put on in Legion Hall, Alix, by local talent, on Thursday and Friday April 13 and 14. A dance will be held in the hall after Friday nights performance. A supper will be provided. Adults 50c: Children 25c: Dance 25c including supper. The affair is being sponsored by officials of St. Pancras Church, Alix. local talent usually draws a good house and we believe this will be no exception.

There has been a small-pox scare in our district this past week. But there is only one definite case. A man named Alex Larkin, eight miles south of Alix, has been sent to the Lacombe hospital and by doctors to be a small pox victim. Dr. Warren has vaccinated up to Tuesday over 500 people and is still on the job. The following districts have had the people treated: Glen Cairn, Gadsby, Nook's Siding, Stanton, Carroll, Nevis, Bigsby, Alix. The authorities have taken small prompt action in the matter which there really is little anxiety or fear. The one patient was promptly isolated, and no one is allowed to enter the house is being closely watched.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

At all Christian Science Churches next Sunday, the subject of the Lesson-Sermon is "Unreality." The Golden Text is Proverbs 30:6. One of the Scriptural citations is "And Elisha prayed, and said Lord, I pray thee, open his eyes, that he may see" (II Kings 6:17). One of the corrective passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, is "What is termed material sense can report only a mortal temporary sense of things, whereas spiritual sense can hear witness only to Truth. To material sense, the moral is the real until this sense is corrected by Christian Science" (p. 298).

Mr. Wm. Briggs, Contact Man for the Treasury Branch from Edmonton, was in town on Tuesday and Wednesday interviewing the business men on accepting treasury vouchers. What success Mr. Briggs met with is questioned answer, although if the business men had all signed up we are of opinion there would have been less silence on the subject.

Sixty cent wheat at Fort William means 50c at Alix on basis of No. 1, No. 2, 3 or No. 4, 5c. From this deduct 5c. for crop insurance. Not per bushel to Alix farmer 35c. The farm income will sure have to tighten their belts at that price. Better grow grain only for feed. No wonder the wheat growers are booming Alix like a disturbed nest of hornets. But don't forget this is election year.

The Stettler farmers held a meeting recently to discuss the price of wheat and threatened that unless the Government gives them a higher price they will secede from the East, starting a Government of their own on all territory east of the Great Lakes. This is a mistake. Canada wants unity and will not take much stock in having in having the country split up.

Our weather during the past week has been varied and of season. We have had rain, snow and cold winds. We haven't heard of any farmer doing any seeding yet. However, agricultural activity rarely starts till after Easter, but that is near, and all hands will soon be busy again.

UNITY

Unity is a big question in Alberta but I cannot see that a man will drop his political beliefs whatever they may be, when he joins in any union movement. If so, he might as well be a political and intellectual cuuch and be done with it.

Unity does not mean identity. When Marshall Foch was appointed head of the allied armies, the armies did not become identical but homogeneous. Unity means a combination of men to effect some particular purpose and all that it demands is that there be no antagonism nor immoderacy among those who combine. But Unity is entirely a matter for constituencies and not for a group of men at Edmonton and Calgary.—Stettler Independent.

C.N.R. DEFICIT

A decrease in operating expenses of $3,434,000 in 1938, despite a heavy increase in wages and material costs, was reflected by the management of the Canadian National Railways, K. J. Hungerford, Chairman and President, stated in the annual report of the railway system submitted on behalf of the directors and tabled in the House of Commons today by Honorable C. D. Howe, Minister of Transport. The result of operations shows that this reduction in expenses was not sufficient, however, to offset the decline in gross operating revenues of $11,176,000 the continuation throughout the greater part of the year's operations of general business activity which began in the latter part of the previous year.

Conservation And Unemployment

Since the advent of the great depression and drought era now nearing its finish, the problems of the west have become more conscious of the value of trees and of their importance value and place in the economic life of this area.

During the decade of trial and tribulation residents of the province have witnessed, on what were areas have not escaped the ravages of drought, opportunities "brought here by the railroads or other plentiful crops" much true growth. This is mainly due to the investor conservation policy of which in the early days of settlement was given little attention or little reason and to some extent attributable to the fact that such districts by their very nature lend themselves more readily to large scale diversification.

As a result of these observations prairie residents have become more conscious of the part they play in the days prior to 1930 and this interest is reflected in the increased attendance at lectures delivered during the annual inspections of the Dominion government's forestry and tree planting policy carried on the laws interest which has developed in the work being done under the Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Act and by other organizations devoted to conservation work in various fields.

The public conscience having thus been aroused to the importance and the necessity of conservation of moisture it would appear that the time was ripe to achieve very generous support would be given to the various projects which the governments of the country both federal and provincial, might be prepared to undertake with the dual objective of conservation of moisture through soil-drifting rehabilitation and at least a partial solution of the unemployment problem. To the extent to which these two problems could be dealt with under a common project would hearty support be forthcoming for such a scheme or series of undertakings.

In The Right Direction

Just recently it was announced by the P.F.R.A. administration that all the newly created community pastures in Saskatchewan, Alberta and Manitoba, seventeen areas are to be reseeded game preserves and that custodians of these areas are to be given special training in handling such areas as part of a program on which the provincial government, the P.F.R.A. administration and Ducks Unlimited will co-operate.

The idea appears to be an excellent one but it might well be further extended to include a substantial program of tree planting in these communities particularly where conditions lend themselves to such a project thus widening the moisture conservation sphere of influence to adjoining farm lands and providing what to a substitute for sheet relief for many now on the relief rolls.

Such work however, need not and should not be confined to areas set aside primarily as community pastures and game preserves. It could and should be extended to Dominion and provincial parks and wasteland areas. Some of such work might appropriately be developed as playgrounds and tourist resorts affording a great deal of useful and valuable work for many now idle and creating assets which would ultimately restore some return to the country for the money thus expended. Coupled with the planting of trees would be the improvement of districts of existing natural growth.

Of Wide Value

Apart altogether from its value in agriculture in the field of moisture conservation as active and well thought out forestry program as exemplified by new plantings and improvement, preservation and care of existing plantations and of natural growth, would have an intrinsic value of great importance in the industrial and economic life of the country.

This was pertinently pointed out in the brief submitted last year to the Rowell Commission on Dominion-provincial relations by the Foundation of Ontario Naturalists in support of their contention that the Federal government should take over provincial natural resources as alternatively should aid the provinces in developing and conserving them, in the following words:

The general prosperity of the Canadian people and Canadian business, no matter in what province, both in amount of capital investment and possible recipients of relief, is of vital concern to the Federal government. It is astonishing

"How important, therefore that the Federal government should be concerned that raw materials be available for the construction and building industries, for packages, boxes, barrels, etc., of all kinds for the various Canadian produce to home and foreign markets to railways, telephone and telegraph companies for ties, poles and posts and thousand and one uses for props and other construction work, to factories for the manufacture of furniture, radios, tools, implements and the hundreds of other things too numerous to mention, for fuel and the many uses on the farm.

And again the same organization pointed out that "There is the possibility of employing relief recipients on forest improvement work, such as the building of roads, trails, fire lines brush disposal improving and creating tourist camp sites and conservation, etc., etc. There still remains a large unemployment problem of such work to be done.

Then why not use some of the millions being spent on relief to do some of the work and give work to those who have none?

An Old Chinese Story

To-Ho Shu Peach Blossom Source Watermark For Paper

Thirteen hundred years ago, during the Tang Dynasty a lazy fisherwoman sampling girl romantically suicide because love had pursued her by.

Behind her according to the old Chinese story she left a trail of beautiful poems written on airy slips of peach blossom paper and set Emperor Li Yu, lazy, romantic soul, had been attracted by her famed verses.

The girl Hsueh Tao, did not write poems at love, but only of sea-scapes agonized urging her admirers to seek greater things or were methods of administration. She married Wei Pei-poems with a drop of water which spread into the form of a peach blossom. This peach blossom watermark is still carried out of Shanghai's most popular brands of writing paper, the Hsueh Tao which is noted for its delicate texture.

Humanity during a visit to the gold's statue at Wang Chiang Lou where she drew the water for such ing flowers on the writing paper was discovered and conceived the idea of writing to the business and merchants at the front on peach blossom paper. Hundreds of thousands and winter-marked messages were launched from Chengtu of which was written a sort of encouragement

THE PROVINCIAL

LANDS ACT

During the early days of settlement in Alberta a system of homesteading was instituted under circumstances in which knowledge of farming conditions was not available fully to either individuals or the Government. Under it many settlers took up land without knowledge of soil or weather conditions, with the result that many areas unsuitable for farming were put to the plow. The results, judged by experience, have proven disastrous particularly in the drought areas from which many homesteaders have to be removed. A statement issued by Mr. J. Harvie, Deputy Ministers of Lands and Mines, shows that prior to March 1, 1930, 24,000 homesteads and soldier's grants have been granted since the government took over the natural resources on October 1, 1930. During this period, more than 9,000 entries have been cancelled out because either the lands or the settlers were not suited to agriculture. During the period referred to there was an increase, not, of approximately 5,0 0 grants but, for the same reasons, even some of these are not operative.

PURPOSES

The proposed amendments will enable the Minister of Lands and Mines to direct settlement of areas close to existing highways and social services and only on land available for agriculture. Under the amended Act, lands will be given to agriculturists who will live on them and establish homes there. The idea of the amendments is to replace the homesteading system with a long-term leasing arrangement with an option to buy.

HIGHLIGHTS

Under the amended Act, leases of not more than 320 acres, half of which must be fit for cultivation, will be granted 20 years and thereafter renewable for further terms of 20 years, providing the settlers meets the requirements of the lease.

Rentals will be nominal and fixed by the Minister. Rentals on cultivated lands will be on a crop share basis and those not under cultivation will be on a per acre basis.

The applicant for a lease must be 18 years of age or over and be a British subject, or become one in six years. Each applicant must agree to erect a house on his lease; must break, fence and cultivate a definite part of land as required by the terms of the lease and each lease will be treated individually according to the circumstances.

The applicant, after a term of 10 years, may buy the land he occupies at a price to be determined by the Minister when the lease is issued. That is to say, that, if the purchase is contemplated, a chance to this effect and stating the price of land must be included in the lease when it is drafted.

Under the amended Act, as in the case now, mineral lands may only be disposed of at public auction, but if mineral lands offered at auction are not sold then, the Minister during the next two years, may sell such lands by private contract at a price not lower than the upset price. This does not prevent the Minister from issuing short-term cultivation leases as at present on school lands.

Many features of the old act dealing with details of land settlement, are carried forward into the amended Act which includes clauses for cancellation for non-fulfilment of the lease contract; provisions for eventualities arising from the death or mental incapacity of the lease holder and so forth.

DR MANION

Dr. Manion's pronouncement this week on the question of Canada's position in regard to the League of Nations has created wider attention than any development since the opening of Parliament. From indications resulting Ottawa it is apparent that it has provoked a very definite response throughout the country. While varied differences of opinion are bound to prevail as to what Canada's position should be, the response to Dr. Manion's statement indicates that it comes close to accomplishing its purpose. It was that of making for unity of Canadian opinion had sentiment on the question of Canada's position. He stated that he regarded continuity as the first necessity in the situation in order that Canada might make the strongest contribution to the efforts of the British Empire, and the other dominions, for the preservation of peace and against aggression. The Modern Juggernaut

In a total of 242 accidents at highway crossings in Canada last year 96 persons lost their lives and 208 others were more or less severely injured, according to the annual report of the Board of Transport Commissioners for Canada recently tabled in the House of Commons and the Senate.

It is interesting to note that of the total 60 occurred at protected crossings entailing a loss of 14 lives and 62 injured, the remaining 182 having taken place at crossings devoid of any warning device with a toll of 82 deaths and 256 injured.

Further information contained in a summary of the report issued by the press of the country reveals that of the total 242 highway crossing accidents, 168 occurred in the daytime and 66 at night. Further analysis shows that of this number 43 accidents with 13 persons killed and 91 injured were caused by motor vehicles running into the sides of trains, 22 of them in daylight and 41 at night bringing death to 13 and injury to 28 persons.

"The number of accidents at night . the summarized report adds "would indicate that many motor car drivers are outdriving their headlights and are paying little or no attention to the provincial statutes governing the speed of operation of motor vehicles when approaching and passing over highway crossings."

While the toll of life and harm and suffering at highway crossings is far too heavy and serious enough in normal times, the development of a number of motorists on the grounds of both carelessness and what is less excusable recklessness, the official responsible for the preparation of the press summary has not exaggerated word for the public when he says that "it is to be feared" that the number of accidents at highway crossings and casualties thus to any great extent during the present year.

The summarized report gives the Board of Transport Commissioners some credit for the reductions, at least by inference, by pointing out that there were 29 accidents less during the last six months of the year as compared with the same period of 1927, since a new order went into effect on October 15, 1928, strengthening the load limit of the vehicle to be operated by locomotives approaching public crossings.

Value Of Protective Devices

A summary of a report cannot be expected to contain all the information in the report itself or even of all the highlights in the report, but one could wish that on a subject of such importance to the public at large it contained more data to enable one to draw more definite conclusions as to the trend of events.

For instance to appreciate the value of protective devices at highway crossings it would be important to know what percentage of the total number of such crossings are equipped with, one or another of the various warning devices in use and how many are entirely unprotected except perhaps with the statutory "stop" sign, which appears to be almost entirely disregarded by the great majority of car drivers. The summary does not give that information but the unprotected crossings would appear to be somewhat the protected crossings than the five to one ratio of the 1928 accident toll at the unprotected and protected crossings respectively. If this is the case it can be reasonably assumed that gates or flash signals electric bells, wigwags and watchmen are not responsible for much, if any reduction in loss of life and injury at crossings thus equipped.

The very fact that the lengthening of a locomotive whistle blast on approaching a public crossing resulted in a materially reduction in highway crossing accidents towards the end of the year, assuming that the official's diagnosis of the cause of the reduction is correct, indicates that not all the blame for the loss of life and accidents can be laid at the doors of careless motorists, or at least that the railways themselves, with or without instructions from the board, can reduce the hazards of those crossings

Enforcement Needed

This however does not relieve the motorist of responsibility for taking every precaution to safeguard his own life and that of his passengers, for nothing that may be pointed out in the report or its summary it is common knowledge that there is far too much carelessness on the part of motorists and track drivers on the highways and particularly at railway crossings and it would appear that penalties for non-observance of the ordinary prescribed precautions at these danger spots could with advantage be made more severe particularly where recklessness is shown. Moreover, if these penalties were made sufficiently stiff to act as a deterrent to careless drivers would assume the role of policeman and report all infringements, thus ensuring enforcement of the law, a more substantial reduction in highway crossing accidents might be expected to ensue

It is quite evident that a number of these accidents are the result of recklessness, amounting to criminality for no less than 82 deaths and 256 injuries reported to the board, involving nine dead and 25 injured, occurred at crossings where the bell and warning were operating and where gates were installed and in operations eight accidents occurred bringing death to two and injury to another half dozen

Alberta Beet Sugar Industry

In the Southern Alberta beets all tells home from in 1927 due to the unfavorable weather conditions at harvest time. The average yield per acre was somewhat smaller than in 1927 but the quality was better. The following table gives the acreage, yield and quality of beets grown in Southern Alberta for the years 1925 to 1928 inclusive:

Year	Acres	Tons per acre
1925	18.98	17.21
1926	25.66	16.94
1927	28.99	16.76
1928	29.21	17.68

The acreage contracted with farmers for 1928 crop amounted to 31,000 acres but 1,800 acres were not harvested owing to the unfavorable weather conditions. The production of beets by each farmer ranged from 3 tons to 1,000 tons, the average being 600 tons. The acreage contracted with farmers, 1,200 farm laborers and 575 sugar company employees engaged in the harvesting, topping and storing the beets and refining the sugar. The sugar company paid for the 1928 crop approximately $1,000,000 in cash and $500,000 for freight $250,000 for materials and approximately $300,000 for coal and wages. Thus the production of beets from this district will be worth over $2,000,000.00 per year.

The circulation of these original securities all of which are confined to the Lethbridge district, has contributed largely to the stabilization of Southern Alberta in the last ten years.

There is also the heavy excise tax paid to the Dominion Government of approximately $1.00 per 100 pounds of sugar. Thus the beet sugar industry of Southern Alberta alone, produced for the entire country a tax revenue of over $700,000 since the beets grown in 1926. No other food industry pays such a tax, and it is believed that sugar consumption is held down by this extreme excise tax.

The Rev. interrupted angrily. "I said peace be go.

Interesting Old Town

History Of Cheddar Goes Far Back Into Dim Ages Of Forgotten Time

To most Canadians, "Cheddar" is synonymous with "cheese," and their association is the truest in every likely to end with their enjoyment of a golden orange tasty dainty. But the rural village in Somersetshire, England that gave its name to this delicious food is also an interesting worthy

Alberta Oil Fields

British Admiralty Is Watching Developments With View To Future

The admiralty is watching the development of the Alberta oil fields. Lieut.-Col J. J. Llewellin, first civil lord of the admiralty told the House of Commons in London.

Replying to a question by Sir Percy Hurd, Conservative Colonel Llewellin said "The admiralty is very interested in the development of these supplies and fields and should oil fail to the admiralty's specifications be produced and made accessible to Lauder transport, they would certainly be willing to enter into negotiations with a view to purchasing supplies."

Answering another question by Sir Percy, Colonel Llewellin said the specifications at present "do not comply with our requirements."

Sir Henry Page-Croft, Conservative asked the minister if the oil proved to be of the right standard and quality to "make urgent inquiries with a view to purchasing supplies."

British Aspire Revolution
By Lewis Rex Miller
In Christian Science Monitor

Hendrik Willem van Loon in a recent book has propounded that within ten years the capital of the British Empire will be removed from England to Canada. This amazing forecast to many readers, appears absurd. The obstacles in the way of its practical realization seem all but insuperable. The writer of this article considered the proposal absurd until, quite recently, he studied van Loon's statement in the presence of an influential British statesman. The Britisher's only comment was, "I wonder if ten years isn't too long?"

This of course, is not the the viewpoint of the average British subject. There is little popular enthusiasm for such a proposal in Great Britain, as yet. But some of the outstanding intellects, and some of the most intelligent statesmen, of the Commonwealth are examining the possibilities of such a transformation and calculating its consequences to all concerned.

The proposal is to set up a federal constitution for the British Commonwealth of nations which would provide what does not now exist: a central authority in which the peoples of the self-governing Dominions—and probably of the Crown colonies and other British possessions throughout the world—would be represented. The logical seat of this government would appear to be in British North America.

The British Parliament would continue to exist as it is today. A body consisting of representatives of the people of Great Britain and part of Ireland. The Parliaments of the Dominions would also continue in function. But linking all these together would be a federal Parliament, to which the Dominion and British Parliaments would bear somewhat the same relation as the state Legislatures to the United States bear to Congress.

India and other dependencies might be granted representation if they desired it.

A HARD LESSON FOR LABOR

Both the general public and organized labor have received cause for serious reflection in which has thereof damages against an American Federation of Labor union for 14 times the total assets of that union. The $711,283 the union is commanded to pay to the Apex Hosiery Mill in Philadelphia for damages sustained by the company during a 69-day sit-down strike in 1937 is still another warning to union against radical tactics.

The union responsibility in a commanding need, and reasonable requirements against irresponsibility are past. But it is doubtful if the cause of labor responsibility and industrial peace is furthered by decisions so extreme that they appear vindictive and destructive of the very existence of unions. In the Apex case the judge felt himself obliged by the Sherman Act to apply there times the damages found by the jury. There is need here for a "rule of reason" such as the United States Supreme Court once read into other phases of the anti-trust law.—Christian Science Monitor.

OBITUARY

D. C. WALKER

Once more it becomes our duty to chronicle the passing of one of the early pioneers. Again the inexorable reaper, has again claimed one who has been a figure in the social and community life of this district since the beginning, and one whose face and figure will be missed by friends and neighbors.

Death came very suddenly to Mr. Walker, about noon, Thursday, April 6th, as he was sitting in his car talking to a neighbour. He had arisen that morning feeling unusually well and had started out cheerfully in his car to attend an auction sale. The neighbour to whom he was talking soon recognized that the grim reaper had called in a spirit servant of time.

Born Jan. 16, 1864, in Blenheim, Kent County, Ont., Mr. Walker received his early training. He was married 1892 to Addie Katyle and they came West to try their fortunes in this new and rugged land. For a time they made their home in Strathcona, where he plied his trade as a carpenter, but later took up land some 10 miles north of Tees in 1903, where they have since resided.

Of the years of hard-ships, setbacks and failure we will pass over. It is with deep regret that we bid farewell to one more of those who did their share to make this community what it is today.

To mourn his death he leaves his wife, his son Glenn, two daughters Jean (Mrs. Mitchell, of Grande Prairie, Marjorie (Mrs. Owens of Calgary), two sisters residing in Ontario, and nine grand-children. His eldest son, Ian, predeceased him in 1934.

Mr. Walker, a member of the Lamerton Council for the past three years, was carried to his last resting place by fellow councillors and the secretary, Mr. Cecil Kellogg, who also officiated.

There were many beautiful floral tributes from friends, neighbors and the family.

The writer of Mr. Alfred Milner, had charge of the funeral arrangements.

GROVER L. ALLEN

A shadow was cast over this community when it became known that death had passed away at his home 4046 Knox St. Vancouver, B.C., on March 25th. Mr. Allen came to this district with his parents, two sisters and two brothers in 1910 from Page, Neb., and built their home on the Allen homestead, but for the past ten years had been following his trade in Vancouver and had been in perfect health until he was stricken with a heart attack, dying in a few moments without speaking.

He leaves beside his wife and two daughters, Edith and Shirley; two sisters, Mrs. George Jackson, of Vancouver, and J. E. MacLeron, of Mirror and and four brothers, Harvey, Edson and Ross of Page, Neb., and Mac, of Blain, Washington.

At all Christian Science Church services on Sunday, the subject of the Lesson-Sermon will be "Doctrine of Atonement". The Golden Text is Romans 5:11. One of the Scripture citations is "Who hath believed our report? and to whom is the arm of the Lord revealed" (Isaiah 53:1) One of the correlative passages is "Science and Health with key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, is "The same power which heals sin heals also sickness. This is the beauty of holiness, that it makes the whole sick, it cast out evils, and when Truth cast out the evil-doer disease, it heals the sick" (p. 153).

WORLD OF WHEAT
(By H. L. Stuntz)

Farmers lose, over a term of years, as much from root rot damage to their crops as they do from Black Stem Rust."

This startling statement was made to me several years ago by a leading Canadian authority on plant diseases. All that I have heard since tends to confirm what he then said.

But we know that root has taken on the average, over a term of years, about 10 per cent of the farmers' crops. The toll taken by these root rot diseases, therefore must be very great. Can anything be done to stop this large steady annual loss?

Fortunately for the farmer it has been found that treating the seed before sowing with commercial dust, Corosan or Leytosan, greatly lessens damage from root rot diseases.

The mercurial dust treatment has the further advantage that it also prevents damage from stinking smut or bunt.

The use of fertilizer, too, sown into the ground with the seed is now a common practice on our prairies. With it the crop matures earlier, shows a higher yield and the grain has a better grade. Besides this, fertilizer certainly decreases damage from wire worms. It is good practice, and farmers, I recommend, should certainly consider it.

Settlement Of Refugees

It would appear to be highly desirable that some further consideration be given to the question in which Czechoslovakian, Hungarian and Austrian refugees disinherited in German Sudetenland and other European territories since they came under Herr Hitler's suzerainty, are to be allowed to settle in this country than has apparently been given to this problem to date.

Comparatively little information as to this movement, apparently planned for the spring has been given to the public to date, either through the federal government nor has any complete data regarding its negotiations with the British government or because it is not deemed desirable to air matters at present.

In comparison to the daily press from Prague and Ottawa are authentic it is intended to bring to this country this spring approximately 1,000 Czechoslovakian exiles with Hungarians. But most of them are agriculturists' that most, perhaps all of them have money; that some of them are to be settled in colonies with the Penner Rose' country in Alberta and Northern Saskatchewan cited as probable destinations; that settlement of these new comers will be left to the colonization departments of the trans-continental railways and that the movement is being undertaken with the co-operation of the provincial governments. In addition to that the Prague dispatch also states that another group of 1,200 consisting largely of former Hungarian Socialists, most of them farmers, also is preparing to emigrate soon to an undenominated destination. Of this group, according to the cabled story, 360 are Jews.

A Different Picture

This is quite a different picture to that presented earlier in the winter when the question of making some provision for the settlement in Canada of disinherited European potentials was first discussed and ventilated through the press of the country.

At that time the Western Canadian public was led to believe that comparatively few people were to be transfer in this country of Czechoslovakians, Hungarians and Jewish professional men and small manufacturers and industrial workers. It was pointed out that these people were in a position to make a valuable contribution to the industrial life of the country. They were to include medical men of high calibre, trained scientific workers in the field of chemistry and other professions as well as men who were in a position to start industries which are little known or not practiced at all in this country and which would give new employment to many workers. They would thus be a valuable established industry and some of them, it was represented, would bring with them substantial amounts of capital.

Now, however, it appears that Western Canada, at least, is to absorb, not professional men of high attainments and industrialists and industrial workers and mechanics men, but refugee farmers who, under existing conditions, will have to produce commodities of which there is a glut in the world markets or commodities which must be sold in restricted or non-existent local markets, if they are to do anything more than maintain a mere subsistence.

What the reactions of the governments of the two provinces most concerned will be to this latest development in European immigration plans, it is difficult to say at this time of writing, but the general impression the announcement that settlement plans are to be carried out with the co-operation of the provincial governments, the governments of Saskatchewan and Alberta have not been consulted. Premier Aberhart was quoted as saying: "No agreement has been entered into by this government with any authority up to these people coming to Alberta. A fuller statement will be made when I have ascertained . . . the nature of the report." Premier Patterson of Saskatchewan told the newspaper reporters: "I know absolutely nothing about it. We've never been asked to take any by anyone."

The wisdom of bringing in more agriculturists to settle on Western Canadian farm lands, at least until [illegible] time the areas of the large production and marketing problems about some sign of being resolved, is highly debatable and is seriously questioned in many quarters, but on the subject of the advisability of perfecting plans which provide for the settlement of non-English speaking peoples on the land in colonies there can be no two opinions in the west.

The great majority of the people of the west are agreed that the problems faced by them can best be settled in a spirit of unification and this process of unity must inevitably be slowed up if nations are to be allowed to settle en bloc, forming their own communities and delaying the progress of assimilation into a national unity. Those people undoubtedly have a definite position in developing evidently a passionate devotion to democratic ideals, otherwise they would not be in the unfortunate predicament in which they find themselves.

To that extent, undoubtedly, they are very desirable settlers but it is also desirable, since they have adopted this country as their home, that they absorb Canadian ideals and ideas as speedily as possible and this can best be done by setting them in such a manner that they must necessarily rub shoulders and keep with established Canadians. Communities in large settlements will retard this important development for many years, perhaps for the decades, possibly for generations.

A Fitting Name

How You May Reduce Varicose or Swollen Veins—Heal Ulcers

A Simple Home Treatment

The world progresses. Folks, many more than you think, are learning that the old fashioned way to relieve swollen veins or bunches called varicose veins or bunches called varicose veins or bunches called varicose veins, is not to attempt to cut them out by surgical operation, but to relieve the pressure by wearing elastic stockings. For a short time you could wear them, but as soon as you left off the veins would swell up again. Now, however, a new method has been discovered that is said to relieve the pressure and heal the sores at the same time. It is called Moone's Emerald Oil. You can get it from any druggist, and it is said that a small bottle lasts a long time.

"IN HANDS OF GOD"
Boston Daily Monitor

It has often been remarked that in wars each nation always believes that God is on its side. This led Napoleon cynically to assert that Providence was on the side of the heaviest artillery.

A very different and finely reverent tone rings through the splendid words used by Premier Hendrik Colijn of the Netherlands in a radio broadcast to the Dutch Empire. Announcing measures of military preparedness to protect the little nation's independence and neutrality, he said,

"Humanity's destiny is not in the hands of one man but in the hands of God Almighty, who rules the world."

This is profound truth, which all should continually remember.

It is worth noting that Reichsfuhrer Hitler of Germany appealed to the opinion of a higher than human tribunal when in his recent speech at Wilhelmshaven, protesting the criticism of his nation by French or English statesmen, he declared:

"The judgement whether a people is virtuous or not virtuous can hardly be passed by a human being. That should be left to God."

Jesus said, "The Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgement to the Son." Men may feel themselves obliged to determine their own action in the light of some specific action of another, but while they may thus pass necessary judgement on some act, and should try to do so in the spirit of the non-judging, should refrain from doing what God has not done, namely, passing condemnatory judgement on a person, nation or race.

The fact that men on both sides of a battle line pray to the same God should be enough of a hospital rather than an ironic font. It implies that both expect ultimately to be engaged by conformance to His justice. It acknowledges a faith that right makes might. And since all men do have one Father it can be said with assurance that Providence is on the side of solving human differences without resort to artillery.

Senility And Happiness

How to attain a ripe old age and how to be happy though old are two questions which have commanded greater and more widespread importance in Western Canada during the past 15 or 20 years.

Up in about that time the Canadian west was essentially a young man's country, in the main, the west bored young men who were barely enough to have adored and serve and a better for themselves in a new country and to that regard he refused old men and women constituted a comparatively small proportion of the population.

And even as recently as 10 or 20 years ago the problem of old age and how to make the best of it was one which was not of great importance in the west. for it was a comparatively simple matter then to dispose of old folks even as the modern town business man and move to a more congenial climate to avoid the declining years in more leisurely pursuits than mounting a losing at high stakes.

For very many who had visions of spending the evening of their lives—and more apparently short evenings, these prospects were rudely shattered into a dim remembrance as the depression of the past decade overtook the ... and deepened with the passing years. As a result there are to-day ... many who have had to abandon their dreams and are facing the necessity of living out their allotted span where they built their homes and raised their families on the prairies.

For these increasingly large number of pioneers and their generation progeny of original settlers the question therefore has resolved itself into that of ordering their method of living that they will have a reasonable chance of reaching a ripe old age and be carefully that of making the most of it as an equally dependent on environment," as was pointed out about a year ago by Dr. C. F. Martin, of Montreal, in an excellent address on the subject of old age in the Edna auditorium.

"And," he added, "as we become more intelligent, we can apply health measures for our benefit. We can look after our diet more intelligently, our factional activities, our exercises and rest, and we can get much from a better knowledge of a properly conducted mental hygiene. With the accumulation of modern knowledge, the dawn of approaching old age is wide."

For the benefit of the aged, Dr. Martin pointed out the necessity of reducing the rate of food intake; the importance of eating slowly. That was stressed as the first and most important dietary rule for the old, and the second was the kind of diet and on this subject the doctor dispensed much down ore worth repeating in Dr Martin's own words

"You know a steady diet of meat, fish, potatoes and starches for the old and cereals are good, stewed fruits and salads useful and bread still remains the staff of life that any of the dairy products are the best old-age food that milk, preferably pasteurized and all the elements necessary for that cream cheese is better than Stilton, and that butter, buttermilk and junket are excellent. For old people hard-boiled eggs are not indigestible as they appear.

"There is a condition commonly recognized as senility, age a physiological contagionsness which spreads from one old degenerated person to another, and for that reason it is particularly desirable that old people mix more with the young.

These guides to old age are not new. They have been said before by many authorities and observers but they are very worth repeating and following of old age is to be, as it should be, a time of happiness and a period full of the joy of life. It is an attainment well within the realm of possibility if the simpler rules are followed.

Sir Henry Pellatt Built Church For Thousand Loyal People

Toronto's older coloured people remember with gratitude Sir Henry Pellatt, who died recently. During the days of his prosperity he was visited by a coloured church elder who asked for a subscription to help build a church.

"How much will it cost?" asked Sir Henry.

The elder mentioned a few thousand dollars as the cost.

Sir Henry promptly wrote him a cheque for the full amount.

Later in life he was wont to recall with pleasure the look of astonishment the recipient of the subscription.

A New Language

Union Made Your Connection on Suburban Basement Bungalow

A new drink that makes man strong was announced at the Long Island College of Medicine.

The drink is about one-third of a regular daily of whiskey, is colored chocolate to orange and lemon juice.

Results are men doubled their muscular endurance in about a month and a half training at bicycle and rowing exercises, it was said. In effect The announcement was made by Dr. G. H. Bray, J. S. Johnson and Dr. Ralph Pemberton.

It is proposed to try gasoline on horses, cows and other athletes in training. The gain in strength in the tests lasted a long time and there was no bad after effects.

The substance is glycine on sugar, acid was called gelatine sugar. It has been tried on athletes. Then Dr H. M. Weber reported to the Mayo Clinic that the same game improved after two weeks of taking glycine.

The men, who were tested, were against three weeks with no gelatine, training daily in the gymnasium, all fatigued. In this period their endurance rose 20 to 30 per cent. Then they added the drink to their diet, each of which contained half of the gelatine cubes and substituted an equivalent sugar.

Experiments showed the orange and lemon juice played no part in the results.

Four women who tried the drink training with two-thirds as much daily gelatine, showed no gain in strength. Therefore, feminine muscles cannot store up creatine, on account of which they are unsuitable for action with physique-building drinks the "greener" that men use, the experiments showed. Only Clytine means increased storage of creatine in muscles.

The names of the Popes are an interesting study. There have been no second Peter and the first of the Johns did not appear till 923. No other Apostle appears in the list, though there are several Stephens.

Forty-three names were used in the last of them Leodus (913) John was the second, and there followed some of the notorious were understands and the last signed John was Leodus (1181). There have been 18 Benedicts and 16 Gregories Leodus Observer

MUSCULAR RHEUMATIC PAINS—ACHES

It takes more than "just a colony" to bring relief. It takes a "super-counter-irritant" like good old Minard's Liniment. Warming, soothing and healing, it quickly overcomes the kind of pain that's caused by chilling, exposure and dampness. Rub it on the aching spots.

"Canada's Year"

A Good Year To Visit Canada Either For Business Or Pleasure

He in 1939 more people from the New York World's Fair will be invited to visit Canada either for business or pleasure or a combination of both. They certainly could not do better than follow the example of our King and Queen Furthermore, the Royal visit will mark years for the celebrations of the many memorable Imperial Conferences."

A man in the company's uniform came up to her, touching his cap. "Beg pardon, but have anything we can do for you? Would you like a taxi? I mean where are you going?"

"To San Jose to Dancvia's She turned round then, coming to her aberration, painfully aware, suddenly of the commonness of her fiance. She gathered up the blanket and shook it and tried to wrap it around her.

"We haven't another piece to hire."

"I must telephone my father," Sarah Lynn said wildly.

"Where to, sir?"

The bride put her face and caught hold of her arm "Say, listen, sir," she said in a high sweet voice "are you in a jam?"

"I'm quite all right," Sarah Lynn said stiffly.

"Well, to that nice? Throwing me out like a sack of mail! Is that a good old Nance custom?"

"I want to telephone."

"Here- I'd show you!" She picked up her gladsome train.

Sarah Lynn caught her "Is this Pronto?"

"Well, for Pete's sake! Didn't you know where you were landing? Yes, this is Pronto, and here's your booth. I'll wait for you."

"Thank you," Sarah Lynn said coldly. "It's not necessary." She looked fully at her for the first time and took in the details of white satin and lace, veil and orange blossoms. "I mustn't keep you from ..."

"Oh, that's right!" she said easily. "It's just one of my wild stunts! Bridal Suite in Hollywood and flying to Frisco and set the ship down to my hole to a bunch of hillwits. Oh, dead and telephone your folks." The young man had belowed to the detail

CLEAN UP

A clean looking town always draws favorable comment from visitors and always affords considerable satisfaction to the average citizen. To get best results it takes a certain amount of co-operation between the town executives and the citizens. In Alix a lot of paint could be used as a beautifier. The ladies should not be allowed to have a monopoly of that commodity.

Getting rid of ash heaps and rubbish is already well under way. The next step is to study how to make our lanes more attractive. Of course we need a water system to produce best results, but that does not prevent us from doing a deal of good work with what facilities we have got. Let us show our civic pride by doing all we can on our own premises, and the town council will do its share with what revenue is available for that purpose. We are not big as population goes and we have no skyscrapers, but we can all be neat and clean around our homes.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

At all Christian Science Churches next Sunday, the subject of the Lesson is "Everlasting Punishment". The Golden Text is Genesis 18:25. One of the Scriptural citations is "Israel hath cast off the thing that is good: the enemy shall pursue him" (Hosea 8:3). One of the correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, is "Does not Science show that sin brings suffering as much to-day as yesterday? They who sin must suffer. With what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again."

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H. G. L. Strange

Scientific experiment made at the Dominion Experimental Farm at Swift Current indicate beyond question that the loss of crop by weeds is enormous. It is generally considered, I believe, that weeds abstract approximately 25 per cent of the moisture that finally is deposited in the soil, and so made available for plant growth.

This all means that, on the average, the farmer loses 25 per cent of his yield per acre, hence of his income, because of the growth of weeds. It is quite obvious, therefore, that any effort made by the farmer to keep down weeds will repay him handsomely for his toil.

Great surpluses of wheat for the time being abound in the world, and the price per bushel in consequence is low. This, therefore, is a good year for farmers to refrain from sowing all fields this spring that are very weedy, and instead of seeding, to summerfallow them, or grow to give them, if necessary, a double summerfallow.

This practice will kill vast quantities of weeds, and so because of less weed plants, and because of the extra moisture saved up by the summerfallow, a good crop next year would be ensured.

WHAT NO SUMMER READ 1926 RECORD

Ithena — To shivering New Yorkers, awaiting the delayed advent of warm weather, comes today this chilling news—in 1926 there wasn't any summer!

A meteorological report by the grandmother of Elmer Dillon of Black Rock, now a part of Buffalo, reveals chronologically a summerless year 1926.

"March 9—Snow 24 feet deep."

"April 15—Four inches more."

"May 30—It from no hard last night that mad three inches deep will bear a man."

"June 6—Scorred from early morn until 1 p.m., melting as fast as it fell, save on north side of buildings."

"June 28—A little frost."

"July 11—Crops very backward."

"Aug. 26—Frost. Vines and corn in some places blackened."

"Oct. 17—Snow eight inches deep."

SPANISH EMIGRANTS FOR MEXICO

Mexico—Asylum will be granted to an unnamed number of Spanish refugees by the Mexican Government. The decision was taken by a council of representatives of all Government departments after the plan had been discussed pro and con in the Mexican press for the past three months, with many conservatives objecting to the entrance of alien "agitators."

Immigration will be limited to those of Spanish citizenship, thus eliminating Russian, German, Italian and other undesirables which fought on the side of Loyalist Spain. Moreover, all immigrants will be hand picked, with preference given to those who can help expand Mexico's agriculture and fishing industry. The emigrants will be settled along the coast of the Gulf of Mexico in productive regions which are sparsely settled.

GIRL SMASHES "SILVER" RECORD

Memphis—Juvenile Court authorities found thrills in commonplace conveniences you see day in they demonstrated them to a 10 year-old Mississippi girl who said she had never seen an electric light, never talked over a telephone and didn't know Franklin D. Roosevelt was President.

Alma Merdis cut two cords of stovewood for $3 to visit Memphis from her farm home northeast Mississippi. She arrived here nearly penniless and was taken to the Juvenile Court for temporary shelter.

Alma said she could pick 150 pounds of cotton a day, but told officials:

She'd never heard a radio, never been higher than the second floor of a building and never heard of an elevator; never seen a motion picture; never eaten an ice cream cone; never seen a motion picture; never owned a silk dress—and never heard of Hitler and Mussolini.

"Give it the Works"

THAT'S what one hopeful said to the Kenwick News when asked what he want to have merchandise tested for strength or performance.

Stockings, cloth and tubular tires are tested at strain points by the "Modern Sense," which records the pressure required to burst them. Soap, cosmetics, leather and certain fabrics are given severe friction tests to prove their wearing qualities. Overalls and heavy garments are subjected to a strength pull to determine the tensile strength of the denim. Razor blades are tested for their shaving ability in wood and wool as well. Processed fabrics are subjected to tests under running water before they are rubber cured. Rubber overalls are plunged into pails of water or left under a running tap before we call them waterproof. Scales are taken to process to determine the soundness of the inner construction. Boards are pressed and creased in the weather for months to determine the wearing qualities of the paint. A mower pushed a heavy iron roller over a prepared seed and spring bar drags to determine the ill effects of cumulative vegetable root and tear.

By means of tests such as these we are able to guarantee that the merchandise finally selected for our Catalogue will give satisfaction in our customers. EATON advertising means what it says, others may but we have been made to prove that all statements are true.

Bale-crushers are working in the district and A. & L. Co-op are visited Saturday night. Above business passes were broken into and a quantity of meat taken. Loss of profits is $770.00 in cash. On Saturday afternoon, Harold North, 22, and recently married, lost his life when trapped in a bush five miles south west of Rochon. A number of settlers lost grains, hay and barns. He was trying to break through the circle of fire and was riding in a car. The car overturned in the spot and North was trapped off. Bush and grass fires were plentiful around Alix on Saturday but no damage was reported.

We learn from our exchanges that baseball teams have organized at Delburne and Bentley. No word has as yet come to us concerning the Alix team up to the time of writing. While we may have lost some good players during the past few years there are still enough young men left to give Alix a place in any league formed in this district.

Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Rowe returned home on Sunday, April 30th after spending the winter at the coast.

Th bye-election in Division No. 5, to elect a successor to the late Councillor D. C. Walker, was held in the Hockey Lodge school house on Saturday, resulted in Mr. Weatherill winning the contest by 22 votes. Seventy-two votes were cast for Weatherill and fifty for Williamson.

An Agricultural Program

With every evidence in support of the statement there appears to be good ground for the belief that the long era of drought which has spelled disaster for the prairie provinces during the past decade is now a thing of the past and that farmers and homemakers have every reason to look hopefully forward to a series of a period of years of sufficient if not plentiful moisture.

Assuming this to be true it is not unreasonable to suppose that most farmers are hoping plans involving a definite agricultural production policy which they hope to be able to follow for the next few years so as to make some step as the business man has to do if he is to be assured of some degree of success or contentment.

With agriculture, as in the commercial world, any long range policy which may be laid down for future guidance must necessarily be elastic to take care of unforeseen circumstances which may arise to necessitate for emergencies which had not been thought of and to meet changing conditions. Canada is a progressive nation and frequently cropping up in a manner to subject to frequent changes, even violent ones at times.

Despite these unanticipated conditions, however, a plan should be laid down for future guidance and adhered to as closely as future circumstances permit on the farm. In the store and in the warehouse. A goal should be reached unless a definite pathway towards it is laid down and pursued it may be non-entity at times to make detours, but these detours should eventually lead back to the main highway. In other words a following of the will o' the wisp can lead nowhere in agriculture any more than in commerce

Insofar as the agricultural industry in the prairie provinces is concerned the lessons of the past few years combined with present day world, national and local conditions appear to indicate that, given ordinary "breaks" here in production or marketing, it is highly desirable that every farm produce as nearly as possible everything that will provide for the sustenance of his household, as an insurance policy against the time when the necessity of selling back upon the country for the necessities of life.

Apart from a cash crop which is necessary to enable the farmer to provide those things which he cannot produce from the land, the raising of sufficient foodstuffs on his own land to provide for his own family would appear to be the first objective of a well-directed farming operation.

It would seem desirable as far as it is possible to do so, that every farm should produce its own supply of meats, vegetables, poultry and eggs and even dairy products. Our recent experimentation has demonstrated that an ever widening range of fruits can be produced on the prairies, even apricots and plums. It is true that some of the larger fruits cannot be grown on the prairies are not equal in size and quality to similar fruits raised in British Columbia and Ontario, but there are many varieties of small and medium climatic conditions but they can be grown they can be processed at home in various ways that make them quite palatable and they are better than none at all.

As for vegetables, all except the most tender varieties, it is now well known that the very finest of these commodities can be grown to perfection on the prairies. It is not necessary to enumerate varieties here. In every district there are one or more farmers growing them or who have grown them in abundance and the information is readily available from the departments of agriculture, the universities and the experimental and demonstration farms operated by the government, or under governmental direction

Work Involved

Always provided of course, that sufficient water is available, there appears to be no reason why all these beautiful foods needs, butter, milk, eggs, cheese, vegetables and fruits should not be raised on every farm. At least in sufficient quantities to supply the families dependent upon them and perhaps a surplus to exchange with neighbors or where local markets are available sell.

Where natural shelter is not available such a program necessarily entails the planting of trees and these subsequently must be cared for and shrubs available from the government without cost, this need be no deterrent.

It is true that such a program entails a considerable amount of labor, but the days when the farmer could throw some seed on the ground, take off a bumper crop in the fall, dispose of it for a good price and then spend on Californian beaches the rest of the year have evidently gone, perhaps for ever.

It is quite evident that the time has now come, even with plenty of moisture available, that the peasant of agriculture on the prairies, to be successful, will involve close attention to the job in hand and that means a great deal of work, but after all for the great majority of people a modicum of success is ably attainable through the sweat of the brow.

A program mapped out to cover a period of years ahead, plus intelligent application of labor will go at least some distance towards ensuring a substantial stabilization of agriculture in the west, even during these difficult times, and perhaps difficult times ahead.

A Useful Language

Esperanto Would Contribute Largely To Peace Of The World

It is a long time since Mr. Smith and Mr. Brown of Paris, France, invented a new and scientific language called Esperanto, which he hoped would be taught in every country so that one nation could use an auxiliary language making people more international. Esperanto, however, has to a large extent remained universal. At a recent meeting of the Esperanto Society of Edmonton it was said by prominent members from Aberdeen to the Esperanto movement would help to make more friendly and more understanding between nations. Esperanto is now taught in 1,000 schools and universities in 30 countries. Its grammar can be completed for

It is certainly a remarkable and interesting thing that a movement with only about a years' existence should have spread so widely and so far. Esperanto clubs have been formed in nine other countries and ten languages and countries have their own Esperanto magazine. Although naturally an international language, Esperanto is now becoming a real living language. Children are being born who have learned it from their parents and it is used in the home throughout the world. What a world being it would be! Not only would people from many countries be able to speak to each other, but the common understanding and goodwill would be a great asset to international understanding, helping to remove many of the difficulties that Esperanto seems to have friends in high places too. A book and a play have been written in it, and a new realistic language instead of French, has been made the test. It would simplify education and contribute to the peace of the world, Dr. Theodor Zamenhof.

Fast Farm Problems

Plight Of Agriculturists Of Major National Concern

Canada can develop and prosper as she should" until some of the problems confronting the farming industry have been solved," F. W. Wash, director of marketing for Nova Scotia, warned at the agricultural conference among the Dominion-wide meetings previously forming the plight of the eastern farmers specifically as of "major significance" Wash called for "definite collective planning" to remedy conditions.

Outlining the purpose of the parley, the Nova Scotia, director told the delegates from five provinces it had been called because of the many problems hanging on the monetary returns to the producers. It was recognized that "much of the depressed condition which Canada finds herself in at the present time" was because of problems of marketing on the part of the primary producers, and of this group agriculture was the most important.

The conference was mainly a fact-finding one, he said, and all approved marketing and co-ordination between the provinces. Its delegates represented groups of agriculturists.

Wash said that out of the assembly was expected to come a plan of action, and a continuing committee that would carry on the investigation. He said "devise ways and means of putting the recommendations into effect."

Sarah Lynn liked Europe—Sally Ann's Europe, and Sally Ann's Europe liked Sarah Lynn. She had to, almost for the most part, looking and listening acutely, and presently people began to notice that she did it, type for the first time in her life and to glorious pleasantly to her, and after a while she was answering with confidence.

One day in Paris Sally Ann bought her typewriter and said, "Let's forget Europe for a while."

She let Sarah Lynn enter the timetables first—"Imperial Airways"—"Hamburg-American Line"—"Blue Star Line"—"Baggage Refresh-Room — Air-sickness"—and chanted to learn that a four-course lunch would be served on the Silver Star—glamorous name that paved over the pictures—the Rain calling—and the air Pageantry beside the Danube—

"We'll bow over to Munich and hear some Wagner," Sally Ann said, her motivation me," the writer said.

Sarah Lynn assented in every stage of it, the motor to the field, the brief and hesitating crossings and gaps of planes. She vibrated to every turn of the propeller, and her head took hold of with the sunrise sense of lifting wings.

"Yes," Sally Ann nodded, watching her understandingly. "I adore the United States," Elmer Davis."

Germany from the air was an orderly universe; every tree in the toy forests seemed to have been set in with priest precision; the hill towns looked as if a careful hand had placed its play villages in final pattern on a quiet, green floor.

"I feel God in her," Sarah Lynn said to herself when they came down. "It means left by God, almost to a fault it seem, here."

She wrote that night to Lynn Elmer.

"I wish you might have been the Rain and Sally Ann and I think she's found her element. After all, isn't the air her best medium for the Ancient Mariner? Why don't we combine the elements of them? The new Pageantry—Sarah Lynn Elmer."

The next day came a message to Sarah Lynn. She opened it with a sure gentle greeting or prelude. "I ask you to marry me."

Sarah Lynn stood still, staring at him.

He took off his helmet and obediently she recalled Kitty Maddox's mellow voice in the after-hours of the Hotel Cotherstein at Provincetown. "Sarah Lynn Brooks! Is she his dresser's hat?" His hair was the golden-brown of a young Viking's. It had in it a heat, stern, young fires and ice-blue eyes. Their green glow was steady upon her. His next words, "I ask you to pardon. I have the truth. I have dreams of the young world."

The hint her head. "Please you, you are mistaken."

He put his gauntlet hand over an open letter on the table beside him. "Forgive me. I am not mistaken."

Young Van Dorsen is back from Dutch Guiana.

"I wrote my dying friend, Conrad Cotton, and he made me his executor. Now I'm going to settle up his estate and get back to my home. I'm heavily indebted to him for his work here then poor fellow.

"You'll want to tell Sarah Lynn that the blot of oil line brushtown. I imagine it still matters Sally Ann gave it just enough importance. "Oh, Sarah Lynn went a long time ago. I'm sure I don't know that his art also failed him. I'm sorry you would tell about Arthur's love-comedy when Sarah Lynn. She probably got married to some person." She pulled a sigh of the paper and began to write. She was page and kept her voice casual and work. How to have it cleared up wasn't it?"

"Yes," her young cousin said thoughtfully. "I'll write her myself and looked up at the shy. She was a pleasant face, rosy and freckled, but when she came into his mind not of her own importance. Sarah Lynn was the symbol of his own rage he would not say. Keep away from Sarah Lynn. Sarah Lynn was way. "Poor thing!" But would he? She remembered the sweetness of his experience historical excerpts "His heart was so much stood so he saved the day at Marathon," his sympathy the wish he developed different quality of contempt!

Sally Ann took her guilty to Rainbow Room's friend and editor, "the Roosevelt" and left her there she is blended with the rest of her she might fly back to Paris by herself Sarah Lynn would always remember that. She had never had her actual initiation to the air. The through plane was Sally Ann's and was exiled to have to "Bring three times and to do it alone.

Sarah Lynn's initial reliability in Sally Ann about her long day's flights in the air was not based on airport, but her transiting seem was quiet and eminently affectionate. Sally Ann's voice came over the radio her drink a cup of hot tea and when she was in the bath a mood of high happiness came over Sarah Lynn. She went to the diner on a yellow rose and when Sally Ann's plane appeared at the door she found herself, glowing, sparkling

"I'm frightfully sorry, my dear, but I'm afraid I've spoiled your honeymoon. Your mother. There's a cable. They're afraid of pneumonia."

CHAPTER VII.

"Of course it might well have been going to be pneumonia," Mary Dana said to Sarah Lynn's mother.

"And Adelaide being what the Adelaide is, she had to be in the plane and" it might well have been going to go hard with her" Lynn Elmer said grimly.

Sarah Lynn had been home for a week, and in that time, large and unmagnified in expensive negligee, was ruling her realm from a Mid-Victorian.

The plain cousin sighed. Lynn Elmer was the last man she'd ever want again."

"Ah, but has she? Geographically and psychologically, yes! Something's supposed to the child. Mary Dana said. "I'm not sure. I'm telling you! The last of the queer, dark Dana girls has found her destiny."

"Too mean she'll naturally be the last of the Dana girls," Elmer Brooks said to the latter. "Sarah Lynn Elmer. Sounds like a name for a magazine, doesn't it?"

"Yes," Sarah Lynn said quietly. He considered her shrewdly. "I believe you do." They were sitting on the terrace and he said he would shove the rest. "You can get about in a chair now," he took her elbow in a firm hand and helped her into the cabin. She sat down quickly in the rear seat, calmly folding her hands in her lap.

NOTE AND COMMENT

It is somewhat of a puzzle to understand why none of the western governments or federal authorities will give a grant to aid the settlers in the Peace River district to finish the Manhattan Pass road to connect with the C.N.R. to the coast. They have toiled manfully to build this outlet, giving time and contributions towards the project, but all the governments are cold. To help finish the road, Wembley farmers are giving a day's work at no cost when next this year. The road is essential to the farmers of the northwest to market their wheat success—fully in competition with the rest of Canada. Freight rates on the long haul to the head of the lakes are prohibitive, leaving the farm are nothing for their labor. A big challenge is open to some one. The governments may live to regret their neglect of this opportunity to serve the people

STINSON: "WHO DICTATES?"

Rochester N.Y.—Urging support of a "Stop Arming Japan" Movement, Col Henry L. Stimson says "A prompt termination of our aid to Japan would serve notice that our economic power is not necessarily at the command of aggressive nations.

The Secretary of State, and former President Hoover, in a message read at a rally held by the city's Stop Arming Japan Committee, added such a move "would demonstrate that liberal Democracy is without that faith and courage which alone must have if it is to survive the present crisis."

"We shall have no peace or security without justice" Stimson emphasized, "and we cannot secure justice by supporting its violation."

THE REPULSE REMAINS

Britain's decision to have the King and Queen travel to America in passenger liner instead of in the battle cruiser Repulse marks an interesting move in the naval drama game now going on in European waters. Repulse is one of three ships of the Renown class of British battle cruisers, the only vessels of their type anywhere in the world. The other two, Renown and Renoun are laid up for overhaul. There are faster ships afloat than Repulse, and heavier ones. But none of the ships are enough to withstand her broadsides, and none of the heavier ones are fast enough to overtake her. No wonder Britain feels that a ship with the strategic blending of speed and power this twenty-three old battle cruiser combines is worth having around at the moment!—C.S. Monitor.

GANDHI READY TO FAST UNTIL THE LAST

London, April 28—Mohandas K. Gandhi was quoted by Exchange Telegraph, a British news agency, today as threatening to fast in the event of European war.

The Indian leader said in a message to the world, the agency reported.

"I shall die for peace . . . . I am quite capable of fasting unto death to prevent women and humanity from embarking on suicide on a scale hitherto unknown in the history of the world."

GRASSHOPPER SITUATION IN ALBERTA FOR 1939

The grasshopper forecast for Alberta this year is for an outbreak covering a larger area than in 1938 with an extension of the infested area westward and northward, and a light and patchy area recorded for the first time in the Peace River district.

The range of severity of infestation over the Province is termed "light" to "very severe" depending to a great extent upon the growth and climatic conditions late last and this spring and early summer. Where the former is termed "severe" there is a here is a threat of damage of great intensity, which necessitates control measures on the part of farmers in these areas. Even in the light infested areas grasshopper may be reported to be present in sufficient numbers to cause definite losses in individual fields. Therefore, the grasshopper condition for 1939 continues to be extremely serious, and will require that the Province maintain it's widespread and well organized control campaign to avoid tremendous losses of crops in many large districts.

The Provincial Government is placing supplies and supervision at the disposal of Municipalities and Improvement Districts in order to combat the expected outbreak. Farmers within the grasshopper infested areas are required to comply with the provisions of the "Provincial Agricultural Pests Act" in control of grasshoppers.

Communities and Municipalities wishing to hold public meetings, or requiring information, should communicate with the Field Crops Branch of the Provincial Department of Agriculture, Edmonton.

Cost Of Government

Freshly very few people who join in the popular clamour for government expenditure for relief for public and social services, for subsidies and for numerous other concessions, too often with the idea of benefiting them before beyond actual needs or to gain something for their community rather the suppose they are making upon themselves and upon their children

If they did it is probable that many of the demands which are made upon the federal, provincial and municipal governments would be considerably curtailed and some of them would not be made at all. The people themselves would be more vigilant in their efforts to prevent relief expenditure after it was recently revealed in criminal court proceedings in one of the municipalities in Manitoba-town and the public convinced would result in curtailment of some of the demands which are continually being made for services favors and concessions which the country is unable to afford at the present time

Governments are not altogether to blame if they yield to constant and enormous pressure which is constantly being brought to bear upon them for unnecessary expenditure or for services for which the people are not deeply sensing without pledging the country the province or the municipality to undertakings beyond ability to repay

It is the public themselves who thoughtlessly make demands without considering the cost and who regard the governments as a widow's cruse of oil who are culpable and until they fully realize what the cost of government is to them as individuals the avalanche of demands for more services of one kind and another is not likely to abate

* * * *

Unprecedented Costs

One of the difficulties of bringing home to the public consciousness the burden which the people must carry as a result of these demands for municipal governmental and receiving services is the fact that much of the taxation imposed to pay for it is the indirect form, what might appropriately be termed hidden taxes

The average man or woman who goes into a store to spend a dime or a dollar is not conscious or at the best only vaguely aware, of the fact that a percentage of that dime or that dollar is going towards the cost of government and government services. A portion of the dime or the dollar goes to the federal government sometimes no-ther slice of it goes to the provincial government and in some cases all three governments take a share of that dime or that dollar

Even those who have a dim conception that they are purchasing commodities and services they are contributing towards the cost of one or more governments have not the faintest idea of what proportion of the money they are spending goes for that purpose If they did, it is more than probable that the governments would not be subjected to the con tinual embarrassment for more and more expenditure

As already intimated it is difficult for people to appreciate and realize the cost of government and government services largely for the reasons mentioned, but one authority, Capt. W C C Jones, honorary secretary of the Taxpayers Association of Canada, in a recent article in the Labour Review declared that war conditions have by indirect taxation are about twothirds of the total government cost."

The same author states that the public debt is now approximately eight billion dollars of which $900,000,000 has been contributed in various forms with prospects that it will reach a total of one billion dollars this summer. The annual interest charge on this debt he states is $300,000,000 which divided equally among the seven million people inhabiting the country means an average yearly charge of $42 per person. Very group erly, of course, the burden is not equally divided, for those with larger incomes contribute a larger share than those with smaller incomes on the basis of one of the fundamental principles of taxation 'ability to pay'

* * * *

Economy

Of the many problems facing the country and which have been responsible for building up a heavy debt, Capt Jones rightly regards the unemployment problem as the most serious, not only because of the huge sums which have been spent on direct relief without any return for the expenditure in the form of goods, but because of the effect of this system of aid upon the morale of the recipients.

Reference has already been made to the baneful effect of direct relief as exemplified in recent court actions and there is no question but that much of the cause for complaint against this type of aid would disappear if a policy of requiring some return in the form of work for money spent by all the governments concerned in the administration of relief were inaugurated

As Capt. Jones appropriately comments in the concluding paragraph of his article "There is a growing tendency to rely on the government for this, that and the other thing not realizing that we are the government, and in the long run we pay in full for our unthinking selfishness and folly."

Men Able To Shed Job Because Colleagues Were Hired

Here is a story to match the one we had a while ago about members of a Toronto office staff subbing together to pay for plastic surgery to the snored face of a fellow-employe.

A young chap in another local office has come down with a mighty malodorous case of boy driving. The handicap was affecting his work and blighting his life generally. Quoth his colleagues: hopped in and bought a bunch of fresh fruit — some of them somewhat overripe, incongruous things that work by home remedies of sound, or something. He could never have detected the odor more he in the mean manner of his family. The thoughtfulness of his workmates appreciated, and made things worth while for him again, and gone is the handicap that deodorous would handicap his future Toronto Telegram.

The Naval Race

United States To Build World's Largest Battleships

The President has expressed the right given to him by the Naval Expansion Act of 1938 and has given the navy authority to proceed with the construction of two 45,000-ton battleships

Behind the debate over the Naval Expansion Act lay an island some paper story by the effect that Japan had laid down two 42,000-ton battleships

That story printed in the Fall of 1937 has not been confirmed from Japanese sources, but it is known that the Japanese are constructing the 45,000-ton battleships Yamato and Musashi, each of 70,000 tons. Its 18-inch guns are reported to be mounted in a manner enabling one to be trained on a target while the other is being reloaded. The secondary armament is reported to be unusually heavy.

Japan's answer to the United States' decision to build two 45,000-ton battleships is awaited with interest. Japan has been reported to be building two 45,000-ton battleships, and projected, to round the total entry Ned Known

Presumably the President and his naval advisers have considered Japan's reported new construction before deciding that Japan has not been building 45,000-tonners or mounting their armaments in turrets capable of training their guns 355,000 tons

What the effect of the battleship means is national defence the latest naval craft is doubtful to say, though he may be inclined to think that it approaches, if it does not touch, the limit of putting his weapons in one bunker Since the cost of naval construction rises disproportionately to the increase of tonnage, the United States Navy may be expected to cost in excess of $100,000,000 again.

Until more definite information goes, the two battleships authorized by the President will mean the world's biggest, exceeding by almost 2,000 tons the British battle cruiser Hood and the Nelson class. The latter are which the French and British take their measure. New York Sun

The London Times says Sark Parliament, the smallest in the world, has decided to repair the roof of its prison, which has housed only three prisoners in a hundred years. Not Normal Music

Jean Sibelius, Finland Mandated Discovery Causes Authority

There has somehow been circulated the idea that jazz is the normal music of the common people of the world. It is quite natural that the result of a universal musical popularity, but it is not. Jazz is a product of the United States. A few years ago a composer of Finland, Jean Sibelius, who is forever being said to be the successor of Beethoven, was invited to visit the United States. He was honored by the leaders who followed his music and by the public generally. He was given a dinner at which many great men were present. Ned Known

Presumably the President and his naval advisers have considered Japan's reported new construction before deciding that Japan has not been building 45,000-tonners or mounting their armaments in turrets capable of training their guns 355,000 tons

What the effect of the battleship means is national defence the latest naval craft is doubtful to say, though he may be inclined to think that it approaches, if it does not touch, the limit of putting his weapons in one bunker Since the cost of naval construction rises disproportionately to the increase of tonnage, the United States Navy may be expected to cost in excess of $100,000,000 again.

Until more definite information goes, the two battleships authorized by the President will mean the world's biggest, exceeding by almost 2,000 tons the British battle cruiser Hood and the Nelson class. The latter are which the French and British take their measure. New York Sun

"Some corn (wheat) received its special plugging; the stalks were gnawed by nubbers (rust) and the thistle received its head of thistle; dumb taber (a crops . . . —Virgil 35 B.C.

Rust, we believe, has at last been conquered, but thistles and other weeds defying the years are still reaping their heads and tabling the crops.

Dr. Seager Wheeler, of Rosthern, Sask., that grand old man of seed growing and agriculture, twenty years ago wrote a fine book entitled "Practical Stable Grain Growing." In this book Dr. Wheeler recommended the best rotating of grains, methods of tillage, and entered such unusual words as ploward, drill husbandmen and harrows.

Dr. Wheeler recommends draggling falsely along the roots—not across them—and declared that harrow on a dry day, just as the wheat seedlings are peeping out one of the ground, or if this exact moment is missed, then to wait until the plant is well established and about 3cm or more stems or is in the stooling stage; but when once out he harrowed when it is 4 or 5 inches high, or in the shade leaf stage;

ROBERT HASKINS, CLIVE FARMER, BACK FROM PLAUDITS

In truly, Robert Haskins, 55-year-old Clive farmer, who has just been acclaimed the finest amateur actor in Canada at the dominion drama festival held in London, Ontario, is back on the farm attending to the spring work. But in spirit, he is still treading the boards with the two other members of the cast in Chekhov's "The Bear," the play which the Clive drama group took to London. In his ears still rings the applause of the audience and the congratulations of the adjudicator.

Together with the rest of the cast, and V. G. (Vic) Duffy, president, director and moving spirit of the club, Mr. Haskins has returned to the farm and started right in with the work. still finding it difficult to believe that he has won the premier award of the festival.

He returned to a flood of congratulations pours from his neighbors and requests for the group to present "The Bear" at centres all over the province. Mrs. Haskins, however, although she is prouder than words can tell of her farmer-actor-husband, has issued an ultimatum that the inside of the house has got to be painted before there is any more play-acting."

Natural questions for the reporter to ask Mr. Haskins on first seeing him was: "How does it feel to be farming again?" "Not so bad," he said, after a brief pause, "and that's putting it mildly."

There are only five members who gather in the group. One of them is Hilda Morrow, is the 42-year-old wife of a grain buyer (who is also secretary of the group) and mother of six children ranging from 14 to 20—although you would not believe this to look at her.

But he is a born farmer, nevertheless. His family came to Calgary from Minnesota in 1903 and he moved to his present three-quarter section in 1907. A year ago, fire destroyed the house and he spent the summer rebuilding it. He cultivated well over 200 acres of the farm, raises 60 to 65 bags a year and keeps 30 head of cattle.

His youngest daughter, Shirley, age six crept up to him when he came home in triumph and whispered "Dadsy, I know why you won. I prayed for you."

Most remarkable feature of the group's meteoric rise to dominion-wide fame is the conquering enthusiasm instilled into the other four members by Vic Duffy rugged bronzed Kanuck born farmer, whose heart is in the land and whose quiet exterior belies the vitality which lies beneath.

Mr. Haskins lives four miles north of Clive. Mr. Duffy lives three miles east; the Harrows live in the village.

Now they must come back to earth again—Mr. Haskins and Mr. Duffy to the spring work on the farms Hilda Harrow to a pile of sewing which she imagine of ever catching up with. Charlie to school. But in their hearts the stage at London, holding the audience spell bound, with Mr Duffy back-stage and giving them all the strength of his keen pride. And surely each is dreaming of next year's play and the fields to be conquered in years to come.

Auxiliaries To Safety

Provided the cost of installation is not too great to render productive the sum of those in sufficient numbers to be of real value the average automobile owner rambling motorist is beginning to realize that every warning up on the other side before the crest is reached should be effective as a life and limb saver on the highways.

The result of six years experimentation, the new device consists of a glass 12 feet wide and four feet high which is mounted on a bridge abroad along the lines of the Bell satellite to those used to carry railway signals.

It is made of 17 ½ gauge laws of glass laid parallel across the face according to a process invented by the Corning New York Safety Glass Co. Each line is a prism which bends the light rays coming up one side of the ball to go downward on the other side and reflects everything about half one diameter it is said to be effective at night.

To what extent the general use of such a device on the highways would prevent accidents occurring on hills is difficult to say since it has been put to practical use for a period of time. Suffice it to say, however that lack of vision over hilltops has been responsible for many serious accidents in the past, resulting in many deaths and serious injuries, to say nothing of property loss represented by wrecked automobiles and trucks.

Such accidents are sometimes caused by a driver pertaining to driving up a hill at high speed on the wrong side of the road, or of one driver passing another near the top of a hill while a third car travelling in the opposite direction is coming up on the other side leaving insufficient space for the three cars to pass one another abreast

Lincoln a Thief

On the face of it, the invention appears to have sufficient merit to make a demonstration of its use worth while and any money which the government might spend in installing one or two on the principal highways in each of the provinces would probably be money well expended. In the event of three trial mirrors of this type proved their worth, it would not be long before the general motoring public would demand that they be placed on each side of the dangerous hills and dissidence would be prepared to defray the cost of such a convenience.

The smog bell on the highway is, of course only one of the hazards of motor travel, but it is one of the most prolific sources of danger and as it is much true to motor with the unprotected level country, so it is to motor on the highways commencing, the present is an opportune time to take stock of the dangers of the open road and to endeavor to find a way in which they can and should be taken, if not to eliminate entirely, to minimize at least the tremendous annual toll of life, limb and property exacted by accidents on the highway.

This is largely an individual problem since statistics, as far as the necessary information is available, demonstrate that the human element is responsible for by far the greater percentage of the risks and the losses. In other words, a very substantial proportion of accidents is due to carelessness, negligence, or recklessness, or plain overconfidence and lack of proper precaution rather than mechanical defects

* * *

Like Is Heaven

With the human element the vagaries of reconstruction, misplacement or the sheer carelessness of the driver, responsible for the great majority of accidents on the highway it is essential that every motorist take time out occasionally to conduct a self-examination of his own habits and mental reflexes at the wheel.

It is a good precautionary measure for a driver to list potential causes of accidents and ask himself what he would do were he suddenly faced with situations likely to cause disaster to the unprepared. It is good practice for the motorist to be able to react to a similar list of his own by the time he reaches the highway and drill himself into decisions to avoid them

"I did not see it," is one of the most frequent excuses heard at the post mortem of highway accident, bewildering lack of powers of observation or failure to exercise them.

Every driver of an automobile or truck should cultivate the practice of watching for the little things which may signal danger ahead. The sudden, disturbed flight of a bird sitting on the road apparently undisturbed by a car or idle pedals ahead is likely to be a warning that another vehicle is approaching at right angles.

The keenly observant driver eventually develops an intuition of pending danger which some say may stand him in good stead and save his life and the lives of others. The careless, non-observant driver is frequently caught unaware.

Mechanical devices such as those referred to at the outset have their value but their value is materially lessened if the driver does not permit them to relax his vigilance or to let up in the practice of sensible conduct.

Imports Some Wool

Australia Has Not Produce Cause Grades In Any Quantity

Australia has for many years led the world by a wide margin in wool production. While the population of the Commonwealth today is 100,91- short of the seven million mark there are 114,200,810 sheep on it, or to every person. Last year these sheep grew more than 1,100,000,000 pounds of wool. This is one point in which Australia leads Canada. The latter dominion has about the same number of sheep as the Australian commonwealth, but the former produces only 2,615,000 sheep and the annual wool production is only 10,915,000 pounds.

During February in London attended by representatives from all the British nations, an increase over the corresponding month of 1928 of 142,667. A fact recently brought to light is that Australia despite its huge production has to import from other countries wool of some grades. The reason is that Australian sheep are largely bred for the production of merino wool, which is the finest grade. Merino sheep, however, are not suitable for the production of the coarser grades for blending with the finer Australian wools and have to be imported from other countries.

Australia claims to be the wealth land of the British Commonwealth. The Commonwealth there are 868,180 registered motor vehicles, 620,342 telephones in use and 4,000,000 persons, in all of which she is behind Canada in the gross annual value of each on a per capita basis. Her average bank deposits at latest report were $1,210 against about $175 per capita, compared with $1,053,208,000 for Canada's chartered banks at about $150 per head.

Study Of The Weather

Complete Co-operation Exists Between United States And Canada

International weather reports are studied by weather problems and recognizes no artificial boundaries. This was brought out recently in a long time ago To further the study of the weather, the two governments have seen fit to exchange of weather reports among all countries possessing meteorological services. This co-operation exists now here so completely as between the United States and the United Canada. The weather services of these two countries maintain complete and most minutely exhaustive liaisons therein.

Three thousand disabled soldiers of the Great War still are being treated in British hospitals. Great Britain supplies about 1,000 artificial limbs to war pensioners in a single year.

THE WEEK IN EDMONTON

Edmonton visit of Hon. W. D. Herridge, organizer of the new Democracy movement in Canada, attracted a good deal of attention in the Capital City during the week. The former Canadian Minister to Washington conferred with Premier Aberhart and members of the provincial cabinet during his stay but he issued no statement to the press. Premier Aberhart, however, said that he believed the Herridge proposals will receive endorsation from progressives across the Dominion.

According to C. A. Bowman, editor of the Ottawa Citizen, Mr. Herridge will abandon from politics entirely and the King and Queen have left the country, and then he will place his definite program before the people.

Citizens of country points who come to Edmonton for the Royal Visit are reminded that city stores will close at 12.00 p.m. if a by-law now being drafted is passed by city council. The Province will assent to the by-laws passage, it was intimated. Previously it had been intended to close city stores all day, but in view of the hardships this might entail on visitors, the 1.00 o'clock closing was substituted. Lunch counters and cafes are said to be preparing for the rush by putting up box lunches.

Royal Commission to investigate the R.I.D. will be composed of one man—Mr. Justice John A. Jackson, according to terms of an Order-in-council which has been signed by the Lieutenant-Governor. The investigation is set to begin tentatively on May 23.

Of interest in government circles during the week was the bringing in of Alberta's newest and probably most spectacular oil well, Stavelle No. 2, which blew in Saturday and was brought under control Tuesday. Members of the oil mission, headed by Hon. N. E. Tanner who are now in London, England, were immediately informed of the strike. Meanwhile, as drillers had penetrated only nine feet in the sand zone at 3,361 feet and were drilling out a cement plug when the well went into production with a strong flow of gas. Official production tests have not been completed.

LINE ELEVATORS SEEK EXPANDED USES FOR WHEAT

Winnipeg, May 16—Carrying on their work in seeking expansion of markets for Canadian wheat, Line Elevator Companies have appointed Cecil Lamont as their representative to attend the American conference of representatives of agriculture, industry and science which is being held at Columbus, Ohio, this week under the auspices of the National Farm Chemurgic Council of the United States.

While the Columbus Conference is to deal chiefly with problems in the finding of new industrial uses for corn beans and nuts, the deliberations will have a direct bearing on markets for wheat.

THOSE "ISMS"

Three definitions of "isms" keep expanding as they make the rounds. The latest compilation is submitted by a contributor to the Saskatoon Star-Phoenix:

Socialism: You have two cows; you give one to your neighbor.

Communism: You have two cows—you give both cows to the government which gives you part of the milk.

Fascism: You have two cows—you keep both cows and give the milk to the government, which lets you buy part of it back.

American New Deal: You have two cows—government shoots one cow, buys milk of other and pours it down sewer.

Nazism: You have two cows—government shoots you, takes cows and sells milk.

Capitalism: You have two cows. You sell one cow and buy a bull.

Liberalism: You have two cows. The government gives you a bull, buys feed for three and you keep the milk.

Social Credit: You shoot the bill.

THIS AND THAT

Rev. C. Warren, who has been ill and was at the home of his brother-in-law, Alex. Ritchie, returned to Bently on Saturday and was able to occupy the pulpit on Sunday. Mrs. Warren and son have returned from a month's visit at the coast.—Bindley Record.

Our federal Government has taken an idea from the United States and is considering the distribution of butter and flour, of which we have a surplus among our own people who are on relief. To some extent these supplies are a problem of under-consumption, and if distribution is made to people who cannot afford to buy butter and flour it will not only reduce the stocks on hand, but improve the health conditions among the poor.

Dr. J. W. S. McCullough, of the Health League of Canada, declares that cancer is not transferrable from animals to man. There is no danger in handling a cancer or living in close contact with a cancer patient.

The strong wind on Saturday caused some of the Dalberon residents to do some cussing. Cream cans at the local creamery were rolled helter-skelter. FLASH WILLIAMS COMING TO EDMONTON JUNE 1

Flash Williams, internationally known picture stunt star, head of a crew of famous thrill drivers in crashing and smashing of automobiles, will present a performance, one only at the Edmonton Exhibition Grounds on Thursday, June 1st, at 7.30 p.m.

His feats consist of the famous T-Bone crash which he invented. He places a car diagonally across a high ramp in front of the grand stand. This ramp he will approach at high speed. The car he is driving is catapulted into the air and dives head-on into the parked car.

Herb Ahlgren does the death drag, which consists of being hauled through flaming pools of gasoline while he bangs with bare hands to bumper of automobile.

The climax of the show is the dash through a blazing house. When the blaze is at its bright-est he races around the oval and then plunges from the ramp into this inferno.

He will present his entire show in front of the grandstand at the Edmonton Exhibition Grounds on Thursday, June 1st, at 7.30 p.m.

At all Christian Science Churches next Sunday, the Golden Text is Lesson-Sermon will be "Soul and Body". The Golden Text is Isaiah 26:10. One of the Scriptural citations reads: "Thou, soul of thy servant: for unto Thee, O Lord, do I lift up my soul" (Psalms 86:4).

One of the correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, is: "The divine Mind maintains all identities, from a blade of grass to a star, as distinct and eternal. The questions are: What is God? God's identities? What is Soul? Does life or soul exist in the thing formed" (p. 70).

CHAPTER VIII

Soon they were tasting over the meadow, and Sarah Lynn was a warm symbol of gratitude that it had been leveled into the semblance of a decent landing-field circuit greasy. Uncle Lynn, going to that extra expense so that she might see her Ladybug first in the setting of old memories!

The plane turned, disdained the browning grass, rose securely into the air, instantly flung itself into a bluer of ecstasy that she had never known. Turning, tasting to all earthy thrills, she realized that a calm-plane cut in two the kingdom of the power and the glory. Now, with nothing between her and the sky she was really flying!

"My first flight in my own plane. She had hoped to begin her out, she-chanics, helpers, attendants. There was a puzzle with a crimson whirl etched on Sarah Lynn stepped to the ground.

"Well, Miss Dean, how do you like your bus? Stick job, huh? Going to fly her yourself?" He gave dimer to Lynn and Mr. Lynn and Commer Thorvald together? The reporter's pencil flashed. "Any bands, huh? Sort of 'Welcome to the sky?'"

Commer Thorvald isn't keen," she began coldly, but then she saw him smiling kindly at her. "Oh, please, you're rather not" She kept her hand down.

The Norwegian ace reached them. "I drove you home," he said without preliminary greeting.

The young newspaper man managed a snapshot while they got into Jordan's car. Thanks a lot" he called out, his nose leaning partly to-naughty.

They rolled out of the field and down the road.

"Oh, I forgot!" Sarah Lynn said. "Great-granny died Uncle Lynn was coming for me! I'm afraid I must wait for them."

"Not at all," he agreed cordially. Then they walked on and he was presently related at having "important" matter swiftly on hand. She would be a fool not to make friends and have did not marry.

Newspaper publicity broke out like a rash.

Miss Elizabeth Pennington proved to be pretty in the hands of bright young reporters and blasé feature-writers. Jon Ross and Jan Frazier, papers Quickly and pleasantly they extracted the information Sarah Lynn's old childhood with Commer Thorvald to be woven in the meadow and her pre-gatter, inhospitality for their type-writers before she was well out of the city.

Lasting was a rich theme and long rang endless changes upon it.

Many pages were taken by Commer Thorvald's life and his career as an Olympic flyer.

There was an epic battle between Sarah Lynn's old beautiful Commer and the little Commer, small and mighty and sound. I'm sorry for you, Addie" she said but you better make up your mind to it. I'm a terror at flying, and the hen that hatched ducks, you got to swim. I guess maybe it's a waste of time to watch me fly these years."

We bought her that flying-suit, chute and all, and we pay for having a young feller to teach her to run it. Didn't tell you first time we saw her, but my young-ones' I know right off she was one of the dark ones."

"Then she went close and peered up at her and shook a parchment finger at her. "And you listen to me, Addie for it's the gospel truth. Never say child these days is yours for all you borned her and there's some then severely years her own."

Sarah Lynn was nervously sorry for her mother's martyrdom but life seemed to her now very white and sane and splendid facts flying and Commer Thorvald the father she had quite ran into her mind it was like pouring funds into an already brimming bowl they simply ran over and off.

Whenever she flew with Commer Thorvald she was entirely conscious of watching his sure hands, looking, learning remembering, and stored up against the days on earth.

"I have the wish to see your Golden Gate in manner," he said one day at Jordan's. They were driving to the landing-field. "Gnome, I want to come down in a parachute." Sarah Lynn said.

"Yes. But not yet. There is her you remain in training."

"Of course After I can really fly. It must be the most satisfying thing in the world—not so terribly hard. Just wait and count ten before you pull the ripcord, every day I'll learn."

"That is, you think, so simple!" She elbowed happily "It must be the most gloriously terrifying thing —just hailing out into the blue between with a nifty trick pursued over you! But I want to do it, Commer" He nodded. "You shall do it. That is the matter Without you there. But when I say you see ready."

"Yes." She settled back in her seat, entirely content.

Sarah Lynn leaned over Lightning's ear and shouted. "You have one of the most American friend already My Uncle Lynn was Consul Jordan My Uncle Lynn was Consul Jordan My uncle the possible persons in this country for you to know. He says he'd like to meet you. He's a great sportsman."

"Alive, he make good sequin."

"Oh" I didn't know that."

"Will you At his lodge on the Lake Lynn? Your mother will be sad by the fire, wind and rain sound-ing, to listen to his deep thoughts and his puns." He gave generous pleasantry to a truck. "You shall have it I will show you how one day."

She did not answer, unless, indeed, he heard the humming her of her heart. She thought he must. It was a relief to reach the park and get out of the car, and to watch him there as they used walking into the pasture and the trees.

The effect upon him was amazing. He would never be ecstatic or boyish, however, but all the self-protection and emotion which others expended went into the quality of his humanity. He silence He stopped smiling, he if he found home if in a certain mood, and he would under the thrish of unutilized-butter-colored hair, might see the boy-like countenance of a Boy Scout hunt upon good deed.

Commer was looking only at the trees, as Sarah Lynn was able to look at him. He seemed younger, somewhat his austerity was giving way to a little-boy-like wonder, with an intentness of watchfulness.

"Friends," he began as he-tant. "So, now, we are friends."

"Yes," she told him contentedly.

"Friends," he repeated, but there was clearly more on his mind. "Friends, then," he added with authority, "shall not marry."

AUCTIONEERS' CONVENTION

The fourth annual Auctioneers' Convention was held in Edmonton on May 12 and 13. It was attended by 45 members of the profession in Alberta, among them being one of our local auctioneers Mr. Alec Imes, of Tees. During the convention many useful instructions were received from Col. Fred Heppert who is an outstanding man in his profession. It was decided by the Association to hold a short course. This, the first convention ever held in Alberta, proved very successful and no doubt will be helpful to our auctioneers, enabling them to give better service to the public.

"NEW DEAL" FOR CANADA

The speech made recently at Vancouver by Hon. W. D. Herridge on the "New Deal" will be bitterly resented by the old party hacks in Ottawa. Men of the Howard Ferguson and Cahan type are highly displeased over his recent utterances about the old party system.

Too long have the old party leaders allowed themselves to be influenced and swayed by big industrialists and the dollar power of Canada. The rank and file of the Liberal party have tried to reform their leaders but without success. In the case of Conservatives it was the other way around. Both Bennett and Manion have progressives also but they are handicapped by the older section of the party who are opposed to reform.

There is not a thinking man or woman but will agree that there is something wrong with our present system and that the public is involved in the wrong. Thousands of our best people, after working hard all their lives, are still living in comparative poverty as a direct result of political mismanagement. Thousands more are out of employment, or never had a job, all because of a faulty political system designed to staff a privileged few with inordinate profits at the expense of the many. Governments are put in power to serve the best interest of all classes, not just for the private gain of a certain class.

How to make big financial institutions work for the service of the State is only a detail that has to be worked out, but the point is that it can be worked out and made to serve the State instead of becoming its master.

Mr. Herridge is on the right trail. It may take time to work out a New Deal, but eventually his plan will win. He is not making any extravagant promises not declaring any monthly dividends, nor big pension schemes, nor stopping people from working at a certain age regardless of the state of their health, nor is he suggesting a paternalistic system but we must and keep our young people on the bottle for the rest of their lives. His theory is that if we correct the abuses of present-day democracy—clear away obstructions now lying in the path of progress—the intelligent people of Canada will then be free to work out their individual problems without any "fear and trembling." The so-called right to do one down means to us the rights of another down somewhere.

The MINIMUM PRICE

The federal government has decided to change its wheat legislation and the acts covering the same will be repealed.

A minimum price of 70c a bushel is being provided for in the amended legislation and the average basis plan is being changed to the following basis:

Where the yield is from 0 to 13 bu. 70 cts per acre.

Where the yield is 14 to 20 bu. $4.50 per acre.

Two dollars where the yield is not more than 4 bu.

In areas of not less than 100 municipals in any one province where crop failures occur from drouth or grasshoppers $2.50 an acre will be paid on half the estimated land not exceeding 160 acres. The max paid will be not less than $400

A new provision permits a farmer to obtain the guaranteed minimum price on not more than 5,000 bushels of wheat in any one year. A penalty of 10c. a bushel, or improvement not exceeding a month, is provided for anyone who attempt to get the minimum price on more than that volume of wheat.

The western farmers asked the Government for the minimum price, and it is obvious that the subject involves a considerable concession in being made in order to get figure to 70c. This subject has been one of highly controversial nature, strong opposition against increasing the price having been met in Western Canada.—T. J. A. Budget.

LOCAL AND OTHER ITEMS OF GENERAL INTEREST

E. Roy M Lees, Optometrist and Optician, will be at the Alix Hotel on Tuesday morning, June 6th. Please note that Mr. Mclean is in Calgary office, 203-205 Southam Building, on Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturdays of each week.

Alix Agricultural Society celebrate the visit of Royalty by attending the dance in the hall at the Fair Grounds on Friday, June 2nd.

The new building erected by W. A. Agar, agent for Massey-Harris, on Railway Ave., will be open for business about the 1st of June. By the looks of equipment on the ground, Mr. Lyle intends to run a gasoline station in connection with his implement business.

The sympathy of the community will go out to Mr. Leslie Weeks who in one month has lost both father and mother. His father died on May 6th and his mother on May 25th. Mrs. Weeks was buried in the Tees cemetery on May 28th.

Old Mr. Berg and two others, while coming into town last Friday had a very narrow escape when their car ran into the ditch on Lake st. Kindly assistance was rendered by Gene Dorn and Art Lisack.

Mr. and Mrs. Wold and two children, of Turner Valley, were visiting the latter's parents, Mr and Mrs. John Bonham, of Alix, last week.

Oddfellows and Rebekahs Memorial Service will be held at the cemetery on Sunday, June 4th, at 3 p.m. Visitors are welcome.

Miss Adell Carroll, daughter of Jas. T. Carroll, died on Friday, May 26th, after years of suffering. The funeral took place on Sunday afternoon from the United church.

In our obituary notice of Mrs. Wedger, last week, among the names of those who contributed flowers, the "Montana Boys" should read "Maintainer Boys."

Bert Hooson is out with a good suggestion for improving the appearance of Alix. He is offering to clean up all the garbage, piles—ash heaps, tin cans, etc.—every month, at the reasonable fee of 25c. per month. There is no law compelling this service, but we do think that quite a number of our people will be pleased with the idea of getting rid of the unsightly piles that characterize the landscape for at least ten or eleven months of every year. The absence of these garbage piles make a contribution to beauty as well as to health. Citizens who are in favor should notify Bert and give him authority to clean up every month the old dump in the back yard.

Today a number of our citizens are conspicuous by their absence many of them may be found among the cheering crowds at Edmonton. It is an occasion for great rejoicing among our own people. Even those who cannot go will join with the rest in wishing their majesties godspeed across our broad acres and, after a brief visit to Uncle Sam, a safe return to their island home across the Atlantic.

If you want to spend more of your time on links open a line of chain stores.

Fred McGonigal has started the erection of a store building on the site formerly occupied by Penn Yan, then Ingalsbe.

Jos Brooker, on Wednesday, completed the job of re-shingling the roof of the Anglican church The battry has also been renewed.

Crop report No. 2 from the Provincial Government has been received but too late for publication. The general tenor of the report is favorable so far as our district is concerned. The heaviest rain fell in the Edmonton district, being over five inches. We are in Div. No.8 comprising Med. Deer-Lacombe-Stettler. Red Deer is credited with 2.07 inches; Stettler, 3.30. So we will likely be nearer Stettlers record so far as rain is concerned. Mr. Farley will be publishing his records every every week during July and August.

ALIX AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY

BOOST FOR YOUR 1939 FAIR

A very good meeting of the above was held on Saturday last and arrangements were made for the coming Fair to be held on Friday, August 18th. It was suggested that the rural schools be invited to exhibit their work in school groups and a special prize will given for this class. The rural schools will also be invited to form a Softball League to play off for a cup. Send Seeds and Seeds will be played off on the day of the Fair.

The following schools will be invited :—Tees, Ripley, Sergent, Stanton, Carroll, Kirkling, Gadsby, Lake, Stone and Alix.

The Secretary of the Agricultural Society would be pleased to meet the different teachers of the above schools with a view to getting the softball games started as soon as possible.

The Society will arrange to have horse races on Fair day if enough entries are made to assure interesting races. It is now up to owners of fast horses to get in touch with Secretary Whitfield as soon as possible so that these races may be well advertised.

As the Alix Fair is one of 20 Agricultural Fairs authorized by the Government for 1939, it is up to everybody that has the interest of the district at heart to get out and boost our 1939 Fair. Let us all start now and make this year's Show one to be remembered as a bigger and better Fair for Alix.

Watch your local paper and keep in touch with the different notices that will be published every week.

Peril On The Highways

A result arising out of the causes of accidents to motorists in the United States in 1925 places the responsibility for the great toll of the deaths and injuries from these causes squarely on the driver. Since conditions and human nature in this country are approximately the same, undoubtedly even if the facts available a similar indictment could be laid at the door of the man behind the wheel for most of the accidents which occurred in Canada last year.

Since there is nothing to warrant an assumption that motorists are going to abandon reckless habits with the opening of the 1926 season of slaughter on the highways in this country, it is a reasonably safe bet that before the end of this year seventy hundred new fatalities will have been recited in the casualty columns, countless un-mentionable to human ears and thousands will carry new scars, bruises and internal injuries as painful reminders of human fallibility behind the wheel.

As may have been observed in 1925 and the analysis shows that comparatively few of the 32 000 deaths and more than a million injuries sustained by the motorists on the roads in 1925 are attributable to defects in the mechanical equipment or to faulty atmosphere or road conditions, leaving the blame entirely on the motorist for the great majority of the enormous toll.

* * * *

Causes Of Accidents

And year rather more than 32 000 motor vehicles were involved in 30,000 fatal accidents on the roads in the United States. Investigation revealed that over 24 000 of these cars and trucks were apparently in good mechanical condition which means that less than 8,000 were faulty on account of poor brakes, defective steering mechanism, glaring headlamps or other weaknesses on the motor vehicle itself If the analysis is correct, 80 per cent. of the casualties cannot be charged up against poor or defective equipment.

Neither can bad weather be indicted for more than 10 per cent. of the accidents for approximately 25,000 accidents occurred in clear weather with fog, sleet, snow or rain entirely absent

Further, pavements slippery or treacherous roads caused by precipitation in the form of snow or ice or rain cannot be held blameworthy for more than one-fourth of last year's fatal accidents, or about 7,500 deaths. The other 22,500 deaths happened on roads that were perfectly dry at the time.

* * * *

The Driver To Blame

After allowing for the fact that some of the crashes were undoubtedly caused by a combination of two or more of the conditions mentioned, it is still the opinion of statisticians that undoubtedly more than half the deaths and injuries on the highways in 1925 were due to some quirk of human nature on the part of the drivers—carelessness, recklessness, inattention or even downright criminal recklessness.

It is illuminating to note that out of the 32,000 fatal traffic accidents, approximately 8,000 are attributed to observation or waves on the part of the driver, approximately 8,000 or almost 60 per cent. were caused by excessive speed by drivers who paid no attention to legal speed limits and it is further important in diagnosing the trend of the times, to observe that the motorists to travel too fast for safety has been on an upward curve for several years.

Of the balance of 12,000 deaths chargeable directly against the motorist handling the wheel, over 3,200 were caused by reckless driving, approximately 2,750 resulted from the use of the wrong side of the road, almost the same number were caused by drivers going ahead when they should wait, and the balance are credited to such dangerous practices as cutting in too soon head of the car just passed, passing other cars on the wrong side, and other violations of commonsense traffic rules.

* * * *

The Human Element

Just how much of this commonsense death and injury toll can be charged up against careless drivers is purely a matter of speculation, but, unfortunately there are reasons for believing that there were many more than were directly assigned to this cause and that the number rests into the thousands.

One further lesson is to be gained from a perusal of the 1926 American highway accident statistics and that is the fact that the death and injury toll was nearly twice as great on Saturdays and Sundays than other days of the week. Statistics due the inevitable increase in weekend traffic, especially in and near the larger centres of population, augmented undoubtedly by the care-free spirit of holiday crowds, coupled with the likelihood of a larger percentage intoxicated to a greater or less degree.

* * * *

Rebates From Within

If this greater slaughter of the guilty and innocent alike is going to continue and to increase the time is going to come when it will deter many from travelling the pioneers of the open road.

What is going to be done about it ? Strict regulations and their rigid enforcement undoubtedly have a beneficial effect but it must appear that if conditions are to be improved and the highways rendered reasonably safe drivers must exercise more restraint and greater care. The reformation must come from within That seems to be the most potent solution of a very serious problem

Crops On Arid Lands

Dry Farming In Practical Where Annual Rainfall Is Light

Dry farming is the raising of crops on land on semi-arid lands without irrigation It consists of crop rotation, tilling in such manner as to hoard soil moisture, destruction of weeds and running drought-resisting plants

Dry farming is usually restricted to where the annual rainfall is less than 20 inches in a condition which makes special methods of moisture conservation necessary Irrigation of land which is semi-arid instead of the land, is not part of dry farming

Dry farming has probably been practiced ever since the dawn of civilization, and is carried on to some every continent in the world," says a bulletin from the United States Department of Agriculture "Modern dry farming is simply applying methods which have been found successful in the ancient provision of moisture conservation and cultivation, to the greater quantities of plants available for the use of mankind under the name of Conservation of the moisture already in the soil by preventing its escape in the form of evaporation, tillage methods and the adaptation of crop plants to moisture conditions are the means employed.

Bears Heat Of Revenue

Canada Derives Large Sum From Income Tax Payments

Income tax payments furnished the largest single item in the increase in revenue during the last fiscal year, it was revealed Finance Minister Robb's budget speech

The total was $142,925,000, the highest ever received in any fiscal year, a revenue of 16 per cent. over the previous year. There was $95,145,000 more from the tax on corporation income, $46,887,000 from individual income tax and $1,000,000 more from the tax on interest and dividends.

Customs duties yielded on net total of $76,750 000, a decrease of $14,750,000

Passes Experimental Stage

Dehydrating Process Of Eggs Now Taken Up Seriously

So far success seeming has been attained in the drying of eggs by experimental scale but recently the progress and cure of a trans Pacific steamer plans closed on White Island

Drying of eggs is simply removing the water contained in them. The process is accomplished by placing the eggs in a vacuum chamber and heating them to a temperature of about 140 degrees Fahrenheit. The heat causes the water to evaporate and the vacuum pump draws off the vapor. The process takes about 24 hours. The dried eggs are then ground into a powder and packed in tins.

Water, however, should make no bid to be mentioned in connection with the dehydrating of eggs. Experiments are being conducted with a view to eliminating the water, but so far without success. Water is also necessary in the preparation of eggs for use. It is necessary to add water to the powder in the proportion of about one part of water to two parts of powder. The water should be added slowly and the powder stirred constantly. The mixture should be allowed to stand for about an hour before using.

Dried eggs have been found to be particularly suitable for use in cooking. Cakes, omelettes, custards and other dishes requiring eggs are said to be very good when made with dried eggs. Dried eggs will keep for a long time without spoiling.

Floor Slap In Washington Is Sadly Out Of Date

The start of the floor way in the Washington Public Building in Washington a one-by-wing inquiry of the Department of Commerce a few years ago when the $2,000 000 building was erected. The worst fault was the choice of a floor material which was a fault serious and caused plastic surgery operations to be performed. Experts seemed unanimous that the floor material should be of a kind which would not be slippery when wet. What floor material which have been suggested? Rubber, linoleum, cork, a moderate sand, of the kind used in the Capitol, and a composition which is soft enough to be walked upon without slipping, but which is not sticky when wet and never at once.

History Of British Columbia Winds Up Of Life-Time

New Westminster is observing the fifth anniversary of the arrival in British Columbia, of the Royal Engineers detachment which came on the Fraser River. This is remarkable that after so long a space six of the party who arrived on that ship are still alive They were all of course, children Practically the whole history of the development of the province lies within their life-time

The Royal Engineers, who were dispatched to British Columbia, when the Mainland colony was established, were enlisted by Queen Victoria, on Prince Edward Bulwer Lytton to do various things They were to undertake development work, and they did, running surveys clearing land building roads and bridges They were to act as a defence and police force.

They were also called to form a corious of population in the Island colony and their detachment are still out to-day —Vancouver Province

Governor Of Bank Of England Keeps In Background

"Mystery Man" of finance, Montagu Norman, Governor of the Bank of England is apparently loth shy of publicity than he was when he first came, in the past, he has often dodged reporters as cleverly as Garbo his manner he is now prepared to let his voice be heard by the multitude. Recently he gave a wireless talk to the Empire His subject, naturally concerned the work of the Bank of England. On his trunk, Mr Norman sometimes conceals his identity under the title of "Professor Skinner," and he seldom gives interviews.

Mary Dana Webster went to drink tea with Lyna Dana, an austere pastor between her eyes

"Ardine is perfectly poisonous about Sarah Lynn !

He shrugged. "Is it important?"

"Probably not, but it disturbs me. She's exceptionally fond of Sarah."

"Doubtless. What's the basis of it?"

"Partly dugout at having the ugly darling, but I think it's largely that at yielding first place as Dannevale's centre of interest to her grand-niece by an account of Jim Allison. She has worked it out in her nasty little mind that Sarah Lynn by being the victim of her jobs on Gunnar Thorwald, is responsible for his company and final destruction."

"And that goes deep ?"

"Apparently. It is her predatory fixation," his young housemate said, "she cares enormously Dad you know he's been grounded? Tim Drigbing Nive had, to begin with, and what a mess she's made of his life!"

Lynn Dana nodded. "Of every life she really touches. Poor old Hasting!"

"I don't think he's ever come really out from the other," his cousin assented him.

Visit to to Sarah Lynn, I don't think there is in the world which matter to her ere flying and Gunnar Thorwald. Ardine could be more evasive him than she could take on as to the plane about to she was simply lost in activities I really don't see what she can do."

"Well, I don't either, Uncle Lynn," her plain and plainest face lifted a little. "But just the same, she sort of worries me"

The parachute jump now held the limelight in Sarah Lynn's thoughts She read and studied and asked questions and listened eagerly to Harold Jordan and to Ned Lynn Spent an to his wheeled-chair and approved.

"Won't it be pretty hefty with two chutes, one in front and one behind?" she wanted to know

"I have said I will remove the door," Jordan reminded her

"Then you can dive out, forward, and that's much handier than backing out." Conrad Jordan said, lightly.

Sarah Dana's amusing gaze sluggishly from one calm speaker to the other "If you don't mind, Sarah Lynn, I'd rather like you to take whatever precautions suggest themselves."

"Of course Uncle Lynn I want to be sensible."

Besides the small sight thing with her clear drive and very fine and the evening dress of the day, hands remained in her lap, pressing this dazzling danger as remote and unreal as possible. Dates to go dating

The mental reactions are very different her uncle's flying from mind is a personalized point of being out to an emergency to save your life All the breaks are with you now Power going at the time is inevitably you have no fear and are serene and competent. You are to be a tremendous satisfaction to you at the moment and to the spectators. But the actual jump is quite another matter.

SEEKS MORTGAGE BANK AS AID TO FARMERS

Ottawa, May 29—Establishment of a central mortgage bank under the terms of a bill now before parliament would be a "real contribution to the agricultural industry and, to the extent we can help, we are prepared to do our part," J. Arey Leonard, counsel for the Dominion Mortgage and Investment Association, told the Commons banking committee on Monday.

Difficulty was seen by Mr. Leonard in application of the bill to mortgage on urban properties. General principles could be applied to farm mortgages because the whole industry was depressed, but conditions varied with each urban mortgage.

NOTE AND COMMENT

By th terms of the new treaty between Italy and Germany, it becomes apparent that Mussolini has agreed to play second fiddle to Hitler. How on the other hand, what is treaty worth between two swash men—just a scrap of paper.

The British Government is offering farmers in England £2 an acre for ploughing up pasture and other idle land. It is estimated that 250,000 acres may thus be brought under cultivation. England is systematically preparing for war with every facility available.

Government committees at work, both in Canada and the United States report that one of the great factors hindering economic recovery lies in the vast pools of private savings which clog the bank vaults. These savings and "frozen assets", in the aggregate run into enormous proportions in both countries. Mr. Denning referred to this recently during his budget speech, and spoke of making an effort to release some of this capital through the banks. In a case of national emergency, such as exists at present, there ought to be some way of bringing this money out of hiding. Dominion thrift must include other methods than low interest rates ought to count some of it out.

MAY DEVALUE POUND

It is anticipated that Great Britain will devalue the pound sterling before long. Unless our London exchange with its dollar, wheat producers, as well as the producers of other primary products in the dominion will be up against a similar situation to that which prevailed when Britain left gold in 1931. In the worst years of the depression the Canadian dollar was maintained at a relatively high level in accordance with the British pound, the American pound, and the Argentine peso. This made it very difficult for Canada to compete with Australia and Argentina in the sale of primary products, and particularly wheat. At one time Canada had a fair share of the Oriental wheat and flour market, but Australia with her limited resources was able to take this market over almost completely.

Canada depends on international trade to an abnormally high degree for her existence. Last year her exports were $1,004 million, an extraordinary amount for a country with a population of 11 million. The United States took 36 per cent. of Canada's exports last year. If the British pound goes down, however, and the Canadian dollar follows suit, Canada would will shift much of her purchases from Canada to other countries where the exchange will decline along with British money.—U. F. A. Bulletin.

The Premier of Quebec has made the announcement that "The Union government will not tolerate any Nazi propaganda, Communist propaganda or any propaganda whatsoever which is contrary to the democratic institutions of this province."

The Week in Edmonton

Twin thrones graced the Legislative Chamber late this week after the Speaker's chair, which is owned by former Speaker, George N Johnston, of Legislative, was a western visit to the Capital. Mr. Johnston was presented with the chair in recognition of his distinguish services on retiring from political life. A replica was ordered and installed in the chamber. Now, on the occasion of Their Majesties visit, the two chairs will be used as thrones, Mr. Johnston having loaned his chair for the occasion.

Arrival of Hon. N. E. Tanner, minister of lands and mines from his London mission on behalf of the Alberta oil industry, is expected on Monday. While in London the minister was guest at a dinner tendered in his honor at which the Earl of Tankerville presided. The Lordship spoke on the opportunities which the people of Canada have in the building of a better Canada and Commonwealth.

Jasper Park is expected to attract 500 visitors from B. C. on the occasion of Their Majesties visit there. As this will be a rest period, the royal couple will not be expected to attend any public function. Albertans generally are proud of the fact that their King and Queen chose both Banff and Jasper for resting spots during their western visit.

Elm town is to receive a new federal government building worth about half a million dollars, according to Hon. Jas. A. McKinnon, M.P.

Albertans will soon be using blankets, and rubber and asbestos mats made entirely of wool grown and manufactured in Alberta, according to the chairman of the Provincial Marketing Board. Mr. Cinch stated that with completion of arrangements to have his board selected, Alberta's new woolen mill will go into production July 1. Situated in Magrath, the new company received assistance from the local government in the form of a brick building, valued at $6,000, with additional building space for machinery and storage. The company is owned by 32 Alberta business men, the majority of whom are wool growers. Authorized capitalization of stock is limited to $1,000.

A week ago, the King and Queen were in the East, and this week they are touring the West. In the meantime they have visited many towns and cities on the main line of the C.P.R. through the Victoria and spent Thursday at Jasper and today they are in Edmonton. Everywhere they visit immense enthusiasm by citizens from "Dan to Beersheba". If ever this Their Majesties doubt the loyalty of the Canadian people, their ones is hopeless. At Vancouver, thousands of citizens assembled on border to give a hearty greeting to the King and Queen of Canada.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H.G.L. Strange, Director "The Crop Testing Plan

His Majesty George VI and Queen Elizabeth, Canada's King and Queen, are now visiting the western part of the Dominion.

The King is the official head of national head of Canada, Great Britain and of the British Commonwealth of Nations, and his own royal person he is the symbol of that freedom and justice which all enjoy who live under the protection of our Empire flag.

Thirty different races of people have come to our shores, from the far ends of the earth to find homes; some have found prosperity, and all have found and enjoy Protection, Freedom and Justice.

But this Protection, Freedom and Justice rest on our forfathers great sacrifices in blood and treasure, and these privileges and advantages, history tells us, are only maintained by extreme vigilance, and by a continued willingness on the part of all to make similar sacrifices whenever necessary.

It is, therefore, well to remind ourselves that all who enjoy Freedom and Justice in Canada under the King's protection, must be willing at any moment, when called upon by their King, to make, each one, his own particular sacrifice in order to maintain and keep alive this most precious heritage.

RIPLEY NEWS

Under the au-pices of the Ripley community Club, a very pleasant evening, including a shower to the bride, was tendered Mrs. Knechtel on Edith Gwenith, on Friday evening, May 19th. Arrangements were in the hands of Miss Gwen Berritt and Miss Edna Dyn, who carried out their duties most capably, games and dancing featured the evenings program. The gifts were conveyed in a large basket by the Dyn twins who were cunningly costumed for the occasion. Mrs. R. W. Berritt made an appropriate presentation speech, to which the bride and groom replied most suitably and charmingly. The presents of no money old residents of the district, along with the young people testify to the high esteem in which the bride, whose parents and grandparents were pioneers, was held. All join in wishing the young couple a successful and happy matrimonial journey.

Canada Comes First

During the Great War of 1914-18 many rumors were rife and stories in circulation of malicious espionage sabotage and threats of sabotage on the part of aliens then residents in this country and in some cases it was found necessary by the authorities to take some action to meet such anti-British and anti-Canadian activities in the interests of the country as a whole.

Once again, now that the world is again passing through a period of international tension and while war clouds hover alarmingly over a large area of the globe, similar reports are coming to hand indicating that in some parts of this country subversive influences are at work in an effort to undermine democratic government here and to give aid and comfort to a potential enemy.

Fortunately it can be said at the outset that the great bulk of Canadians are loyal to their own country to the form of government that has been bequeathed them by their forebears; to the fundamental principles of democracy on which this country has been founded and has been built, including those dearly bought privileges: freedom of speech, freedom of the press and the right of free assembly.

To these intents of the right to rule themselves and the right of individual freedom and not only do the British-born elements of the community subscribe whole-heartedly and with passion, but also the vast majority of those who have come to this country from foreign lands and acquired new spoken, the great majority of whom have taken the oath to support and maintain the constitution of the country of their adoption, the temporary of which they have sought and are enjoying, together with all the privileges and rights which go with Canadian citizenship.

During the Great War many of these people from other lands, including the countries with which Canada and Great Britain were at war at the time gave many evidences of their loyalty and of the country which they had adopted. Many of them enlisted with the Canadian forces and served overseas, some of them with marked distinction, while others remained in Canada and rendered yeoman service in standing those who were inclined to weaken between two allegiances. To-day, they and those children are honored and respected citizens of the country of their choice. In Canadian institutions and the Canadian form of democratic government is beyond all question and that applies to the overwhelming majority of them.

In the Event

Unfortunately, however, Western Canada is giving harbourage to a small minority, possibly a more handful, who appear determined in the light of recent to resort a baneful influence upon their former compatriots, to create trouble for the authorities and who are taking advantage of the present situation to foment international attention to, or even promote disloyalty to the government of the country.

Reports are ventilated in the press of the formation of secret, underground organizations of subversive character, of agitations being carried on by small groups and individuals, of seditious statements, of espionage, of threats of sabotage and in our recent instance of a threat of death against the family of a war veteran who came out openly and condemned such nefarious activities.

Under all these circumstances and with such disquieting occurrences being ventilated it is not surprising that war veteran's organizations are pressing resolutions calling upon the government of the country to take immediate steps to repress such activities and to demand the suppression of a foreign language newspaper published in this country which, if its statements are correct, is taking a strong anti-British stand in its editorials. While supporting the present principle of the freedom of the press, branches of the Canadian Legion take the stand that suppression of press, branches of the Canadian Legion take the stand that suppression of press, branches of the Canadian Legion take the stand that suppression of

It is not surprising, too, to find that such resolutions are meeting with the tension overseas, is serving as a stimulus to the registration of war veterans who are not only willing but anxious to serve the interests of their country at home, as and when their aid may be required. Such individuals are serving but to rally them to come forward in increasing numbers and register, which is precisely what might be expected.

Action Is Warranted

Recent events give good ground for the government's action in stiffening the law respecting espionage and the government would be quite warranted in adopting some of the numerous recommendations of the veterans' organizations to curb and suppress subversive influences and activities calculated to jeopardize the interests of good loyal Canadians and democratic government in this country.

Just what measure should be taken with this end in view is for the government to decide but whatever steps may be taken should be taken without hesitation that the authorities will be accorded general support by the great majority of Canadians, and not only those of British birth but of practically all those who have come here voluntarily from other lands and have made this country their own and of their descendants.

It must not be overlooked that those who have adopted Canada as their country who have purchases of her hospitality and enjoyed the benefits of her democracy and freedom allegiance to the country and its constitution voluntarily and, and mean it that "Canada comes first."

More Than An Advantage

Aviation Can Also Be A Threat To Any Country

Aviation and wireless are the two inventions of our times that have been the great revolutionary improvements in human communications they have brought into people of different very close to one another and at once to their advantage and their peril.

Mr McTaggart Cowan, a writer here passin the moral and debate for that at once to many events. He says that air passage from Vancouver to London in 48 hours will most likely be possible by 1941.

It is an extraordinary prospect, but Mr. McTaggart Cowan, of course not starting at all. Mr Cowan says goods, almost in a matter of course that there will be another year of experimental flight and preparation then "a permanent service will start and passenger service together.

The progress of the newly-named united Trans-Canada air service the promise and fulfillment of the extended service. The sort of such Mr Cowan is writing on all British and outside the Indispensable complement of trans-continental and trans-oceanic air service. Weather observation is an important phase of it.

Aviation is all more than the and the threat of the future. It may be a menace to peace. It may be the heaviest-than-air flying machine overlarge all the old Frontiers of the world.

Oldest Drummer Boy

The British army's oldest drummer boy is 93.

He is A. S. Thompson, who joined the Territorials at 17, attained the rank of company-quartermaster-sergeant and then reverted to the ranks when he was 59.

Thompson just will not leave the Territorials. He knows that the regulation permits him to serve for other five years as a drummer boy in the band, and he intends to take full advantage of them.

New Machine Invented

Will Fit Seedlings So The Rate Of Loss Is Slow

The invention of a machine which will fit seedlings so that the rate of loss is slow is announced by Mr. Alex Allen, Dominion Forestry Engineer, who has been working on the invention for the past two years. Mr. Allen has been assisted by T. Taylor of the Dominion Forestry Branch, and by J. A. Gardiner and Mr. Taylor of the Dominion Experimental Farms Service.

The machine is the result of experiments which have shown that the height and diameter growth of seedlings is greatly influenced by the manner in which they are planted. Many seedlings are planted with the roots curled up in the hole instead of spread out in their natural position. Many seedlings are planted too deep or too shallow. Many seedlings are planted with the roots bent or doubled back. All of these faults result in poor growth and a high percentage of loss.

The machine, which is now in operation, is designed to plant seedlings so that the roots are spread out in their natural position and the seedling is planted at the right depth. It is not possible to say what the saving in labor will be, but it is estimated that three men with the machine can plant as many seedlings as ten men without it.

Mr. Allen is now in Ottawa where he is supervising the construction of the machine. He hopes to have it in operation in the spring.

Unreported Event

The prison warder was examining a new batch of convicts.

"Here," he said to one of them, "sign your name on this blank."

"Sorry," said the prisoner shaking his head. "I can't sign it."

The warder was amazed. "Why can't you sign it?"

"Because" answered the prisoner, "I can't write."

Oh I see answered warder. He reflected a moment. "Would you say you have been for?"

"Forgery."

"What?" cried the warder. "How could you be convicted of forgery when you can't even write?"

The convict shook his head again. "Well, I think I had a bad lawyer."

London's Famous Kitchen

Free Meals Are Served To Anyone At St. Peter's

Seven Garrick street near theatre-land and famous Bloomsbury, but St. Peter's Kitchen, where free meals are served to all.

The mean consists generally of soup, fish and chips, and, on special occasions, steak pudding. Fred Taylor retired police inspector, now supervises the kitchen, aids to question, but puts down the number of meals served each night. The number varies between 150 and 200. Nobody has been able to say what makes the place busy or not, but every four years, without fail, the serving of soup over head a million meals shows that we are not in the case of high-class restaurants—are always thick. The most crowded night is Thursday when money drawn from dole or pensions has come in at last.

Mr Taylor says that less than two per cent. of his guests are Cockneys. Nearly all have come from distant cities in the age-old belief that the streets of London are paved with gold. There is no employment office to help find work—and two nurses to help mothers! Basil Dean—Evening Daily Mail.

Woman with Severe Neuritis Finds Relief

For the benefit of others who may be troubled with the complaints she suffered from a grateful woman writes:

"Last May I had a very severe attack of neuritis in the leg which made it impossible for me to rest during the day, or get regular sleep at nights so my nothing of the kind seemed to help.

"Various medicines gave me very little relief, and a friend advised me to give Kruschen a trial, as she had derived benefit from it when suffering similarly. I am so thankful that I took her advice. From the very first bottle I felt refreshed, and am now quite free from pain, and get a good night's sleep." (Mrs. H.)

Neuritis, like rheumatism, is due to bags, and grains a is often caused by needle-pointed uric acid crystals which form as the result of sluggish eliminating organs. Kruschen helps to convert these crystals into a form in which they can be passed through the natural channels.

Lynn Dean had written Sally Ann the night before: "As to your question. I don't know! Our upper deck was, beyond all possibility of a doubt, quite blatantly revenge for Joe Sloan in As for the kid he approved her utterly for her courage and cleverness but he's flat-hard and hot-dried if her heart's on her sleeve he doesn't see it, and she has a nice young dignity and reticence! Something old and quite out Con sure is Novosel's rhythm as they fox up the valley, they come down at Oakland before crossing the bay. It sounded only a mince adjustment, but would take a little time.

"Yes, while we coast," the son said. He halted a trail and put her in front of him, and they drove a couple of blocks silent. This will do."

It was a quiet, leafy quiet-ness with a china settee in which on a blanket at the door.

"What's the matter?" she asked the taxi-driver.

"Here," he said meekly. "Comin in square' 'Le. Lena'" He greeted a big-bodied woman with dyed hair. "How's Lena, Ma? Is she here? Can I see her?"

The woman stammered down their pillow and eggs and Connor was buttering a thick slice of bread. "Lena?" Her face and then said slowly, for the high room, and Lynn heard her say: "Lena's not here, Mr. Connor. She's gone. I don't know where she's gone. She left a letter for you, but I don't know where it is. She's gone, that's all I know. She's gone over to Reno, I guess."

The woman said something to him and he nodded. He got up, slipped like a goose pimples on his face and the taxi-driver limped back to the car.

It was quite a long while before Connor came back, everywhere they went somebody knew him, somebody would sit down, and then there would be another round of drinks.

Other customers came in. The woman served them hurriedly. Her husband stood behind the bar and at kitchen again to study at himself in the mirror. He had on a dark British pat-hatted, figure and pigeon legs, and he stood nervously rubbing his hands on the bar-towel opposite.

"I just got out yet," he began in a blaring whisper. "Wish he's a great one to ask you along. On the level, are you Connor? Sally and Ann and that girl?"

They were, they told him. Sarah Lynn gently the Norwegian one with a modern resemblance which this former her.

The wife seemed silent, starting. "But get back where you belong? He took to order "Hitch a horse's—" when asked.

Without a word he scuttled back into his unsavory domain.

Connor had brain-fuel-heavy and drank off his his the eyes were turned to a gleaming glass slit. Then he stood up and walked back through the steady, blaring room, exchanged some handing at the counter, and stuck his head into the alcove and stared.

"He it interests you, flying."

Interests my boy! I read every scrap of it I can get from and I have ambitions—that's got flying in it and when I start here I mean to get up in the sky to stopped gulping, but Adam's apple moving convulsively in his stringy throat.

The wife came back with a pair of boiled plates and nothing rudely put the first in front of Connor. "Try these. Will you have some?"

The Norwegian looked through and beyond her. Yourself would you, ma'am?"

The little man put down a long pronged fork and clapped small hands lightly. "Sure, I'll have some! I command smile. "Just once before I die I wouldn't eat neither more. I wouldn't."

"Come, then."

It was all done in a flash. The aviator-a arm which seemed to lift his fingers, and the fork was poised and propel him through the tiny curtained and into the dark room, flying his meals greeting, running after tempting all his soul. Sarah Lynn heard Connor the eating customers, the woman's scolding, the smiling shrill cries.

Pop! Pop! You come back here! You can't! You can't break your neck! You!" She began to whimper. "Joe! Joe! Tell him! Tell him! Master! I'll call a cop! You can't! Joe!"

Her cries rattling down the street the little men swelled in be-tween. Lynn could hear nothing after jumping out his seat. Sarah Lynn heard Connor the starting motor, the woman's vanishing shrill cries.

THE MORTGAGE BANK

The new legislation introduced by Hon. Mr. Dunning, at this session of the House of Commons will be much good for the West. The minister of finance has described it as being the most revolutionary measure since confederation. If he is successful in piloting this measure through the House this session it will remove from the Liberal party the stigma of "Big Stick" which term opponents enjoy at striking to the old line parties.

In view of the wheat legislation and now this mortgage bank proposition, the Liberals stand to lose a few constituencies in the East. The effect of this latter legislation will be to thaw out mortgage investments and therefore moneys will be available for other purposes. The resultant good effects of this legislation cannot all be anticipated at the moment. For example, a considerable amount of estate moneys will become liquid, which will permit executors and administrators to pay out moneys to persons entitled.

THE ROYAL VISIT

This time next week, Edmonton will be celebrating the arrival of our sovereign, the King of Great Britain & Dominions and his gracious Queen The press is having a glorious time reporting all the happenings of the illustrious visitors. The Queen seems to be very popular with the people, and is certainly getting her full share of attention. The performance of the Calander Quints in bestowing on Queen Elizabeth a demonstration of their affection and admiration has sent a thrill throughout the nation. Children, who are natural and spontaneous, do some wonderful things, and it is just that the little girls recognized the maternal love of the Queen and responded to it as only a child can. To them it was the right thing to do; the impulse came from their own loving hearts and they acted that impulse and the Queen responded just as naturally as the children. Then little people will endear the Queen to every man, woman and child in our far-flung Dominion.

The pictures in the papers, the radios and magazines will still be of great assistance to those who cannot make the trip to see their Majesties personally. We hope that nothing happens to mar their enjoyment while on the side of the Atlantic.

We are of the opinion that Queen Elizabeth will become the most popular Queen that ever shared an English throne.

"God Save the King."

A report from Edmonton states that a brick falling from a building in course of erection struck a man on the head. The victim reported the blow "only made him a bit dizzy". There are men like that.

The Winnipeg Free Press says it was absolutely no reason for a federal election this year, but did reason a number of reasons why there should not be one. The main one is that the Government has not yet worked out its full program and is 1931. There's true enough.

THE WORK IS HAMPERED

Edmonton — Edmonton-Jasper highway, construction of which is a vital factor in the building up of a greater tourist trade in Alberta, is to receive benefit of an additional $100,000 appropriation this session, it was announced by Hon. W.A. Fallow Wednesday last.

The highway, which is already receiving $100,000 for construction this year under the joint agreement between federal and provincial governments, is the last link in the famed circle tour which is expected to attract a great number of outside visitors in years to come.

The new building erected by V. A. Ingle, under the care of Messrs. Harris, on Railway Ave., will be open for business about the 1st of June. By the looks of equipment on the ground, Mr. Ingle intends to run a gasoline station in connection with his implement business.

The sympathy of the community will go out to Mr. Leslie Worne who in one month has lost both father and mother. His father died on May 6th and his mother on May 25th. Mrs. Worne was buried in the Tees cemetery on May 28th.

Old Mr. Berg and two others, while coming into town last Friday had a very narrow escape when their car ran into the ditch on Lake st. Kindly assistance was rendered by Gene Dean and Art Lissack.

Mr. and Mrs. Weild and two children, of Turner Valley, were visiting the latter's parents Mr. and Mrs. John Benson, Alix, this week.

Will others and Sarah the Memorial service will be held at the cemetery on Sunday, June 4th, at 3 p.m. Visitors are welcome.

Miss Adell Carroll, daughter of Jas. T. Carroll, died on Friday, May 26th, after years of suffering. The funeral took place on Sunday afternoon from the United church.

In our obituary notice of Mrs. Woolgar, last week, among the names of those who contributed flowers, the "Montana Boys" should read "Maintainer Boys."

Bert Hosmon is out with a good suggestion for improving the appearance of Alix. He is offering to clean up all the garbage, poles—ash heaps, tin cans, etc.—every month, at the reasonable fee of $5c. per month. There is no law compelling this service, but we do think that quite a number of our people will be pleased with the idea of getting rid of the unsightly piles that characterize the landscape for at least ten or eleven months of every year. The absence of these garbage piles make a contribution to beauty as well as to health. Citizens who are in favor should notify Bert and give him authority to clean up every month the old dump in the back yard.

Today a number of our citizens are complaining by their absence many of them may be found adding the cheering crowds of Edmonton. It is an occasion for great rejoicing among our own people. Even those who cannot go will join with the throngs in wishing their majesties godspeed across our broad acres and, after a brief visit to Uncle Sam, a safe return to their island home across the Antlantic.

If you want to spend more of your time on links open a line of chain stores.

Fred McDougal has started the erection of a store building on the site formerly occupied by Penn Inn, thus replacing Jos Brunker, on Wednesday, completed the job of re-shingling the roof of the Anglican church. The belfry has also been removed.

Crop report No. 3 from the Provincial Government has been received but too late for publication. The general tenor of the report is favorable so far as our district is concerned. The heaviest rain fell in the Edmonton district, being over five inches. We are in Div. No. 8 comprising Red Deer-Lacombe-Stettler. Red Deer is credited with 2.07 inches; Stettler, 3.20. So we will likely be nearer Stettlers record so far as rain is concerned. Mr. Parley will be publishing his records every week during July and August.

A very good meeting of the above was held on Saturday last, and recommendations were made for the coming Fair to be held on Friday, August 18th. It was suggested that the rural schools be invited to exhibit their work in school groups and a special prize will given for the class. The rural schools will also be invited to form a Softball League to play off for a cup. Bessi Hanks and Bank will be played off on the day of the Fair.

The following schools will be invited:—Tees, Ripley, Serpent, Stanton, Carroll, Hickling, Goderby Lake, Stone and Alix.

The Secretary of the Agricultural Society would be pleased to meet the different teachers of the above schools with a view to getting the softball games started as soon as possible.

The Society will arrange to have horse races on Fair day if enough entries are made to make interesting races. It is now up to owners of fast horses to get in touch with Secretary Whitfield as soon as possible so that these races may be well advertised.

As the Alix Fair is one of 20 Agricultural Fairs authorized by the Government for 1939, it is up to everybody that has the interest of the district at heart to get out and boost our 1939 Fair. Let us all start now and make this year's Show one to be remembered—a bigger and better Fair for Alix.

Watch your local paper and keep in touch with the different notices that will be published every week.

Peril On The Highways

A careful analysis of the causes of accidents to motorists in the United States in 1928 places the responsibility for the great bulk of the deaths and injuries from this cause squarely on the driver. Road conditions and human nature in this country are approximately the same undoubtedly were the facts available a similar indictment could be laid at the door of the man behind the wheel for most of the accidents who occurred in Canada last year.

Since there is nothing to warrant an assumption that motorists are going to abandon careless habits with the opening of the 1929 season of slaughter on the highways in this country it is reasonably safe bet that before the end of this year several hundred new tombstones will have been erected in Canada's cemeteries as monuments to human error on the road and thousands more will carry new scars because not internal injuries as painful reminders of human infidelity behind the wheel.

An idea has been inferred at the outset the statistics above that comparatively few of the 32 000 deaths and more than a million injuries sustained by Americans on the roads in 1928 are attributable to defects of mechanical equipment or to faulty atmospheric or road conditions, leaving the blame entirely on the motorist for the great majority of that monstrous toll

* * * *

Census Of Accidents

Last year rather more than 27 000 motor vehicles were involved in 20 000 fatal accidents on the roads in the United States. Investigation showed that over 24 000 of these cars and trucks were apparently in good mechanical condition which means that less than 3 000 were faulty on account of poor brakes defective steering mechanism glaring headlights or other shortcomings in the motor vehicle itself. If this analysis is correct 92 per cent of the accidents caused by charged up against poor or defective equipment.

Headline one months could be indicted for more than 50 per cent. of the accidents. Approximately 33,000 crashes occurred in clear weather with fog sleet snow or rain entirely absent

Further diligence of treacherous roads caused by precipitation in the form of snow, sw or rain caused be held blameworthy for more than one-fourth of last year's fatal accidents. In other words, nearly 22 500 of those disasters happened on roads that were perfectly dry at the time

* * * *

The Driver To Blame

After allowing for the fact that some of the crashes were undoubtedly caused by a combination of two or more of the causes outlined it will be seen, the, by a process of elimination that responsibility for more than half the deaths and injuries on the highways in 1928 were due to some quirk of human nature on the part of the driver carelessness, ignorance, indifference or even downright criminal recklessness

It is also safe to infer that out of the 1928 fatal traffic accidents approximately 21 000 are attributed to aberration or worse on the part of the driver approximately 8 500 or about 40 per cent were caused by excessive speed by drivers who paid no attention to legal speed limits and there is further importance in diagnosing the trend of the times, to observe that the inclination to travel too fast for safety has been on the upward curve for several years

Of the balance of 12 500 deaths chargeable directly against the motorist handling the wheel over 2 350 were caused by reckless driving against a mainly 2 750 resulted from the use of the wrong side of the road, about the same number were caused by drivers going ahead ordering the right of way and the balance are credited to such dangerous practices as cutting in too soon head of the car just passed passing other cars on hills and curves where visibility ahead was concealed, passing other cars on the wrong side and other violations of commonsense traffic rules.

* * * *

The Drunken Driver

Just how much of this enormous death and injury toll can be charged up against drunken drivers is purely a matter of speculation, but unfortunately there are reasons for believing that there were many more than were officially assigned to this cause and that the number runs into the thousands.

One further lesson is to be gained from a perusal of the 1928 American highway records in statistics and that is the fact that the death and injury toll was nearly twice as great on Saturdays and Sundays than other days of the week doubtless for the inevitable increase in weekend traffic, and possibly in and near the larger centres of population augmented undoubtedly by the care-free spirit of holiday crowds, coupled with the likelihood of a larger percentage involved to a greater or less degree.

* * * *

Reform From Within

If this greater slaughter of the guilty and innocent alike is going to continue and to increase the time is going to come when it will deter many from seeking the pleasures of the open road

What is going to be done about it " Strict regulations and their rigid enforcement undoubtedly have a beneficial effect but the ultimate remedy in most of the larger centres of population augmented undoubtedly by the care-free spirit of holiday crowds, coupled with the likelihood of a larger percentage involved to a greater or less degree.

Crops On Arid Lands

Dry Farming In Practised Where Annual Rainfall Is Light

Dry farming at the running of crops on arid or semi-arid lands without irrigation It consists of crop rotation tilling in such manner as to make use of all available moisture and raising drought-resisting plants.

Dry farming is usually practised where the annual rainfall is less than 20 inches a condition which makes special methods of cultivation necessary Irrigation is the artificial application of water to the land, is not part of dry farming

Dry farming has probably been practised ever since the dawn of civilization. In semi-arid regions of every continent in the world areas a bulletin from the United States Department of Agriculture Bulletin dry farming is simply applying most ern scientific knowledge and improvements to the ancient problem of coaxing nature into producing large quantities of crops under adverse conditions by the most timely small quantities of plants suitable for the locality which are put into the ground. Conservation of the early rainfall for producing crops is the object sought by the various dry farming methods and the adaptation of crops to the peculiar soil conditions are the means employed

Canada is the fourth largest producer of oil in the British Empire, the development of the oil fields of Nova Scotia has been particularly significant, for this fact is of vital interest to the Commonwealth.

Flour Shop In Washington Is Really Flour Mill

The story of the flour shop in the Post Office Department Building in Washington sounds like a fairy tale. It appears that a dynamic young engineer, a graduate of the Stevens Institute of Technology, had a brainstorm one day when he was working on the roof of the building. He noticed that the roof was made of flat arches of concrete and tile, supported by a fairly strong and solid panel. Examining another panel, he found that it was filled with flour.

The young engineer, whose name is Edward Bennett Williams, immediately saw the commercial possibilities of the discovery. He had a vision of a flour shop on the first floor of the building, where customers could buy flour by the barrel, the sack or the pound. He went to the Post Office Department and asked for the space. Then he went to the Washington Flour Mills and asked for the flour.

It would be years of experience I realize, the boy told officials, before there would be large-scale flour business, but I believe there is room for some good flour shop like the Post Office Department will have to give it a try. Place the shop there, I suggested, and I'll bring you the customers." Results have been all that the young engineer could have hoped for.

WHEN MORTGAGE DATE AS AID TO FARMERS

Ottawa, May 30—Establishment of a neutral mortgage bank under the terms of a bill now before parliament would be a "real contribution to the agricultural industry and, to the extent we can help, we are prepared to do our part," D'Arcy Leonard, counsel for the Dominion Mortgage and Investment Association, told the Commons banking committee on Monday.

Difficulty was seen by Mr. Leonard in application of the bill to mortgages on urban properties. General principles could be applied to farm mortgages because the whole industry was depressed, but conditions varied with each urban mortgage.

NOTE AND COMMENT

By the terms of the new treaty between Italy and Germany, it becomes apparent that Mussolini has agreed to play second fiddle to Hitler. But on the other hand, what is truely worth between two such men—just a scrap of paper.

The British Government is offering farmers in England £2 an acre for plowing up pasture and other old land. It is estimated that 2½ million acres may thus be brought under cultivation. England is systematically preparing for war with every facility available.

Commercial committees at work, both in Canada and the United States, report that one of the greatest headaches to economic recovery lies in the vast pools of private savings which clog the bank vaults. These savings and "frozen assets", in the aggregate run into enormous proportions in both countries. Mr. Dunning referred to this recently during his budget speech, and spoke of making an effort to release some of the capital through the banks. In a case of national emergency, such as exists at present, there ought to be some way of bringing this money out of hiding. Dominion Government bonds or certificates with low interest rates ought to solve some of it out.

MAY DEVALUE FOUND

It is anticipated that Great Britain will devalue the pound sterling before long. Unless Canada follows suit with its dollar, Canadian exports, as well as the producers of other primary products in the dominion, will be up against a similar situation to that which prevailed when Britain left gold in 1931.

In the worst years of the depression the Canadian dollar was maintained at a relatively high figure as compared with the British pound, the American and the Argentine peso. This made it very difficult for Canada to compete with Australia and Argentina in the sale of primary products, and particularly wheat. At one time Canada was losing the sale of the Oriental wheat and flour market, but Australia with her inflated money was able to take this market over almost completely.

Canada depends on international trade for a relatively high degree for her existence. Last year her exports were $1,- 924 million, an extraordinary amount in a country with a population of 11 million. The United States took 39 per cent. of Canada's exports last year. If the British pound goes down, however, and the Canadian dollar doesn't follow suit, England will be able to buy more cheaply from Canada to other countries where the currency will decline with British money.—U. P.A. Bulletin.

The Week in Edmonton

Twin thrones graced the Legislative Chamber late this week after the Speaker's chair, which is owned by former Speaker, George N Johnston, of Legislative, made a return visit to the Capitol. Mr. Johnston was presented with the chair in recognition of his distinguished service on retiring from political life. A replica was ordered and installed in the chamber. Now, on the occasion of Their Majesties visit, the two chairs will be used as thrones, Mr. Johnston having loaned his chair for the occasion.

Jasper Park is expected to attract 800 visitors from B. C. on the occasion of Their Majesties visit there. As this will be a rest period, the royal couple will not be expected to attend any public functions. Albertans generally are proud of the fact that their King and Queen chose both Banff and Jasper for resting spots during their western visit.

Plan soon is to receive a new federal government building worth about half a million dollars, according to Hon. Jas. A. McKinnon, M P.

Albertans will soon be using buckets, mops, brooms and soaps made entirely of west grown and manufactured in Alberta, according to the chairman of the Provincial Marketing Board. Mr. Clash stated that with completion of arrangements for which his board assisted, Alberta's new woolen mill will go into production July 1. Situated at Edmonton, the new company received assistance from the local government in the form of a brick building and $6,000, with additional building space for machinery and storage. The company is capitalized at $25,000, treats business men, the majority of whom are wool growers. Individual holdings of stock are limited to $1,000.

A week ago, the King and Queen were in the East, and this week-end they are in the West. In the meantime they have visited many towns and cities on the main line of the C.P.R. through to Victoria, and spent Thursday at Jasper and today they are in Edmonton. Everywhere they have become enthusiasts by citizens from "Dan to Beersheba". Hereafter this Their Majesties' sympathy of the Canadian people, their one is hopeless. At Vancouver, thousands of Americans crossed the border to give a hearty greeting to the King and Queen of Canada.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H.G.L. Strange, Director "The Crop Testing Plan

His Majesty George VI and Queen Elizabeth, Canada's King and Queen, are now visiting the western part of the Dominion.

The King is the official constitutional head of Canada, Great Britain and of the British Commonwealth of Nations, and in his own royal person he is the symbol of the unity, freedom and service which all enjoy who live under the protection of our Empire flag.

Thirty different races of people have come to our prairies, from the far ends of the earth to find homes; some have found prosperity, and all have found and enjoy Protection, Freedom and Justice.

But this Protection, Freedom and Justice cost our forefathers great sacrifices in blood and treasure, and these freedoms and advantages, history tells us, are only maintained by extreme vigilance, and by a continued willingness of every one of us to make similar sacrifices whenever necessary.

It is, therefore, well to remind ourselves that all who enjoy Freedom and Justice in Canada under the King's protection, must be willing at any moment, when called upon by their King, to make, each one, his own particular sacrifice in order to maintain and keep alive this most precious heritage.

One of the correlative citations from Science and Health is this key to the Scripture is: "There is but one primal cause. Therefore there can be no effect from any other cause, and there can be no reality in ought which does not proceed from this great and only cause", (p. 337).

Worth Investigating

If statements made by George A. Hurst of Regina be they appear in a pamphlet entitled Salvaging the Modern Ship Scotia which has recently been widely distributed by the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation are well founded, it would appear that at a high time Western Canadians gave some attention to allegations that the route as being theorized and gave some consideration to a resolution recently passed by the Alberta Legislature.

The resolution to attach reference is made reads

That this Association go on record as being in favor of the principle of Western Canada management of the commercial facilities of the Port of Churchill and that they should be brought under the control and management of a Board consisting of organizations, or corporations with the present management of Hudson Bay and Manitoba

In perusing the charges that the route is being undermined and rendered ineffective partly because of lack of knowledge or indifference on the part of some who should have the western interests interests at heart and partly because the grain trade can not conflict with private difficulties in keeping the use of their ships commercial enterprises Mr. Hurst should have referred to the fact that during most of the navigation period that the entire time the port has been in operation up to January 1928 he resided and worked at Churchill as a consultant for the Dominion government.

It is perhaps significant that while the letter to the Bay Association disclaims any responsibility for the correctness of the statements and charges made by Mr. Hurst in his pamphlet the Association evidently considers that it sufficient importance to transmit with publicity for them by making arrangements for distribution of the pamphlet and by putting at least one of the complimentary copies received in the hands of writers so far as we are aware no one has come forward to dispute the truth of the statements made

Inquiry Demanded

The fact that Mr. Hurst was in a particularly favorable position to secure the information on which he bases his premises coupled with the sponsor ship of the Hudson Bay Association are sufficient to warrant the statements which he has carefully observed lines of policies in its activities subsidies the desirability of an inquiry being made to prove the method of operating the route with a view to making changes in the form of management of the port and its facilities if such an investigation shows that the efficiency of the route is being hampered by unfair interests and the interests of the producers are not being protected

Where it is considered that over fifty million dollars has been invested in the Hudson Bay railway and the Port of Churchill and its facilities and that Mr. Hurst is correct in the great bulk of the trade must borne by the west no stone should be left unturned to see that the western interest in the large expenditure is protected and that it be made to yield the return which was expected of it during the half century fight to establish a short cut route to export and import trade between the prairies and the European countries

If the grain being shipped in tonnage and the route to the of insertion, as Mr. Hurst claims when he speaks of it as the starved and unwanted child with speech ability to support it then no time should be lost in taking whatever steps may be necessary to realize the route and if possible to make it the important and effective artery it was intended to be

Interesting Suggestions

Any person who reads the pamphlet with care cannot fail to be impressed with the background of knowledge and sincerity of purpose displayed by Mr Hurst and the apparent public spirit he has shown who makes out for a change in the administration of the port and its facilities and other possible developments in the interests of the producers of the prairie provinces and the greater dividends to prairie producers and Western business

Has the last interesting of Mr Hurst's statements are contained in the chapter devoted to freight rates in which he contends that the average rate on the Great Lakes from 1922 to 1927 was 4½ cents compared with the rate of 9½ cents better Churchill rate which is a most interesting comparison

If the figures are correct there seems to be some foundation for the assumption that even though only a small fraction of the crop was handled through the Bay route during that period the very existence of the route as a factor was an important bearing on the rate which the farmer for the entire crop in that six year period provided the average was returned to the producer

On this basis what might happen to rates on the Great Lakes were the Bay route to be rendered a negative factor and that Port of Churchill closed up as a white elephant is a subject for interesting speculative thought

Even if some of Mr. Hurst's claims could not be established the suggestion that the administration of the port be turned over to a body of Western Canadians who would be best fitted to look after the interests of the producers is certainly deserving of serious consideration for the Hudson Bay route seems to be a national one After all the west is the parent of the project and could surely be depended upon to operate the long-suffer much better than a [illegible] agency

This is Life Insurance

IN THOUSANDS OF Canadian homes, life insurance money pays the bills—helps to support widows and children—and provides for old age.

Life insurance dollars buy the food for these square meals a day. They buy clothing and other necessities of life. They pay the rent and fuel bills to ensure warm, comfortable homes. They give children an education and a mother's care.

Each year, life insurance policy-owners and their beneficiaries in Canada receive 150 million dollars—five hundred thousand dollars every working day—twenty thousand dollars every hour.

And it is significant that more than 75% of all life insurance payments are made to living policyholders.

Both the railway companies ran specials, but by far the greater number went by to the city in cars and trucks. ALIX, ALBERTA, FRIDAY, JUNE 9, 1939

The Week in Edmonton

University week opened synonymously with the Royal visit and a number of earnest young Albertans came to Edmonton to enjoy both attractions. Eight days of recreation and education are offered, including lectures in agriculture, household crafts and handicrafts. Scholarships and prizes worth $250 are available to students between the ages of 18 and 25.

Of interest to rural dwellers, too, is the announcement that the School of Community will once again be in session at Olds from July 3 to 15. The courses include international affairs and current history, co-operation, rural sociology, dramatics and homemaking. Any person between 17 and 30 is invited to attend.

Interesting facts released by the Department of Agriculture this week disclose that Alberta's rural population of half a million persons live on farms numbering 101,000, and that in 1938 their production of real wealth was valued at $172,000,000.

Improvement in live stock finishing was noticeable in the percentage of "select" hogs marketed. 32.58 per cent as against only 6.6% per cent six years previously.

All records were broken by Alberta sugar beet growers during 1938. They produced 2[illegible],000 tons of beets, which in turn produced $1,330,000, a sweet little return in any sugar man's language.

In other branches of agriculture Alberta farmers made gains. The [illegible] first in all wool marketings, second in sheep, swine and cattle, third in calves. Dairymen, poultrymen, beekeepers and fur farmers all registered fine gains for the year.

Extension of the district nursing service, which for years has done remarkable work in pioneer areas, has won approval. The legislature voted funds sufficient to cover the operations of 30 nurses as compared with the 13 who have carried on this great work.

Encouraging news of the week is that during the past six months 31 new industries have been established, 14 industries report expansion.

Regarding the unemployment situation, it is revealed that for the period January 15 to April 1, Alberta was the only province which showed a decrease.

Unemployment Insurance

The following is a digest of opinion of Unemployment Insurance as expressed by P. M. Richards, financial editor of Toronto Saturday Night:

If we are going to embark on costly unemployment insurance we ought to be under no delusions as to what it is going to do to us.

The idea that unemployment insurance will solve the problem of unemployment, and its relief, is all wrong. It will do nothing of the kind. It will merely set up a saving scheme under which employees who are normally in steady employment will put aside a small amount each week which will be matched by the employer and contributed to by the State, to tide them over any short periods of unemployment. Unemployment insurance will not even touch the problem of providing for those who are now unemployed or on relief.

Unemployment insurance will not give any protection to an insured person after the end of the comparatively short period during which he is entitled to draw his insurance benefit.

Although unemployment insurance would cover only a limited number of occupations, and vast numbers of the nation's workers would be excluded by reason of the comparative instability of their employment, the cost of the scheme would not only be large but the Government's share of that cost would be contributed to, in taxation, by all these workers excluded from participating in the benefits.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"God the Preserver of Man," is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science Churches on Sunday. The Golden Text is Psalm 36:6 One of the Scriptural citations is "If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed" (John 8:36). One of the correlative passages from Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," is "The enslavement of man is not legitimate. It will cease when man enters into his heritage of freedom, his God-given dominion over the material senses. Mortals will some day assert their freedom in the name of Almighty God."

Send us in that news item.

A curious note comes from Berlin following the inspection of Rhineland defences by Hitler. Announcing that they are "absolutely impregnable," the statement adds: "Artillery of 75 and 150 millimetres has been placed in readiness for flank attacks should enemy troops succeed in penetrating the fortified zone." Maybe the Germans have a keen sense of humor after all.—Edmonton Journal.

Discipline And The Child

The problem of the wayward boy or the difficult girl is an age-old one. There are few families who escape it entirely in the course of a lifetime and in every community there are families in which it is an acute issue of the time until the children reach the age when they must stand for themselves without parental control or assistance.

Up to the age of adolescence, in most cases, the problem does not appear to be a serious one. While the children are quite young they are kept from serious harm apparently without great difficulty because their actions and even their words and moods are subject to close supervision in the immediate home.

It at these years when boys and girls first experience the strange[r] within them of approaching manhood and womanhood. Difficulty or danger is apprehended. About that time the youth of both sexes are prone to retire within themselves, to nurse their own secrets, to draw away from parental control and, in short to set up a popular term, be two their own lives. They have emerged from the chrysalis of childhood and are eager to own ut- to manhood and womanhood.

All that is perfectly natural. The time comes when fledgling birds must leave their nests and the young cubs must leave the home lair to face forth "on their own." That is the most dangerous period in the life of bird or beast. Young and inexperienced and without the strength and wariness of their forbears they face a world full of terrors which they are not equipped to combat, except for such warnings as instinct may convey and experience for such lessons as they may have learned from their parents.

It is even so with the young of humankind. They, too, are launched unprepared into a world full of pitfalls, unless they have been equipped to face the dangers of life by parents and guardians who have been keen enough to train them with an eye to the future and have pursued this difficult task with understanding and sympathy.

A Different Point

And this task is not so easy one but it is a duty which must be faced by every parent worthy of the name if the resultant product in his or her case to the family, the community and the nation, and unless this is the outcome parenthood can be written off as a rank failure.

It is a difficult task because every child represents a separate problem requiring special treatment and that entails careful study and much thought. It is because even the educational system tends to press the youth of the country into a common mould they are not born alike and that is too often overlooked both by parents and teachers.

It is not enough that book-learning training is a continuous process from the time the child is weaned until he or she is ready to leave the shelter of the home and assume their own responsibilities. Character training is just as to need always in the direction of the main objective, with such variations as may be necessary to conform to the age, the temperament and the individuality of each child.

As already indicated, the process of successful training commences at the earliest of life. It is too late to begin at the age of adolescence. The confidence and understanding between parent and child which is so essential to successful training in the "teen years here either been engendered or lost by the time that difficult period of life is reached, and if it has been lost by that time it is difficult if not impossible to reconquer it.

All of this does not mean that the child must be mentally controlled. nor does it mean that he or she must be ruled by rig stick methods. A sure method to turn out a model is to allow the child to do what he or she wishes in its own time and at all times. An equally sure way is to repress the child by constant command.

It does not mean that punishment for offences is to be avoided. Children have a keen sense of justice and punishment does not leave a smarting sense of resentment if, it is deserved, if it is reasonable and if it is made to fit the offence and if proper account is taken of motive and temperament.

* * * *

Corporal Punishment?

Discussions on child training invariably lead to a review of the question of corporal punishment of children— to speak or not to speak. On this phase of the training problem it ought not be easier to quote here what J. D. Griffin had to say on the subject in a recent issue of "Health" in connection with the training of children:

"What kind of people do we really want our children to become? The various measures we employ in child training are but means to this end. And as I believe it is perfectly possible to raise children so that they develop wholesome vigorous personalities and become decent, efficient citizens without using corporal punishment at all. It is possible, but it is not without some danger . The occasional spanking may actually be a healthy procedure. It clears the air and relieves pent-up emotional tensions. It frequently leaves the parents with the conviction that they have done their duty righteously. In any event such a procedure is usually far less damaging to the wholesome development of the child's personality than the oppression of continual nagging of parents."

The thoughts of youth are long, long thoughts, but they must be understood if relationships between parent and child are to be satisfactory and if the child is to be brought up in the way he should go.

United States May Establish Twelve-Mile Zone In Coastal Waters

The state department, it was learned is investigating the national defence value of establishing a 12-mile zone of territorial waters around the United States.

This statement of the present three mile limit of coastal control was proposed by the department by Chairman Mrs Pittman Down, Nevada of the senate committee on foreign relations. Mrs Pittman said officials had advised him the proposition was under consideration but that it was complicated by international questions. The department would prefer to take the step with other nations if it can achieve agreement, he said.

Although three miles of war shore during a foreign war is considered adequate for the protection of the United States, Mrs Pittman said the Spanish civil war and other recent developments in international affairs indicate that a wider zone might be of value in protecting neutrality.

The United States set up a 12-mile zone of treaty with Great Britain during prohibition in order to make rum-running more difficult. The agreement made compliance by American vessels took place on May 22, 1924.

Means Huge Saving

Canal Britain Finds Fuel Time Is Invaluable To 4 months

Although time periods of a kind have been known for about 2,000 years, the first long-distance canal for the carriage of cargoes is believed to have been the Bridgewater canal, which was built in 1761 to connect the coal mines of Worsley with Manchester, England. The canal was 7½ miles long.

Canals have been built since then in many countries of the world, and the total length of navigable canals in Europe is now about 30,000 miles. Of this total, Great Britain has about 4,000 miles, France 3,000 miles, Germany 2,000 miles, Belgium 1,000 miles, and Russia 4,000 miles.

Canals are usually built for one purpose only, that of transportation, but in some countries they are also used for irrigation. In Egypt, for example, canals are built to carry water from the Nile river to the fields.

Canals are usually built on level stretches of land, and when they have to go over hills, locks are built. A lock is a section of the canal with gates at each end. Boats are floated into the lock, the gates are closed behind them, and the water is then raised or lowered to the level of the next section of the canal. The gates are then opened and the boats proceed.

The expenditure approved by the Dominion includes $300,000 to be shared equally by Alberta and the Dominion to be spent on improving and surfacing highways in the central and southern districts of the province.

NOTE AND COMMENT

The Unity party leaders experienced a hectic time at a meeting in Morinville, last Saturday evening, when an attempt was made to induce the Liberal candidate, who had already been nominated to lead the party, to withdraw in favor of one to be selected at a Unity convention. After the speakers had had their say and question time arrived, then the audience became vocal and the Unity leaders listened to some plain spanking. The meeting broke up in disorder and nothing was accomplished beyond establishing the fact that Morinville was going to run her own campaign without any outside help.

Leaders of the Unity party met at The Macdonald Hotel on Sunday and drafted a Unity Party Policy (or platform). This was largely the result of pressure made by D. M. Duggan, Conservative leader, who told his colleagues that it would be suicidal for them to go before people with nothing but a slogan. They must not appeal to the electorate wearing only "shorts", but must be rigged out in full evening dress, with top hat and all accessories. So the party will become orthodox and have a platform. Our guess is that the new platform will have to be short and sweet or it will meet with as much opposition as the original set up.

We still believe, that there is one way, and only one way, to make sure of defeating Social Credit and that is to avoid splitting the Opposition. Start the election with three or more candidates in each and Social Credit will simply sweep the field. If you are more loyal to your party than you are to this Province of ours, then go ahead with the Party idea and get the surprise of your life and endure another four or five years of government by amateur politicians with dictatorial leanings.

A proposal was advanced, on Saturday, to annex one of the Thousand Islands in the St. Lawrence River and present it to Queen Elizabeth.

In a despatch to London, an American is quoted as saying, referring to the British Queen: "Give her a crowd and she moves 'em down."

Twenty-seven U.S. Senators have approved of Queen Elizabeth as an ideal candidate for the presidency in 1940 election in the States. We are inclined to believe the Queen would rather wear a tiara than a crown. Thanks for the compliment.

When a King and a President eplosh around in the same swimming pole, it looks as though this part of the world is still safe for democracy.

We must have made the Old Country jealous. After reading about the great receptions given Their Majesties on this side of the Atlantic, the folks at home are having a pipe dream that they can improve on the Western variety, and are dolling up to welcome the King and Queen on the return trip. They can't do more than duplicate the Western effort so why not let the tired travelers lend down and skip the stork around a couple of times. One can get too much even of a good thing.

MUST JOIN FORCES

There is no hope of getting rid of the present Alberta Government unless the Liberal and Unity movement join forces, the former attorney general, J. W. Hugill, K.C., declared at an Independent Progressive meeting in High River on June 9th.

Mr. Hugill stated there was no need for partyism in provincial politics. "All we need is honest, progressive men, no matter what political school they belong to.

Mr. Hugill scored the failure of the public accounts committee to function at any session since the Aberhart government was elected.

"Every effort to investigate expenditures has been blocked," Mr. Hugill said. "Mr. Aberhart has manufactured Sunday stories of financiers, but he is probably no big a capitalist as any in the province."

STAMPS OF CANADA PRESENTED TO KING

Stratford—What is believed to be Canada's only complete collection of Canadian stamps issued since Confederation has been presented to the King on behalf the people of the Dominion. The king is an enthusiastic philatelist. He has retained and enlarged his father's famous collection, and the newest addition to the collection will be supplemented later by royal tour postmarks. The tour train on which they are travelling has a postal car.

Postmaster General Norman McLarty said the value of the Canadian collection could not be estimated. It was gathered under the direction of A. K. Denville, in charge of the Government Philatelic Department at Ottawa.

Vanishing Frontiers

NOT so many years ago Western Canada was being settled as opened up by railroads building into the undeveloped areas. Then came the motor car and the motor truck. The uncertainty of travel by prairie trail, corduroy road, by river, lake and steamer gave way to the regular schedules of the motor transport. Then the automobile has developed from the crude, uncertain "horseless carriage" to the modern streamline beauty of 1939, with all the power, comfort and speed. The flying machine marked a milestone in civilization. Distance has most drowned about by man of Mesopotamia and Babylon. Today, aeroplanes fleet soon Canada. Chief ships cover the North.

With the development of motor freight, the manufacturer and retailer of service, the "Mail Order War" has become the last war, the commercial war to buy. Every transaction is given keener competition, greater service and is backed by the EATON guarantee—"Goods Satisfactory or Money Refunded." When the solicitation is over, the prices low and the service quick, then pay by mail to a phone.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"In the Unknown, including Man, Resolved by Atomic Force" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon at all Christian Science Churches on Sunday. The Golden Text is I Corinthians 8:6. One of the Scriptural citations is "And God said Let there be light: and there was light" (Genesis 1:3). One of the correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, is "Eternal Truth is changing the universe. As mortals drop off their mental swaddling clothes thought expands and exclaims, "Let there be light,' is the perpetual demand of Truth and Love. Omnipotent chaos into order and discord into the music of the spheres" (p. 258).

AN ELUCIDATION?

The Government has appropriated $570,000 for a meat processor for Alberta this year. Fifteen hundred men and 1,000 horses will be employed. Work started on Monday. Plans drafted for the project calls for municipal residents to do $8.00 worth of work. Of this amount $5 will apply to hot servers and $3 will be paid in cash.

TURKEY IMPROVEMENT

In keeping with the general policy of the Department of Agriculture to improve the quality of agricultural products the Poultry Branch, in co-operation with the Alberta Turkey Breeders' Association, is carrying on a Record of Merit project.

Under this scheme pure-bred turkeys must be banded according to their grade. Grade is determined by body conformation and suitability for the ideal market bird. There are four grades—Special, A, B & C. Birds banded as "specials" are practically perfect in all respects, while those graded "C" are good commercial birds.

During this spring the Poultry Branch inspected 888 turkeys, and graded 19 Specials, 217 A's, 491 B's, and 159 C's. This indicates that the percentage of "Specials" is low because of the high standards required for the Special grade.

This policy has been in operation about ten years, and the steady improvement in the variety of Alberta is proof that the banding policy is justified.

The Alberta Safety League, of which Henry J. Keebe is manager, has been recently formed and will carry on an educational campaign, through provincial newspapers, with the hope of reducing street, highway and other deplorable accidents as being unnecessary and wasteful.

Alix district has been generously supplied with moisture during the past week—probably about 4 or 5 inches. Crops are coming on fine. Travellers report roads in good condition.

Talking about roads. Secretary Greene informs us that the Lousana council has not yet decided to accept the Government's program for a work scheme to collect tax arrears on a 2 to 1 basis. Reigh thinks the proposal would make a stronger appeal if it was on a cash basis.

Mr. Fred Stone, of Montreal, visited for a few days last week at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chas Stone.

Mr. T. J. Baldon spent the week-end in Edmonton recently.

Miss Annie McDermand is in the Lacombe community hospital where she has been operated on for appendicitis.

Miss Irene Thage and Mr. D. McDermand were the Alix delegates to the annual Junior U. F. A. Conference held at the University of Alberta lately.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Griffen are back in Alix after a visit to old Toronto.

Mr. Stewart Gibson Rogers, a former resident of Alix high school, has recently received the degree of Bachelor of Arts in Librarianship from the University of Washington. He is a brother of Douglas and Hadley Rogers of Alix. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Rogers of Vancouver.

As Mr. and Mrs. Beattie are taking a trip to Portland, Ore., to visit Mrs. Beattie's parents, the Pool Elevator will be closed from the 1st of July to July 16. Anyone wanting to deliver their wheat in the old Wheat Board may do so either before the 1st of July, or from July 17 on it.

Annual Meeting of C.A.D. Pool

The Annual Meeting of the Creamery was held in Alix on Tuesday, June 20th. The attendance was fair, but had reasonbeen a number of people away. All officers were re-elected and every department shows improvement. Great interest was taken in the proceedings and a feeling of optimism prevailed among the patrons of the Creamery. The general view is that the worst is over and from now on there will steady progress towards recovery.

Indebtedness has been reduced from $182,000 to $76,000 for the year ending Dec. 31, 1933.

Loss on Lousana plant, $2,000.

Loss on Bowden plant, $[illegible].

Loss on Red Deer plant over $[illegible].

Profit on Alix plant over $[illegible].

Butter [illegible].

Thirty-nine out of 45 delegates were at the meeting.

J. M. Smith presided during the day sessions and Mr. Pye, of Penhold, during the evening.

The manager's report was satisfactory to all.

Reasons given for low prices for cream: Cheapness of vegetable oils and butter substitutes; poor demand of economy section; surplus of stock in 1927.

Considerable discussion developed during the evening session in regard to the 1933 dividend, amounting to some $[illegible],000. Suggestions were made that it be paid to those entitled to same by way of participation certificates having priority over any other such certificates. A counter suggestion made was that each delegate call a meeting in his sub-district and get the views of the people as to what should be done with the dividend.

Another suggestion was "that as we are not now able to pay the dividend the question be set aside, to be taken up at such time as we are able to pay it." This motion found favor with the meeting and was acted on.

Questions of business policy of the past and for the future were discussed by the manager, also the reasons for losses shown at Acme and Bowden, and the advantages of the Alix plant in this respect. The sale of milk powder was mentioned as a contributing feature to the success of the local plant.

The installation of a half size tin filler at a cost of $4,000 at the Red Deer plant was mentioned. They are now turning out five brands of milk at this plant.

One surprising feature of the 1933 business was the export demand for sweet granulated butter.

Shortage of water at the local plant made necessary the drilling of a deeper well.

At the beginning of 1932 there were 135,000 cans of milk on the floor of the Creamery; at the of the year 13 000 and at present only 4,000. The manager-expressed the opinion that the stock on hand should be about 15,000 cans.

At present time the Condensary is running at 25 per cent capacity.

The product of Condensary is being sold from Vancouver to Ontario.

The necessity for an advertising campaign was also stressed.

University Objectives

Quality rather than quantity should be the objective of the universities of the country

At all times it is of greater importance to the nation that a few brilliant students capable of exercising leadership be graduated from the institutions of higher learning than a large number with mediocre attainments and of average capacity.

It is of still greater importance in times of national and international stress like the present when unemployment threatens the foundations of democracy from within and when freedom and liberty are endangered by external forces.

Under such conditions the quality of leadership cannot be too high and it is not too much to expect that the universities and the product of the university system as a whole should be of such a character that the country can confidently expect in their efforts to solve these pressing problems

It is an oft heard complaint that governments in the democratic countries are not effectively taking the major problems but are content to reflect the ever changing confusion of mass opinion with an eye on the target of political expedience instead of mapping out a definite program. With out of political expedience instead of mapping out a definite program. With out of political expedience, based on historically tested principles and adhering to it

If such an indictment is well founded the importance of the work ahead of the universities in turning out students who will be capable of giving sound leadership and of attaching problems with the proper perspective, plus the character and grit necessary to prevent doom and despair, plus the character and grit necessary to prevent doom and despair, plus the character and grit necessary to prevent doom and despair

SANCTIONS

Should the United States apply sanctions in the Sino-Japanese war? This is a hot subject for debate in both houses of the United States Government.

From an article written by Maxwell Stewart, associate editor of The Nation, and appearing in the Christian Science Monitor, we quote some very interesting facts:

The total of American war material sold to Japan in 1937-38 was valued at more than $350,000,000, or close to 70 per cent of their entire sales to Japan.

Cotton sales to Japan was the heaviest single item.

In 1937 the United States contributed 62 per cent of Japan's import of copper.

In the same year 51 per cent of its oil, 39 p.c. of its scrap iron, 43 p.c. of its pig iron and 20 p.c. of its zinc. Well over a third of its steel has been made from American raw materials.

American sales to Japan in 1938 were 60 per cent above those of the entire British Empire.

Japanese imports of high-test gasoline for airplanes and certain types of machinery can only be supplied by the United States.

Before the war, China was their best customer in the Orient but interest of business in China was subject to many petition makers for Japan. Suffer-humanity doesn't mean a thing in war-time trade. The war in China could be stopped in two months if the States would prevent the selling of war material to Japan. Japan cannot purchase these goods in either Italy or Germany because they are not produced there.

The recent blockade of open ports in China by Japan has made it probable that American will shut down on Japan's supplies from that country.

Manager Percy W. Abbot of the Edmonton Exhibition can now turn his entire attention to completing arrangements for the Edmonton Exhibition, after a strenuous task as chairman of the Edmonton Royal Visit Committee. It is his intention to repeat the Royal motif, in Exhibition grounds decorations, and his hope that as many folk will flock to Edmonton for the week of July 17th to 22nd, as came to the Royal Visit.

Thousands of the peasants whose existent comment from Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth, will be used in decorating the city and Exhibition grounds for the sixty-first annual event of the Fair, to be held July 17 to 22 and many of the large cut-outs which were so effective, will be used in connection with the Exhibition.

Improvements which have been so noticeable around the Exhibition grounds are being continued and extended; concrete and iron electric light standards are being set in place to light the sidewalks around the west and south sections of the exhibition grounds As last year, the railway companies and bus lines are offering single fare return for Edmonton Exhibition. July 17 to 22.

The Week in Edmonton

Edmonton – Alberta's oil mission to London was successful in presenting authentic information regarding the oil industry to Admiralty and Royal Air Force officials, according to Hon. N. E. Tanner, who headed the mission. With the Alberta Minister were Dr. G. S. Hume, of the Dominion Geological Survey, W. F. Knode, chairman of the Alberta Gas and Oil Conservation Board, and W. S. Campbell, former secretary-treasurer of the Alberta Petroleum Producers' Association.

—oOo—

British officials were agreed that Alberta's present and future production would justify the building of a pipe line. There would be sufficient crude oil under production in the province by the time the line was built even if construction was to start immediately.

Feeling among the officials interviewed was that the line should run to the head of the lakes, rather than to the Pacific coast. This would provide an outlet where the greater part of Canada might be served while making no inroads on the Empire service. Great interest was shown in the oil development carried out in Alberta.

Another Alberta product came into its own during the week when it was announced that Alberta salt from the McMurray deposits to stabilize the Edmonton-Mt. Albert road. Owing to favorable moisture conditions it is anticipated that the salt surfacing will prove successful. In the dry areas where it has been tried results were not so good. At Edmonton airport, however, the returns are satisfactory with McMurray salt, and great success has been recorded.

Alberta's $150,000 highway program got under way on Monday of last week, when 1500 men and 400 teams began operations under the provincial-municipal tax arrears agreement. Under terms of the agreement, for every $2.00 earned the worker receives $1 cash and $1 credit on tax arrears. Up to Monday last 1500 men were on highway construction, with 375 horses and 141 trucks.

—oOo—

Lowering of the age groups for male workers so as to bring rookies of 19 under provisions of the adult minimum wage regulations was ordered by the Alberta Board of Industrial Relations during the week. Under terms of the order, which reminds that made on Sept. 24, 1937, the minimum of $3 1-3 cts. an hour must be paid to male workers of 19 and over.

—oOo—

For workers engaged for less than four hours, a rate of 60c. must be paid for a minimum of four hours. Overtime rates over 44 times normal rates.

—oOo—

Board Rates—$6 for a full week of 31 meals; single meals, 25c.

Lodging—$6 for seven days; 25c. a day for less than a week's lodging.

A general dropping of all age groups is ordered by the Board.

Following protests by Government officials and local bodies, the Federal Government has agreed to withdraw for one year their decision to impose a fishing fee of $5 for non-residents and $1 for residents in Alberta national parks. To introduce the fee so late in the season precludes the possibility of advertising the public outside of the Dominion. Tourist literature this year has stressed the fact that only a $2 entrance fee was required of tourists entering the parks. Alberta fishing licenses cost residents or non-residents $2.25.

Colonization Plans

A perusal of a report recently received from Great Britain leaves one with the impression that drought ridden prairie farmers who have been seeking a safe anchorage elsewhere have been overlooking a good bet when they passed up Central British Columbia, for we learn from this document that "Our personal impression was that there was no reason why any sound farmer on suitable soil and with the will to work should not save anything from $600 to $2,000 a year after feeding his family and buying such household necessities as he cannot produce."

The report is not lacking about the happy condition of Central British Columbia farmers at the halt-way days of year, but makes it clear that reference is made to possibilities under present day conditions for it adds "They were in no way farmers and we were further impressed with the fact that a general idea had not yet seen the worst of the depression in anything like the area of other farming districts in the Province of the South."

The report Writer of the British Mission of Brigadier General Sir Henry Lukin Smith and R. S. Dalgleish to Western Canada last summer to investigate the possibilities of community settlement for British immigrants in British Columbia who was presented to the Prime Minister and the under secretary of State for Canada.

Apart from the fact that the Mission appears to have ascertained a personal liking for Western Canada where it is apparently still possible to farm on land "as new as a prairie" under present conditions, the report of the mission also interests in the prairie provinces since it was originally the attention to re-establishment of British settlers on the derelict farms of the South to make in the wheat growing provinces under what was known as the General Hardy plan, to which considerable publicity was given last year.

The report leaves the impression that whatever plans may have been formulated for British settlement on colonization basis in the prairie provinces have been abandoned for the time being and attention is being concentrated on colonization in British Columbia where to some extent at least conditions are dissimilar and where the government has promised to make a grant of a million dollars for the use of the prospective settlers. Probably due also to the abandonment of an immediate colonization project in the prairie provinces the report is not based on the reference already quoted to the hardship experienced by what pioneers on the prairies in recent years.

Population Needed

Whether the proposals to settle British colonists on community basis in the prairie provinces will be revived once the machinery of government in relation to transfer relations to Central British Columbia is apparently not known here at the moment, but it is quite probable that something more will be heard of it in the near future.

There can be no quarrel with the general statement in the report that Western Canada needs greater population to help pay the debts of the overload which has been created in providing such a large territory with facilities nor with the statement that every settler on the land provides a measure of livelihood for at least one other in the cities town and villages, but conditions must be such that the settler on the land is able to operate at a margin of profit.

This condition cannot be said to have been achieved so long as the simple product on the prairies has to be considered or a large number of the producers assisted via the direct relief route, and until conditions are such that the area if the country is not sufficient to remove a margin of profit. Until this situation is cleared up Western farmers as a class cannot be expected to be in a position to expand to immigration on subsistence scale, even under a ten-year guarantee and it is quite conceivable that the end would have some objectionable features.

Second Thoughts

Nor can there be any quarrel with the oft-heard statement that whatever immigration to this country is permitted whether on colonization scale or otherwise, it is highly desirable that it is substantial and that it should be of a type that will be a strong foundation stock of citizens who are steeped in the traditions on which Freedom and liberty are based to exert a leavening influence on those who have not been so fortunate as to be born and raised in surrounding their origin.

Certainly the objective should not be lost sight of and should receive every necessary attention when conditions permit and opportunities afford.

In the meantime the experiment in Central British Columbia, if it is brought to the test, and it looks like going ahead, will be watched with considerable interest in the prairie provinces and doubtless some valuable lessons can be learned from it. Let us hope it will be as great a success as its promoters anticipate

BOXING-WRESTLING

There was a very fair turnout to see the opening events put on at the Alix Legion Hall, Saturday evening, June 24th.

The main event was won by Reg. Siddons, of Alix, by a technical knock-out in the third round over T. Kenny of Innisfail.

The 160-lb. class was won by Frank Siddons over Varity of Innisfail by a decision.

The 110-lb. class was won on a decision by Jack Collins, Alix, over Powers, of Innisfail.

Exhibition Contest—The bout between Walter Beach, Innisfail, and Dee Jamieson, Lacombe, was a draw.

The two young Smith boys went two rounds and put up a very good show, as also did Ernest Hurst and Marven Pears.

Wrestling—Jack Welper won two straight falls over O. Wenstein. Both are local boys. The first was made in 7 minutes and the second fall in 5 minutes of the third round. Weight, Welper, 160; Wenstein, 165.

Referee Primel was on hand but to the disappointment of Mr. Wenstein he was unable to be present.

John Wilkinson did good work in handling the boys. The event was very well patronized and those present enjoyed the entertainment.

The sports committee hope to put on another bout in the near future. They will make an effort to get talent from Edmonton along with our home town sports. We hope they will be successful.

Edmonton Exhibition

"Where City and Country Meet" perhaps more fittingly describes the Edmonton Exhibition than any other Fair on the North American Continent. Started as a local Fair 51 years ago the Exhibition has grown year by year to its present status as one of Canadas great annual exhibitions. Each year the management strives to excel the years, adding new events, petitive classes, stepping up the prize money, larger purses, new entertainment features, and all to make the Edmonton Exhibition still more interesting and still more inviting to out of town visitors and city folkes alike. The Edmonton Exhibition is in every truth "Where City and Country Meet" for mutual enjoyment, and mutual admiration for each other's achievements. Northern Alberta's big annual holiday and carnival of fun.

Following closely after Their Magestics historic visit, the Exhibition this year carries out the Royal Visit motif, with a more beautiful more extensive decorating scheme than ever attempted on any exhibition grounds in Western Canada. There'll be miles of pennants, flags, bunting, crowns and coat-of-arms—the gayest scene and the most thrilling ever presented to Fair visitors. In addition the grounds will be splendidly illuminated with a New White Way, recently installed.

NOTE AND COMMENT

There is no doubt about it, Chamberlain's handling of the foreign office is causing great loss of prestige to the British in the Orient. The insults heaped on the British in China are being used as propaganda all over Europe, the inference is that now you can strip him to the skin and live to brag about it. A few more exhibitions of this sort will just about finish the English in the eyes of the world including the British Dominions.

The recent heavy rains both in Saskatchewan and Alberta are responsible for a lot of consultation among grasshoppers. It appears that they cannot and not thrive in water-soaked fields.

The Rev. J. A. Wingblade, M.L.A. for Wetaskiwin, headed a delegation from Mont-gomery municipality to interview Hon. W. A. Fallow urging that the 80 mile highway from Wetaskiwin to Buffalo be gravelled. The minister promised sympathetic consideration.

Improved Outlook

Things are beginning to look up for better results in provincial politics.

There has been criticism in some quarters of the attitude of the Liberal party leaders with respect to Unity. However, so far as we can discern, E. L. Gray has gone so far as anyone possibly could go towards uniting unity and co-operation amongst those opposed to Aberhartism, short of "wrecking the Liberal organization entirely." Here is what Mr. Gray and the executive of the Liberal party have agreed to do in order to have just one candidate nominated in each constituency in opposition to Social Credit:

The Liberal executive in the various constituencies to meet with the executive of any other party and all organizations in each constituency entirely opposed to the present administration. These executives would then form themselves into their own constituency organization — not a Liberal, Conservative or Unity organization, but a CONSTITUENCY organization—call an open convention and nominate one candidate. This candidate would be responsible only to the Constituency Association, would be independent of any central provincial organization and would run as an Independent candidate.

We fail to see any nigger in that wood pile, and if these proposed to the constituents of more than one party to oppose Social Credit are sincere, the opportunity is theirs to do more than talk about it.

However, should a working arrangement of this nature not be consummated before the next provincial election, there is nothing to be gained by squabbling over the matter, as the same goal may be reached if the voters opposed to Aberhartism vote No. 1 for their party candidate and No. 2 for the other candidate opposed to Social Credit.—Trades Tribune.

LAMERTON COUNCIL MEETING

The 7th, a special meeting of the Council of the Municipal District of Lamerton No. 398, was held at the Municipal office to consider the purchase of a new rotary wheel scraper, and the scheme of the Department of Public Works for working out arrears of taxes, on Monday, June 26th.

The Council was called to order at 2:15 and the following action was taken after Coun. Neis moved to waive the required notice for a special meeting:

Moved by Coun. Wetherill to postpone the purchase of a Rotary wheel scraper until after the current season. Carried.

The Reeve called for action on letter from Minister of Public Works re working out arrears of taxes, which was tabled at the meeting of June 3rd.

Moved by Coun. Heebt that we have nothing to do with the tax remission program as outlined by the department's letter of May 19th. Carried.

Next meeting will be held on Monday, July 3.

HONORED AT ALIX

Honoring Mrs. Bert Rosson, who was married just recently, Mrs. Bookhart entertained 32 guests at a miscellaneous shower at her home on Thursday afternoon, June 22nd. The home was tastefully decorated with streamers for the occasion.

Many useful and beautiful gifts were presented to the honored guest for her new home, by Mrs. L. Olson, Mrs. Ted Deer, a friend of the bride, Miss Margaret Walker assisted in opening the gifts.

During the afternoon tea was served by Mrs. Brookhart, assisted by Mrs. Glen Rosson, Mrs. R. Wilson, Misses Nancy Moyer and Grace Wilson.

The bride very charmingly thanked the guests for the gifts. The numerous gifts of the shower proved which attended the shower, testified to the high esteem in which this young couple is held in our community.

EDITOR WITHEM HIS RIGHTS

"When the Secretary (Col.) Gray read only one letter from a prospective citizenship candidate who refused to sign a declaration that he would support the principles of a premier sworn to have established," etc.

The defendant refused to put heavy as the editor of the Star criticized him publicly for doing which the sponsor to the public was printed. The judge held that the candidate received all the publicity he wanted and promised to pay for, and if the editor continued it his duty in the public interest to criticize the candidate the editor was within his rights.

But judge ruled otherwise it would make it possible for a candidate for office to become immune from criticism. That could never do. It would not be in the public interest and would result in any politician or one which could be "fixed."

Open Sesame To Sales

Despite the many illustrations of its efficacy that could be quoted with little effort the value and power of advertising is not yet fully appreciated, even by many of those who stand to gain the most by it.

It has been said that if you have something the world wants, the world will beat a pathway to your door, or words to that effect; but the corollary is the more important one and one that is sometimes overlooked or, in the hurry and worry of letting the world know that you have something to offer, ignored, though it is possible to have the world beat a path to the proverbial doorway.

In other words, advertising is the open sesame to sales of goods and to persons. The world may thrust and hunger for something you have to offer but the world will continue to lack that something if you neglect to let the world know that you have it.

Apart altogether from the immediate value of advertising the cumulative force results that it brings is also often overlooked or underestimated. Long range demand. Doomed spells ahead. Sales create further demand and volume of production and volume means reduction in costs, lower and lowering prices and improved products. Lowered prices and better goods widen the range of demand and this, in turn, stimulates additional sales.

A Remarkable Example

A shining example of the value of advertising as a stimulus to business is afforded by the automobile industry.

Less than 25 years ago Walter Chrysler paid $5,000 for his first automobile, a second hand machine that sometimes ran and sometimes did not. A time came when had to be started by a hand crank, when oil lamps had to be lighted with matches and when brakes had to be operated by hand or foot.

But consider the automobile of to-day and for cost. For one-fifth of the sum paid by Mr Chrysler for his first machine, or even less the present day purchaser can secure an infinitely better product, a machine that can be depended upon to do its work efficiently under almost any conditions and a machine comprising so many refinements and conveniences as compared with the pioneer model, that it would take a chronicler to enumerate just to list them

And this result, an infinitely superior vehicle at a fraction of the selling prices in the earlier days of the industry, is largely the result of advertising. What happened in the automobile industry is duplicated in every line of business. A. Patterson, an authority on the subject "Advertising created increased demand. Demand was responsible for increased employment. Increased employment brought increased purchasing power and this in turn stimulated further demand," added and alerted by continued and additional advertising.

Thus on a foundation of advertising was built up one of the greatest industries on the continent which, in its turn as it grew, fostered and developed many other subsidiary industries whose existence to-day rests and rests more potential and actual consumers of motor cars

The same process and the same results are equally applicable to many other manufacturing industries, such as radio, refrigeration and a host of other smaller and less expensive commodities which are to be found in almost every household throughout the country. There seems to begin but they would not be in extensive use to-day and would not have built up flourishing industries had it not been for advertising, for without advertising no one would have known about them.

Hercules Symbol

Columbia University In New York Built Many Famous Men

When King George and Queen Caroline came to America to open up an intercourse with the New World, they had a son named Hercules. He died in infancy, but the royal parents, in memory of their little son, had a statue of Hercules erected on the campus of Columbia University in New York. The statue is still there, and Columbia's athletic teams are known as the Lions.

Columbia University in New York was founded by King George II. It was originally known as King's College, and was founded by royal charter. The charter was granted by George II in the year 1754. The first president of the college was Samuel Johnson, who was born in Connecticut in 1696. He was a graduate of Yale College, and was a tutor there for seven years. He was also a minister of the Church of England. He was offered the presidency of Harvard College, but declined it. He accepted the presidency of King's College, and held it for 20 years. He died in 1772.

The college was founded in the city of New York, which was then a small town. It was founded on the site of the present Trinity Church. The college was founded by the Church of England, and the first president was a minister of that church. The college was founded for the purpose of educating young men for the ministry of the Church of England. The

THREE FORMER ALIX RESIDENTS WIN DISTINCTION

At the Brandon Manitoba Fair, three of our former Alix residents cleared in the honor of winning Prize Money. Every penny better, three being, H. Hvild, Valhalla, L. Rolland, Castor, and F. J. Sutters, Bismore.

There are over 350 creameries in Alberta, and while the prowess augured well for the position of the prizes taking 60.0 per cent of the total, there were only five who took First Prize, these being the Bisset creamery, the Castor and Bismore, the other two creameries being Stettler and Didsbury.

The former two men are butter-makers at these respective plants, and Mr. Setters owns the Bismore creamery, and we congratulate them most heartily on success.

Apparently our local creamery has turned out some good ones, and we are proud of them.

Junior U.F.A.

In addition to "The Bear", to be put on by the Clive Dramatic Society, another play, "Mrs Oggleby Objects" which was the winner at the Alix Dramatic Festival, last March, will be presented.

This play featuring Mrs. Geo. Sparks, Mrs Walper and Ken Smith brought down the house at the last performance and many are looking forward to seeing it again. Those who missed it will no doubt welcome the opportunity to see it. So all be on hand at the Legion Hall, Friday, July 14th. Admission 25c, children 10c. The New Democracy

Many of our readers have asked for our opinion on the subject of "The New Democracy", as expounded by Mr. Herridge.

When public opinion has reached to a certain point where it calls for expression and leadership that leadership will always be forthcoming. Ever since 1930 our people have been in travail; they have gone through an experience that has crushed them deeply. Experience has been their teacher and, as everyone knows, it is not only a hard teacher, but one whose Bitter experience has taught them that the old political parties are not to be depended on for the right kind of leadership, not the kind that will cure the ills affecting the body politic. A more advanced science is needed for that. The old political doctors having learned the ways of the old school are a bar of faith in the more progressive teachings of the new democracy. They are not only ignorant of the old but they can only sneer at the new.

Discontent is widespread throughout the West. The ills affecting us are becoming more acute; debts overwhelming; commodity prices are going down; production costs are going up. Some have become discouraged and say "What's the use"; others, who still retain a remnant of faith in their fellowmen, are learning ways and means to overcome the difficulties confronting them. They are ripe for a change and new leadership.

The average citizen knows that their present troubles originate in the profit system. Large aggregations of capital in a country, control of our resources, industries, transportation and big business. They buy from producer and consumer, fix the cost of production and market them at real profits. Anything that cannot be sold at a reasonable profit is left for the Government to dispose of, in return for campaign funds, the Government subsidizes big business with tariff concessions, rebates, etc. When the farmer asks for protection he gets the equivalent of "relief" allowance. No one set of men has the right to live at the expense of another set. A fair deal for Alix is a perfectly legitimate demand, and those who are aware of their rights will not be slow in demanding them.

The old line parties have no one but themselves to blame if the electors desert them. They have had their chance and their promises so why should the electors trust them again?

As for Mr. Herridge, time alone will prove whether he is the right man in the right place. His starts with a clean record; no broken promises can be shelled up against him. From what we have read of his speeches we are inclined to believe that he has a good insight into our political inequalities and has the ambition to follow through, and the high courage to fight reactionaries in the House, he will work up a good following in the West. The voice of the West is a lusty one and, if the party in power and its Capital is capable of reforming anything, they had better get on the job before someone throws a monkey wrench into their party machinery. They can't expect to go on fooling all the people all the time.

Herridge tried his best to get the Tories to adopt a more progressive attitude, so did Meighen and Bennett. The effort was a complete failure. What happened to Alberta in 1935 was easily happen in Ottawa in 1940. And the turn-over in Alberta occurred in spite of the fact that if Ottawa had had men who were able and powerful enough to resist the privileged class residing in all parts of Canada.

J. J. Maloney at Alix

Hurling the charge of desertion at the Aberhart Government, J. J. Maloney, speaking here to a rotarian, July 7th, asked the question : "Do many of you want to be fooled again ?" Or is it that you haven't suffered enough ?

The present Government has collected $80,000,000 from the common people of Alberta more in its four years of office, yet has defaulted or flunked in all bond payments, but only half its interest charges (where accepted), met its sacred pledges (savings certificates) only piecemeal." What has it done with the money ? the speaker asked. Why did the Government muzzle the Public Accounts Committee ? Why are rumors persisting in Calgary of grave irregularities ?

The speaker waxed eloquent in telling how Mr. Aberhart pictured "Poverty in the midst of plenty;—selling at starving kiddies, empty cupboards, yet when he gets in office, partly on that plea, he continues the big salary of over $8,000 per month and expenses—so much for travel, so much for meals in transit, a free car, free gas, and now he flaunts a chauffeur with a uniform, who waits in state outside Mr. Aberhart's palatial home. All this while frequent holiday trips to the coast, is a poor way to lead the people out of poverty to the promised land."

The speaker asked the audience if they ever heard of the Premier's Bible ?—Mr. Aberhart says was the total.

Can a man of that type—tight and arrogant—be a reformer ? Is this the record of history ?

The speaker also told of Mr. Aberhart's wealth, his desire to go to Ottawa as an M. P., with Herridge, to get from under.

Mr. Maloney told of Roman Catholic persecution—in Chemainus in Quebec, yet the Premier promised the gospel on Sunday. He quoted the Government's press report which yet he was over there with concessions for the liquor forces.

WEDDINGS

STRAUBE-ROBERTS

A wedding of interest in Alix and district was solemnized on Thursday, July 6th, when Victoria Loving, youngest daughter of Mr. F. A. Straube and the late Mrs. Straube, became the bride of John Christy Roberts of Lac La Nonne, R.C.A.F. of the United Church, officiated.

Promptly at 4 o'clock, to the strains of the Wedding March, played by Miss Audrey Bisset, the bride, on the arm of her father, proceeded to the lovely bower-decked arch, where the ceremony took place. She chose for her wedding dress white lace and net, over white with hat, gloves and shoes in white, and carried a bouquet of white roses.

Mrs. Geo. Whitfield, matron of honor, was in yellow shoe with accessories in yellow, and carried yellow and blue iris. Little Jean Clark, of Lacombe, was a dainty flower girl in pale blue and carried a basket of pink blossoms. Mr. Geo. Whitfield supported the groom.

During the signing of the Register, Mrs. A. Bruske and Mrs. A. S. Bisset made "O Promise Me," accompanied by Miss Bisset at the piano.

Forty guests sat down to a dainty luncheon. The Bride's table, spread in lace and centered by a three-tier wedding cake, was decorated in pink and white.

Many beautiful gifts were presented to the bride and groom, testifying to their popularity.

Mr. and Mrs. Roberts left on a short honeymoon trip and on their return will reside in Alix.

Out-of-town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Holliday and Mrs. Hall, of Stettler; Mr. and Mrs. Pete Clarke and Jean, and Mrs. E. T. Hunter, of Lacombe.

DELAYED BUT WELL

On June 30, Mrs. A. S. Bisset held a shower at her home, in honor of Miss Louise Straube, whose approaching marriage is an event of interest in Alix.

Thirty friends of the bride were invited, and much laughter and hilarity was created over the "Mock Wedding" by Mrs. Prins, Mrs. Pears and Mrs. Pioneer.

Miss Jean Mackie and Miss Bisset presented and assisted in opening the gifts. The bride elect very happily thanked each one for the lovely gifts.

Tea was served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Floyd Page, Miss Jean Mackie and Miss Bisset.

AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY

For the Alix Agricultural Fair, August 1st, every effort is being made to make the Fair the best in years. Prospects are good for a real day for young and old. The Van Dee on Brue. show has been booked with a Ferris wheel, Merry-go-round, 3 side shows and concessions. A good program of baseball and other sports are being arranged and we expect to have the prize list out in a short time. All that is necessary to put the show over a success is the support of everyone in the village, and the full support of the farmers. Let us all boost; don't knock. Alix district warrants one of the best Fairs in the province.

We have the stock and we can grow the necessary produce to make a real fair for 1939. We would be pleased to have farm gates hold with bunting for July 1st, also farm buildings having some paint applied over the coming holiday period. For any other information, write or phone Bisset, Alix, Alta.

James A. Richardson

With that deep gripping sorrow, which for the moment makes the mind and heart oblivious to all else, Canadian people from the Pacific to the Atlantic learned of the sudden and unexpected death of Mr. James Richardson.

James Richardson was one of a small group of men—some of whom fortunately are still living and active—who are the rare and particular creation of new countries which like Canada, teem with undeveloped natural resources.

James Richardson inherited wealth, and by augmenting hard work, by business ability, and particularly by sterling integrity, he greatly increased his fortune, and then he divested great dreams of how he could use that wealth to improve the lot of his fellow men and to advance the interests of his country.

James Richardson inherited a large share of building and exporting business, and his first task was how to use that wealth to help the prairie wheat growers, by trying to market more of their wheat overseas, and by endeavouring to win for them from world buyers the highest possible price for their product. He took a keen interest in encouraging and in financing those who were attempting to develop ways and means of lowering the costs of production; all so that prairie farmers might make more profits from their efforts.

James Richardson also had visions of the great benefits that might move and flow from the opening up of the mineral resources of our north country, and so he financed more and sponsored Western Canada Airways—which afterward developed into Canadian Airways—and made available for the light, mail and passenger service by aeroplane to the north. His Company was also a pioneer in the carrying of mail by aeroplane across the Western prairies.

It would be difficult to assess the debt owing to him by those who today directly and indirectly profit from the steady stream of wealth flowing from northern mines and other resources. It is also no reactionary type to state that had it not been for James Richardson's air pioneering we might not yet be enjoying our existing fine airmail and air passenger transcontinental services.

Very dear to his heart, and most private with him, was the splendid aim for social purposes which he made of the wealth that he inherited and had later increased through his bold and courageous enterprises. Little of it did he use for his own benefit or comfort, accepting to drive himself relentlessly to make his dreams and visions come true, and this driving is what in the end over-taxed his heart in the full flower of his manhood.

With his keen enthusiasm and his energy, he supported incessantly schemes which were brought to him, and he required only to be assured that the plans offered were the object of creating additional employment for people, or of improving the living conditions of farmers or others. It has been said that no man with anything like a worthy cause ever came away from James Richardson empty handed.

Considering his great values, his genius, his adventurous spirit, his pioneering and his wide activities, one must help but be struck by the similarity between James Richardson and another great man, who also devoted his wealth and energies towards the advancement of his race and of his country, namely:—Cecil Rhodes. Rhodes dreamed, Richardson's wheat; Rhodes' gold, Richardson's nickel; Rhodes' Rhodesia, Richardson's efforts to open up northern Alberta for England by telegraph and railroad. Richardson's similar efforts to open up our north for Canada by aeroplane. Rhodes' love of adventure and his endowment of Universities. Richardson's similar love of adventure and endowment of Universities. Rhodes' support of worthy enterprises in South Africa. Richardson's support of similar enterprises in Canada. Rhodes' great public benefactions, charities and support of the Church. Richardson's gifts of the same order. And so we find a striking parallel between these two great men, each of whom honoured his country and his fellowmen in the improvement of the country in which he lived.

The farmers of our province, and the people of the whole of Canada, are losing of because James Richardson lived and worked and dreamed and planned, and "Travelled never rested on and to the great good which he did."

Moving Forward

In the year 1934, an old gentleman retired from the British Pension Office in London, going as his means his kind of that "Everything had been lowered."

Today, we can smile at this story. Today, we know that nothing in the world remains static. In business or in life, progress is a necessity. Any business that does not move forward is its methods and results, goes backward.

A large retail organization cannot rely on its name and past history if it is to survive. How long would we remain in business if we went into the markets of the world and there picked out the merchandise that appealed the most, offered it to the customer the suggested, instead of searching and looking and comparing and selecting until we were sure we had exactly what our customers demanded? How many of our advertisements would be read, if we uniformly pushed the quality of goods or their performance instead of using time, effort and study to test and verify the truth of all our statements? How much customer confidence would we enjoy if we "let the Customer Beware" instead of backing every transaction with our guarantee of "Good Insistency or Money Refunded"?

The name "EATON'S" is close associated here and down upon. It's our constant study of the needs and wishes of our customers, and almost one of the experience we have gained through years of successful operations, that ensures the continuing patronage of satisfied customers.

Cancer : The Killer

Tuberculosis, once the most dreadful of diseases to which human flesh was heir, has been brought within control in Canada within the past decade as a result not only of improved technique in the treatment of cases but more largely because of the general and widespread adoption of better preventive methods including a rigid system of inspection of animals and potential contacts. As a menace to human life tuberculosis is on the way out.

Now the fight is on throughout the Dominion to reduce to a similar degree of insignificance the most dreaded foe of the human race and the elderly — cancer.

As most people now know cancer is near the head of the list of the ten most conquered diseases which take a heavy and in its progress a painful toll of humankind and then and in other evidence of the deadly character of a more difficult enemy to subjugate than tuberculosis for several reasons. One of these is the fact that the cause of cancer has not yet been ascertained (if it is the work of a germ and medical science is doubtful about that the microbe responsible has not been found and isolated. For that reason cancer is not subject to medical treatment. There is no serum. Drugs will not prevent cancer or cure this terrible disease despite the claims of quacks.

Another difficulty in possessing a war on cancer is the fact that its presence may be unsuspected by the victim until it is too late for treatment to be effective. As a general rule it is painless in the early and curable stages. It is a more difficult enemy to subjugate than tuberculosis for several reasons. Education Needed

This means that if the disease is to be brought within control a public campaign of education to make the public aware of the symptoms which may or may not indicate the presence of cancer before it is too late for effective treatment and of the necessity of seeking medical advice without delay at the first suspicion that something is wrong is essential.

Arguments have been advanced against the publication of this article, professors to make the public cancer-conscious on the ground that people are likely to be frightened but as has been pointed out by more than one authority fear has been one of the chief obstacles to early diagnosis. Many have failed to consult their medical advisers until too late because it might mean an operation and they were afraid of an operation.

"You are going to frighten the people to death" complained one critic to the late Sir Alexander Bryan Leeson, expert, at the time of one of his lectures on cancer. "I am trying to frighten them into life," replied Lord Moynihan. "I never heard of anyone dying of fear but thousands who sought have been cured or are dying of cancer."

While this educational campaign among the public has only been under way for a few years on the continent there is reason to believe that it is already having some effect and that some lives have been saved who in years would otherwise have been lost.

Results in Evidence

Evidence in support of this statement was recently given by Dr Frank E. Adair in the bulletin of The American Society for the Control of Cancer, an organization which is spending $100,000 a year in its educational campaign. Some of the results reported by Dr Adair are as follows

1. A study of 726 patients with cancer of the breast, with smooth recession and uterus showed that 75 per cent of the cancers had left the original site and had spread to the lymph nodes. A similar study four years later of 600 such cases showed a decrease from 75 per cent to 58 per cent. Progress had gone to the lymph nodes.

2. In a study recently made in one hospital, it was found that in 1926, 52 per cent of the cases of breast cancer arrived too late to be operated on, while seventeen years later in the same hospital, only 13 per cent of the same arrived too late to be operated on.

3. A study completed only recently showed that the average age for women who came to the doctor with cancer of the breast from 1926 to 1930, was 54 years. A study made in the same hospital on the breast cancer cases arriving from 1930 to 1936 showed an average age of 51 1 years.

4. In a study of the size of the cancers removed, it was found that 71 per cent were over one inch in diameter, while in the same institution five years later, only 50 per cent were over one inch in size.

5. Another study, recently made showed that in one hospital the cancers were arriving with cancers so small that it was necessary to make a biopsy (an examination for microscopic study) in three times as many cases as was necessary 15 years earlier when cancers were larger and the diagnosis consequently easier

Hope For The Future

To those who appreciate the dread character of this disease and the importance of early diagnosis the foregoing evidence must be very heartening. But not only does it indicate that already some results have been obtained, action are being achieved but also that much greater results can be attained as the scope of the educational campaign is widened.

The extent to which results can be achieved, and the rapidity with which they can be achieved, will be determined by the amount of money which is made available for the maintenance and extension of the campaign.

Japanese Dancers

Public Performances Each Other Week Since Outbreak Of War

The Japan Times Weekly says the best dancers in Tokyo and elsewhere have been discovering in number since the outbreak of the China trouble itself their number are supposed to have given up their jobs and returned to other lives for their living. Before the war had passed under 1274 wartime conditions the best dancers used to earn more than 600 yen a month. The highest earning figure in the entire country was more than 60 yen.

The situation may be explained chiefly on the ground of dancing being under a cloud. The police believe that men and women should not be dancing when men are fighting and in China. The official mind refuses to draw distinction between frivolity and pleasure.

Who Wheat Is "Governed"; The Single Crop In The West

The farmers of Western Canada grow more wheat than any other crop for the very good reason that wheat can be grown better and more cheaply than any other farm product. Wheat will grow on the poorest land and the poorest kind of cultivation pays fairly well for the labor and capital put into it. Wheat will grow in a dry season when all other crops fail. Wheat will grow in a wet season when all other crops rot in the ground. Wheat will grow in the hottest weather and in the coldest weather. Wheat will grow in the driest soil and in the richest soil. Wheat will grow in the most backward districts and in the most highly developed districts. Wheat will grow in the most remote districts and in the most accessible districts. Wheat will grow in the most primitive districts and in the most highly developed districts. Wheat will grow in the most backward districts and in the most highly developed districts. Wheat will grow in the most remote districts and in the most accessible districts. Wheat will grow in the most primitive districts and in the most highly developed districts.

The suggestion of coffee substituted that more flax should be raised on the west. It is true that the production of flax in Canada has increased in recent years, but Canada has not yet reached the point where flax can be grown in large areas because the weed problem was too great. With each year of flax growing the number and variety of weeds have increased and the flax plant cannot compete with weeds except as effectively as wheat. Again there are no large world markets for flax as there are for wheat. Flax is used in comparatively small quantities in comparison with wheat and world markets are limited.

There is an alternative to wheat growing which is not generally known but which is most suitable among rich local agriculturists and that is the growing of sugar beets. Sugar beets to grow Adaptability this possesses and bring a remunerative profit in the way of cash as would the continuous production of wheat but it will tend to maintain the land and reduce in some measure the weed fertility.

The average farmer knows that he cannot grow profitably wheat on his land year after year. He knows that he takes certain fertility out of the soil and that unless he puts back in the yields will go down and in time the farm will become worthless. To avoid continual fertility in western areas must be mixed farming or later. Much of the farm output is the wheat has been cropped from a quarter to a half of a century and the fertility which have departed.

Who the Editors are Saying

"What we need is a legislature of business men and not a rabbit of evangelists whose economic hallelujahs mingle with the amens from the back benches". —Hatfield Independent.

"It is quite evident that when the C.C.F. launches a platform for the province of Alberta, it will present just the same kind of deception as was imposed on us when the social credit party was elected under the promise of a monthly dividend".—Stettler Independent.

HATS AND HEADGEAR

In an editorial dealing with Mr. Herridge, the C.C.F. leader is quoted as saying: "He (Mr. Herridge) had not evolved any program other than a series of rubber vague generalities, the same old series. But Mr. Herridge has made his position quite clear (a little too clear to suit a certain class of people). Making a diagnosis of the patient's illness is only the first step when a doctor is called in to see a patient. That is what Herridge has been doing. After making a remedy for a political body is not the work of a sane man. Convention must be called for that purpose. The Journal is perfectly familiar with that method of procedure.

The MacLean publication known as the Financial Post, is spreading reports that a system of boycott is being used against themselves and others who advocate unification of the two big railways. The venture to say their charge against the C.N.R. as being responsible for this boycott is deliberately false. Because these paid propagandists are losing ground in their efforts to steal about $4,000,000,000 worth of assets from the Canadian people, they are getting sore and starting to whine. The C.P.R. is a mill-stone around the neck of the C.N.R. and has been for years. It would easily give double the service to Canada it does at present, but the C.P.R. must be considered at every point. The proper thing for the government to do is to separate the two systems entirely and let each one work out its own line of action and policy.

It's a bolony, but of comfort
To a fellow when he's dead,
To have bi-definite' speeches
Over his coffin said.

It must be a bit of comfort
To a mother in the grave
To be left undressed
With flowers strewn above.

It must be a bit consolin'
To the village people are,
When he's lost the sense of hearin'
Being put a check at stay.

Yes, the flowers and the speeches
And the tears don't do him shed.
Are a bolony bit of comfort
To a fellow when he's dead.

Take a tip from me, my Comrade,
If you have a rose to give
Hand it to me when I need it—
Let me have it while I live.

COMMUNICATION

Editor Alix Free Press.

Sir:— A recent editorial in an Edmonton paper was headed "Great Economist's Great Library" and contained the statement "It's worth scarcely measurable in dollars".

The true worth of orthodox economists and their teaching recently was stated by a dispatch from Geneva (league of nations) and printed in the press, "War fears by creating demand for rearmament prevented world wide economic collapse such as occured in 1929". War or economic collapse! These are the alternatives offered to the people by "Finance" and it's eminent paid economists. Exactly as Douglas foretold twenty years ago, and Kitson before him.

The true worth of orthodox economists and their teaching can be measured only in terms of human misery.

On July 18th Lord Strathcyl (Commander Kentworthy) in a speech in London attacked the Bank of International Settlements declaring "£10 millions of Czech gold turned over to Germany would finance £100 millions of armaments. The Dutch Pres. of the B.I.S. had fatal sympathies and protested from France had received no assistance from England".

Meantime British citizens—men, women and children—are to offer their bodies for destruction and their pockets for confiscatory taxation.

Why? Because as Kitson, Douglas, Soddy and other honest, fearless men insist, orthodox finance being "essentially false contains the seeds of its own destruction. "There are no good private borrowers," but banks must lend or perish. Therefore Governments must be forced to borrow their peoples made to mean, by insisting fear, appeals to patriotism, war propaganda, etc., the issue of money to pay the wages of death (scary) demanded by those who can, and do, finance reactionary wars either for friend or foe with equal willingness.

The supreme issue before the world is whether we are to be ruled by fear or by love or usury.

That will be the issue before the people of Alberta and of Canada at the coming elections.

Whether they realize it or not, those who support orthodox Finance, oppose B.C. monetary reform.—Save Democracy—call it what you like—it will be lasting a long time all that is decent and good—liberty, justice, humanity, Christianity, or civilization—is sold.

Economic collapse or war?

Norman Jaques, M.P.
Wetaskiwin.

Mr. and Mrs. K. McLeod have been holidaying at Okre and Sylvan Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. Jordan have returned home from their holidays spent at Myrnam Lake and Hillmondale.

A large crowd attended the dance in the Community Hall on Friday night last. The music was supplied by the Reth Orchestra, of Red Deer.

BIRTHS

A wedding of local interest was solemnized in Lacombe recently when Miss Arlene Hoff, of Loyalist, Alta., became the bride of Mr. Albert Brede, of Haynes. The bride, who was attended by her sister, Miss Frances Hoff, B.K., of Consort, was becomingly attired in navy blue with white accessories and carried a beautiful bouquet of roses. Mr. Walter Brede acted as best man. Following the honeymoon, spent at Waterton Lakes, the happy couple have settled in Haynes where the groom is employed at the general store.

SHOWER

A large number of people gathered in the Haynes Community Hall on Saturday night where a shower was held for Mr. and Mrs. Albert Brede, who were recently married.

Following a short dance a midnight lunch was served, after which the bride and groom opened the gifts, which were both beautiful and useful.

In a few appropriate words they thanked the donors for their kindness, and the evening was brought to a close by the singing of "For they are jolly good fellows."

J. J. MALONEY

The greatest boon in Canadian history is what J. J. Maloney, speaking here last Friday, labelled the Aberhart promises.

A man who said: "I'll give you $25.00 out of the blue," when he, an educated man, knew better is too much to swallow, and if people register their vote in Aberhart's support again, it just proves that certain citizens of Alberta are incapable of reason.

Mr. Aberhart misrepresented when he made these promises. He misrepresented regarding his proposed convention trip, when the Hon. resignation, in the outward contrite way the Bible in the matter of his big new car; he did not tell the truth at Vegreville when he said he had not raised taxes on the common people, when he (Mr. Aberhart) stated that he borrowed nominal amounts rather than overdrawn $50 per cent, also increased the necessary tax on every farm by 50 per cent. True he changed the name from compulsory tax to social service tax. Besides these new taxes made last year, id in all, over $5.00 tax on farms on there going to the a week grade.

And look at the huge revenues, nearly $12,000,000 that will be collected this year. Where is it going? Where are the roads? Name me one stretch of road that has graveled outside of the four districts receiving blotter surfacing. Take the road from Alix to Mirror—60 holes in it. Why the money paid to Bryne, the $6,000 per year expert, would have gone a long way towards repairing the 7½ miles near here.

Why is the road from the highway to Vet not gravelled? Is there an understanding with certain big interests to keep the trucks out of Alix for road to Clive.

I make this prediction: "If some day the poor people of this province who, in many cases, suffer for the necessities the cream from their own pockets, while Aberhart lives and rides in luxury—the day approaches when they voted for a really "big interest controlled government." That the hour was just to get rid of the C.C.F. in its birth-place—Alberta.

I am a great change coming. The 18 year olds are growing up, they are now 17, and fast maturing.

Mr. Maloney will be back at Alix, in the near future, when he will submit a "balance sheet" to the Premier.

A Declining Industry?

The fact that the Dominion Bureau of Statistics has reported a decrease of $21,000,000 in 1936 in expenditures made in Canada by incoming tourists is something which should give pause for reflection and enquiry, in the hope that the lagging of national income on that account can be discovered and remedied.

Tourist traffic in Canada has become a national industry of great importance to the prosperity of the country in the past few years. While in one or two years prior to the depression even higher figures were shown, the steady revenue in the years of the Dominion from that source has been steadily increased since 1932 reaching a post-depression peak of $290,672,000 in 1937 which however is still below the $309,279,000 of the record year of 1929. The following year 1938 marked a recession of $21,000,000 the first and it is to be hoped the last decline since 1932.

What 1939 is to bring forth from this source is still in the lap of the gods so far as the statistics are concerned, but there seem to be many good reasons why the income lost in 1938 should be picked up and augmented

* * * *

Some Bright Factors

In the first place the visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth drew thousands of Americans across the boundary to Canadian centres in May and June this year and this alone should go far towards balancing the deficiency existing between the 1937 and 1938 figures. Just about that time, and since, there has been encountered by a reluctance to expenditures by tourists into the country, due to the international tension that has existed between the United States and Europe. Just when that tension will cease to be the major item in the reduction, since a break down of the Hitler dictatorship has

Orthodox Finance, Social Credit, New Democracy, Monetary Reform

BY J. A. COLLINS

Orthodox Finance believers are those who believe in a specific operative system of finance. Semi-generally speaking, opposed to the heritient.

Social Credit —Social; pertaining to society; credit. All credit is based on the government the postponed payment of money. Or, if you like, the ability to purchase goods and services when and where required.

Orthodox Finance—In Canada the Dominion Parliament regulates currency and coinage; incorporation of Banks; the issue of paper money (credit instruments); savings banks; interest and legal tender.

All this is peculiarly and specifically written in operative statutes, available for all citizens who seek the King's printer and pays a nominal fee. Belief in this statutory system, I assume, constitutes "orthodox finance" supporters.

Social Credit; Monitary Reform.—To those who profess belief in the Social Credit system: To whom do you apply for the operative details (in comparison to the operative statutes on orthodox finance)?

I am an honest inquirer. I wish to compare the two systems; to learn, to be informed. Actually, what can be said for and against each, from the consciousness and support the one or the other with my vote and what influence I may exert.

Am I correct in assuming that Major C. H. Douglas' books, his report to the U.F.A. Legislature, Mr. Aberhart a Macleod, debates in the House of Commons, public speeches and S. C. papers, enacted statutes, do not give the comparative answer? Is it just to claim great things for a system that is not defined, whatever it may be?

Is it reasonable to maintain that on the average citizen is untrained, the author of definitions are for experts only; yet the citizen is exhorted to accept by his vote which system should be adopted.

Is it just to be told who the experts are or shall we have to let that be a "state secret" for some time.

—o—

The Technocrats are denouncing all attempts to associate their organization with any other political body in Canada. They will have no alliance with any other political organization. They are out to kill the present price system, while other parties are content to be participating the same.

Western Canada Wool Wins in Severe Test

Recently a large manufacturer of automobiles in Canada reported that his firm had decided to use fabric made from all Canadian wool for the upholstery in their 1940 cars.

Before a fabric was decided on several were subjected to a rigid test, known as the "rubbing test". A mechanical device was used to rub the cloth just as if it were being worn by a person getting in and out of a car. To be satisfactory, a fabric must stand from 10,000 to 12,000 rubs. Two of the fabrics under test gave out before the required number of rubs had been reached. A third just passed. But a cloth made from 100 per cent Virgin Canadian fleece from Western ranger sheep was still good after 20,000 to 60,000 rubs.

Symbolic Mars

Proximity of the planet Mars —astronomers say it is a mere 36,000,000 miles from Earth at the moment—has suggested to many the proximity of that other Mars to the typhlos the awful famine of war.

The planet has not been so close for many a year, while war has loomed on the late months to be very near indeed. But a world-wide war has nonetheless been avoided. Mars has been near — but not actually and completely at home on the Earth. May war's threat retreat into the shadow of the past as the planet recedes from its present proximity to the Earth!

But what is it that will really drive Mars from the Earth? Not merely the passage of time. Nor the unfailing revolutions of the planets in their courses. War must be thought before it is waged. When war-making qualities of thought—brutality, hate, and fear—are dissolved by the recognition of man's true nature and of the true brotherhood, war and the threat of war—be it economic or military —will have been permanently banished from Earth. The problems of war is solved—discovered—by brotherly love applied to individuals, groups and races.—Christian Science Monitor.

Commissioner's Report

The following are the findings of Commissioner Hon. Hooper Judge J. A. Jackson, appointed to inquire into alleged irregularities in the conduct and the management of the affairs and affairs of the Eastern Irrigation District report: I find that the management of the District has been managed remarkably well since it was put under local management and that the Board has conducted its affairs diligentically into their work, notwithstanding that they actual practical experience, the insignificant sum of $6.00 per month bearing no relation to the amount of time and energy expended on the work. The Board, while leaving the actual management to Mr. Gray, was by no means a rubber stamp. The members were active and conscientious in their duties. Mr. Gray was found up in the success of the project, full of energy and driving force did much to bring the District to the place where it is today. Nothing was found on the evidence that would indicate the Board and Manager, or either of them, had any improper motive or were guilty of any intentional wrong. The motives were good but the methods often used are subject to criticism. There were irregularities, the seriousness of which were toned down by the honesty of them in charge.

Britain Wants More Poultry from Canada

"There has been a notable improvement in the packing and grading of Canadian poultry reaching the British Market in the past two to three years, and the only complaint is that we are not getting enough of it," said Stephen Strutsky, one of the largest buyers of poultry on the Smithfield Market, London, England, who visited Ottawa recently.

"One of the principal reasons for my visit to Canada is to try and find out why we cannot get more Canadian poultry," continued Mr. Strutsky. "There is a market for fully four times as much as the Dominion has been sending recently, providing it is within the 3½ lb. to 5 lb weights, which are most in demand by British consumers. Poultry from Canada as from other parts of the Empire, has the advantage of a six cent per pound preference entering the United Kingdom.

"Canadian poultry dealers and producers should fully appreciate the importance of uniform grading and packing, and every detail linked with sales appearance or appeal, as good as by like other food products is ready bought with the eyes. The Canadian poultry we are getting is satisfactory as to quality, but we want more of it."

Juices from rhubarb, cherry, and berry pies often insist on running out, all over my oven. So now I heat an egg lightly, mix it into the sugar the pie requires, add a little flour and mix thoroughly, and then mix with fruit, and I find the juices stay in inside the pie where it belongs.—Mrs. R. Country versus City

Apart from the economic aspect of the question, one is often tempted to wonder why there should be any influx of rural residents to metropolitan centres in Canada as well as in the United States. When one looks on the advantages of life in the country, which means in the small town or village as well as on the farm with that of life in the greater population centres, one feels a strong urge to plump for country life.

In normal times, of course, there is always an intimation of restless and ambitious youth from country to city and there is also a fairly consistent migration of the elderly folks making the change to be near the educating facilities they require to spend their declining years in surroundings which, however, among find later, can not be compared to the lively anticipated.

In difficult times, such as those experienced with great acuteness in Western Canada in the past decade, this tendency to move from country to the city is accentuated by which families who have found living conditions in the country impossible and who seek refuge in the larger centres in the supposition that they can better themselves.

Setting aside the problem of those who make the change in haste or because of pressure of economic circumstances, there are left the considerable number who voluntarily move from the farm or the small town to the centres of dense population in the expectation that in the cities they will find easy association, pleasures and social contacts which, they believe, are unobtainable in rural surroundings. It is possible, however, that reflection will demonstrate that life in the country can be as amenable, or more, so, than in the cities.

What's A Rich Town?

The argument was well presented in an American publication recently by Lee W. Johnson who writes in part:

"Where do they get that word 'Rich' anyway?

"Last week organizers working to promote the people of a neighborhood to vote for daylight saving started their public with the slogan, 'Vote for Daylight Saving and Keep our Town out of the Rich Towns Class.'

"Now, I suppose, was the intention of the daylight saving people to convey the impression that a 'rich town' is something to be hushed down upon, the kind of a town we would not want to live in.

"From what origin the term 'rich town' when used by city dwellers, has come to mean a rural farming community.

"How good is there an out of order, so smooth, as understanding about a rural farming community."

"Well, let us see. In the first place the 'rich town' is a community of where the air is fresh and pure, free from the smoke and gas and filth of city streets. In the 'rich town' you know your neighbors and neighbor with them—and you don't have to lock your doors at night. Your churches, stores and school are still the outstanding institutions of those communities, there is no poverty in the 'rich town' and no place to go. They don't have to travel to a great or poor on the pavement; there are birds and flowers, the material things you need, to live and enjoy, there is peace and quiet soon, not the park variety, to be seen and enjoyed, there is peace and quiet and confidence. More and more these dwellers who can afford it are moving out in 'rich towns' to live and raise their families.

"Politics in the 'rich town' are not complicated by the partnership of state or the political group with the underworld of vice, gambling, bootlegging. The 'rich town' doesn't have to go through the periodical wave of moral reform when a 'clean up' is made just before the election in order to catch the church vote—and then allowed to die a natural death as soon as the election is over and the elected city administration again begins the process of shooting in over and the elected city administration again begins the process of shooting money and a plum 'to meet privately' and plot plan and to indulge in the very pastimes they so recently denounced a short time before.

From The Rich Towns

"Business leaders will tell you that their smartest and most reliable men and women workers were boys and girls from the 'rich towns'. You don't hear the 'rich towns' wailing about their unemployment problems. You don't hear about government help to solve their financial problems. There is—but what's the use. We could go on and on.

"If you take a 'rich town' these campaign organizers seem what 'rich town' mostly does, if they mean a community which takes its time and admits its many faults and is not always believing for something or about something very business and is not always believing for something or about something very business and is not always believing for something or about something very business

Wheat Pool News Notes

The Alberta Wheat Pool has purchased the Union Terminal, with a capacity of two million bushels, located at Port Arthur. The deal was made due to the necessity of providing additional terminal space for increasingly large eastern shipments from Alberta. The Pool owns a five million bushel terminal at Vancouver and, of course, the bulk of Alberta grain handled by the organization will still be diverted westward.

The Alberta Wheat Pool has no plans made to go ahead with pooling to take care of coarse markings over the 5,000 bu. limit permitted to go to the Wheat Board. As soon as the federal government regulations in connection with pooling are announced further details will be made public by the Pool.

The last week in July was one of the most disastrous seven days in Alberta's agricultural history. Exceptionally high temperatures prevailed over the wheat belt, and particularly in the south. Empress was the hottest spot in the province, registering 106 degrees of heat.

ALIX JUNIOR WHEAT CLUB

Judging of standing plots of Alix Junior Wheat Club was completed last week by P. H. Newcombe, district agricultural of Red Deer, assisted by Rev. Beattie of the Wheat Pool Elevator. Many very creditable plots were seen while in a few cases drouth and weeds have pretty well beaten the grain. Excellent purity as to variety (Red Bobs) was evident in all plots. Following is the standing of the field:—

George Glaspe, George Mailor, Roy Barritt, Chas. McDermand, I. R. Baker, Jr., Ernest Andrews, Tellman, Arthur Webster, S. K. Swank.

A Junior Seed Fair will be held at a date to be announced later.

CORRECTION

Alix Free Press — With reference to the recent Social Credit meeting in Alix, I was up there and I want to say that there was no disturbance during the meeting, either from political dissent. Treasurer Brownlee and other members of Executive were invited and conducted Mr. Bowker did not ask questions, but he did otherwise which, by their tone and personal manner were obviously designed to make trouble. This he failed to accomplish and the speakers treated him with perfect courtesy.

What happened [illegible] had nothing to do with what happened inside the meeting as the enclosed cutting taken from the Edmonton Journal proves. I am very glad if you publish this in the interests of truth and fair play. Yours truly,

Thomas Hughes.

Public Opinion In Action

To those who have their ear to the ground, there appears to be signs that the public viewpoint on the question of substantial expenditures by the various governmental units of the country is veering in the direction of economy. Straws of economy seemingly referred to as "the good old virtues of thrift and economy."

If this is correct there is a very definite and pronounced trend of public opinion in this direction, the time may not be far distant when governments will start tightening the public purse strings and when government officials at the behest of their superiors, will commence to set heavily on unnecessary expenditures.

Still further towards a changing viewpoint on the subject of public expenditures is not only apparent in many parts of the Dominion of Canada, but is becoming apparent in the United States.

The phrase-maker is not an unnatural one on this continent. It has been a matter of observation over a long period of years that public opinion in a very wasteful fashion and is inclined at times to rise to enthusiasm. The producers of thought on the North American continent is apt to swing to a wide arc before even a definite trend may be in the right and new word to be left on topics of general public concern.

For some time now there has been a general disposition on the part of the majority of the people not only to censure, but to urge government authorities of public money, sometimes it is to be feared, without much thought of the day of reckoning which is bound to follow sooner or later

Feeding The Garden

Now, if signs are read aright, there is a hint of a trend in the other direction The cause of it may be difficult to diagnose but perhaps more and more people are beginning to feel the burden of taxation and to realize that there can be no increase so long as indebtedness continues to accumulate and budgets remain unbalanced.

Some very sound thoughts on this subject of the relationship between public opinion and governmental reaction are contained in the final of a series of articles by Allan Hobbs, president of the Canadian Federation of Labour, in a recent issue of the Labour Review. The Federation's official organ, in which he points out that in the final analysis the solving of the railway problem depends upon the public's attitude towards the railway problem.

"I want to lay great stress on this," writes Mr. Hobbs, "because in these days of governmental interference in economic affairs, of government attempts to control the hours that men work and the wages they receive, there is a very grave danger that the organized workers may get the impression that all that is necessary to secure a great victory is to persuade the government to do this or that thing for their advantage.

"There can be a greater mistake. A government's consideration should think first for it must be obvious that the only reason that leads the government of a democratic country to undertake any legislation that no wage earners in the belief that opinion will support their course. Therefore, the lasting quality of any action is not of things which a government may take but is dependent on the skill of the government in judging not only what is the attitude of public opinion at the moment, but what it is to be, as issues change.

Lest I should be charged with a cynical attitude and told that democracy can surely produce statesmen who will frame a political system in which the government depends always on ensuring right as to what public opinion wants, but I be told that governments should do what is right and take the consequences—let me point out that this is all very well in theory, but practice democracies insist and should be guided by public opinion. If a government decides to do unnecessary because it is right, but normally speaking in doing something which is unpopular, the fact that the government has done this is of no importance, for the succeeding governments will simply undo it. It is for the first and paramount duty of a democratic nation to ponder what the voters want and to give it to them.

The Fair Minded Man

"Of course, in our times the responsive attitude of government to public opinion has been carried a little too far, and we all know that governments in this and all other democracies are nowadays inclined to do more than give the public what the public wants. They are actually given to trying to create public want things, so that the government may get the credit of having done what the public wants.

"It is an old story now that governments will actually try to bribe the public by great expenditures of public money—only because the public sometimes forgets that public money is the public's money, and that everyone who benefits from any sort of government expenditure is also paying for the amount of them.

Indeed, experience seems to show now that the weakest elements in our economic system the workers and the farmers who are the elements to whom the governments generally appeal with large public expenditures, are exactly the elements who pay a disproportionately large share of the cost of running the country, and only fail to know that they do this because their indirect taxation leads them to believe that the rich pay more than their share of taxes."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Mind" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon at all Christian Science churches on Sunday. The Golden Text is Romans 11:34, 36. One of the Scriptural citations is: "And Jesse answered him, The first of all the sons." (I Samuel 16:1). Also, "Hear, O Israel: The Lord our God is one Lord" (Mark 12:29). One of the correlative passages from Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, is: "The First Commandment is my favorite text. It demonstrates Christian Science. It inculcates the tri unity of God, Spirit, Mind; it signifies that man shall have no other spirit or mind but God, eternal good, and that all man shall have one Mind. The divine Principal of the First Commandment bears the Science of being, by which man departs from sensuous health, holiness, and life eternal" (p. 339).

EDITORIAL NOTE

Great sympathy with refugees from Europe is expressed, but, alas, it is only lip service. Only a few thousands and these not find practical expression to the extent of allowing any of them to enter our country and make homes for themselves on our millions of acres of vacant land. It is true that Canada has taken in a few, a pitiful few, in comparison with the many that want to come. Vessels, crowded with Jews, are going from port to port in Europe and are not allowed to disembark their load of persecuted humanity. Many are jumping into the sea, unable any longer to endure the suspense.

Is there anything more hideous than human selfishness when it turns against its fellow beings who are in distress. When it gathers its shirts and pants by on the other side, rather than come in contact with those who have been robbed and robbed. Does this attitude express the teachings of Christianity, and are those who advocate this form of treatment worthy to be called civilized? It may be well for some of us to read again the verse from the Scripture: "For with the same measure that ye mete withal it shall be measured to you again." That rule works both ways.

Beverley Baxter, a writer in Maclean's Magazine, in referring to the Imperial Government's trouble with Japan in China, describes Premier Chamberlain as having a "cool head." After all I have been told about Britian by the Japs, we would think the best description of Chamberlain would be that he has "cool feet."

CANADIANA

Toronto—Premier Patullo of British Columbia, here for the testimonial dinner to Prime Minister King, said he was pleased that conditions on the West Coast was prosperous and likely to remain that way. He added that he would like to see more immigration, adopted as a national policy. People are still needed in the Dominion, but they must be selected and not sent be scattered when they arrive.

Winnipeg—Request that the Canadian Wheat Board act as a neutral selling agency was refused by the federal Government, but A. M. Shaw, director of federal marketing services, in discussing plans for handling the 1930 crop with western pool and grain organizations. While no announcement has been made, it is expected that a central selling plan is under consideration whereby existing co-operatives and agencies will pool their marketing facilities.

Montreal—Salaries paid to members were criticized by the report of a committee of the Canadian Teachers' Federation, the convention of 2,000 members of the profession.

Sidney—In a national survey, the report claims that "more than half the teachers of Canada are in the profession of self-supporting possession might be said, "A lean mage [illegible] was thrown upon their condition."

Regina—Should war come again, Armistice Day in all Canada should be emancipated just as once, said W. W. Kemp, K.C., in the convention of the Kiwanis International here recently. Profits should be taken out of war, said the Winnipegger, and purchase of tax free bonds should no longer be considered a fair contribution to the winning of a conflict. The State should take control of vital industries, and limit profits of industries return on invested capital.

Just Eric Hamburg to survey rural Mennonite farmers from New York State and Ontario, Lieut. Col. Gen. Drew declared that Japanese should be asked to leave Canada "Japanese statesmen are openly saying British and American people are no longer welcome in the Orient. We have a duty to perform towards those Japs who came to this Dominion as farmers and work men. They should be asked to leave the country."

—o—

Ottawa—Parliamentary resignation now stand at nine in the senate and five in the house of Commons. There are five senate vacancies in Quebec, two in Ontario and one each in Manitoba and Saskatchewan. Vacancies in the Commons are two for Quebec, and one each for Alberta, Saskatchewan and Ontario.

—o—

The Week in Edmonton

Edmonton, August—His Excellency the Governor-General, long known as an expert fly fisherman, sampled the delights of Alberta's mountains, pools Saturday, when he cast his rod over a solitary mountain lake east of Jasper. On the previous day Lord Tweedsmuir visited the Columbia ice field, that awe-inspiring birthplace of great rivers that leaves the beholder breathless and speechless on first view.

The tourist trade in Big Bend, Alta., Bet Ice year, Alberta recovered only $1,317,000 out of a Canadian total of over $10,000,000—but that is big business. Actually, the city of Vancouver did 30 times the tourist business of Alberta during 1928, according to railroad statistics. This year, however, due to the building up of highways and better advertising methods, the percentage of the total business nearing to Alberta will be raised considerably.

A reminder of the importance of the tourist trade—American tourist entering Ontario last summer left $65,000,000 hard cash to the tune of $117,000,000 —while the value of the whole Western crop was placed at $198,000,000. The comparison, so far as Alberta is concerned, is certainly odious.

—o—

Alberta is now ready to enter the fire insurance business. The announcement was made by Hon. E. C. Manning at a Raymond meeting. Rates will be considerably lower than those prevailing at present, the Minister stressed, and all profits will go into provincial revenues. As the situation exists, he added, Alberta pays an annually $12,000,000 per year to outside interests in premiums, while the average return was only $4,000,000 yearly.

—o—

In connection with government's own insurance, Mr. Manning stated that new policies by which the province assumes the first 10c per cent of risks and groups the rest with Lloyd's of London, $74,000 has been saved in the past three years.

—o—

Alberta's wheat crop this year promises to exceed the 150,000,000 bushel mark, according to statements made by Agriculture Minister D. S. Mullen. Cash value, based on estimated average yield and present pool and pay, should be about $70,000,000, he added. Deterioration of crops in some parts of the province during the two weeks period is to be announced "was alarming," the minister said. Most of the damage may result from grade drops due to shriveling, underfilling of grain.

—o—

Some days earlier, on his return from a northern inspection tour, Mr. Mullen denied the rumors that the Canadian Northern would be completed in the near future. "Unless bridges, then there would be no crop," said the Minister.

This is credited as a part of the monthly payment.

Over forty students, along with the supervisors, lived in the dormitory last year. The students do most of the work in shifts, and besides having recreation time, they all attend a two-hour study period each evening under supervision.

The students attend the town high school which has a 3 room for Grades X, XI and XII. Full courses are taught in all the grade. Languages, chemistry 2, and options, including typewriting, are offered.

The Stettler Divisional Board is making special arrangements this year for high school students to get their high school work. The cost will depend on the number in attendance but will definitely not be over ten dollars a month. This is an opportunity not to be overlooked this year. Value In Vacations

Every farmer who can possibly do so should contrive by the exercise of a little ingenuity to plan for himself and family a holiday before the snow flies even if it is only the matter of two or three days and it ought if has to be done as a very modest scale and on an extremely slender budget.

For the great part of ten years now farmers on the prairie for the most part have been subject to a heavy and unnatural touchstone of the ravages and storms of misfortune. The great majority have at end up gamut grueling punishment with a courage and fortitude that have been the admiration and wonderment of those who have come to visit among them.

True there are some who have succumbed to the disasters attendant upon a prolonged and severe depression. Some have left the country to seek better fortune elsewhere a few have died prematurely as a result of disease occasioned by worry privation, and disappointment and a handful have taken the quick way out by their own hands But the numbers who have succumbed is surprisingly small—constituting a remarkable testimonial to the indomitable spirit of the man on the land

Neither are the courage and fortitude which have enabled him to weather the storm with a stout heart confined to the tiller of the soil His faithful helpmate who has stayed by her husband and children through whatever may seemed hours of daily drudgery tempered by nothing more than an occasional gleam of hope for something better in the remote future she'd have a high place in the saga of heroism and courage which have marbled their course through a multiple forty days and forty nights

The Little Woman

No pasean of praise can do justice to the little woman who has not only kept the home fires burning for so long under adverse conditions, which cause her to remained by who live among the comforts and conveniences of the city but has often enough by a timely smile and an encouraging word, snatched her man from the abyss of despair

And so it is that during the long years and distress of the wilderness, to suggest that a holiday a change of scene sort is due the farmer, and still more to the faithful wife and homemaker, who has not even had the small opportunities for brief relenses from care which come to the man whose business sometimes forces him afar, perchance in search of food for his livestock or on some other mission connected with his efforts to keep his head above water.

No monument is likely to be erected in any public square to the man as the land who has seen his plans duly clearly and has followed light no matter how dimly it may have burned and even after it may seem to have vanished for ever No public recognition will be given to the heroism of the woman who, despite too often a frail frame, has been a tower of strength to her husband and her offspring in a long period of great tribulation.

The story has appeared in the occasional novel and on the drama, but no matter how vivid the portrayal thereof may be, it does not and cannot paint the depths, which only those who have suffered could tell, and even they would not if they were given the gift of tongues to do so.

Surely the thousands who have suffered so poignantly, so silently, so uncomplainingly, so heroically, are entitled to some surcease from "the trivial round, the common task", if by any means within command, it be arranged and provided.

A Change And Rest

It has been said that a change is as good as a rest. If there is any truth in that—and we can doubt it—it emphasizes the ability to get a rest, even though it does not involve a change of venue of more than a dozen miles or so, with very little cost. It would be out of place to suggest how it might be done There are so many ways which can be made to fit the circumstances and the environment of the individual. Many a brief holiday has been enjoyed with little more equipment than a wagon, a tarpaulin and a team of horses

The rest and the change afforded by a holiday no matter how brief and unpretentious, can be counted upon to pay dividends in the form of improved spirits, better health and a brighter outlook on life. Many a cheap holiday has saved much greater sums in doctors' fees and hospital charges, and even funeral expenses.

Moreover, the pleasurable anticipation which goes with the laying of plans for a change of scene adds much to the value of a vacation.

Patience Rewarded

The Fisherman Reaps Something For Nothing Patience

The proverbial patience of the fisherman is being rewarded. But whatever the size of his catch, he reaps an intangible but none the less valuable reward. His quiet taken him under the open sky It brings him the tonic of rolling sea and flying spray, or the benediction of the still lake touched with the colors of the afterglow. It sends him back refreshed and better equipped, perhaps, to evaluate more nearly in their true perspective the perpetrated and irritations of workaday life—New York Times.

Photographer Had Troubles

Found Assignment To Get Picture Of Crying Baby No Snap

Banking below are the tale of a photographer's life. Happy babies are found by the dozen but one cameraman attache knows his assignments to photograph bawling infants are few and far between. Called upon to get a picture of a wide mouthed crying infant he scanned the streets of Toronto for several days and could find he thought he had but subject. The child stopped yelling around at him and smiled. I seem to have the knack of face that appeals to them he said wearily.

Finally after numerous attempts he was called to a maternity home nurses said they had a perfect model at last. He dashed out immediately but this find it was stopped by the photographer's friendly face and stopped wearing at once. To disgust the photographer burned as he took up his equipment when the prospective new quarry gave the little the a few yards and the performance was on again. The result ing photo also owed a perfect specimen and just what the customer had ordered

Governments Of Australia's Vice-Regal Residence Must Climb Stairs

The Duke and Duchess of Kent have been accepted a good deal lately with arrangements concerning their future home Yarralumla, the residence of the Governor-General of Australia. It seems strange that in a house so modern Yarralumla was built as recently as 1926) there is no lift in the nursery regions on the third floor Fortunately, the Duke and Duchess regard exercise as good for their health and figures, and in most ways the house makes great appeal to them. It is roomy, cool, peaceful, set in pleasant gardens and in restful scenery

Decline Of The Male Quartet

Fearsome Harmonizing Seems To Be Almost Thing Of The Past

Add to America's things to view with alarm the fact that only 16 towns in seven states sent male quartets to Tulsa Okla., where the world championship in masculine fearsome harmonizing has just been decided with only a touch of solemnity but quite a lot of old-fashioned fun

Climax Of Hitler's Career Will Be Reached In September

Chancellor Hitler maintains an advisory staff of five astrologers, to read the stars and tell him what the future holds, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler said on arriving at New York from Europe.

"At the present time," Dr. Butler said "the advice of these wise men is that the climax of Hitler's career will come early in September and that whatever he is to do to add to his fame must be done before that time

"This may sound like nonsense, but is the sort of nonsense which may easily give to modern civilization another terrific shock."

Soviet Issues Organizing Army For National Defense

An army of Soviet Russian blood donors, including many women, is being organized for national defense.

The movement to register blood donors became popular last summer during the war-pocket border war between Russian and Japanese-Manchukuoan forces at Changkufeng.

Now the institute of blood transfusion is registering a regular army of "active" donors. Thousands of others are sought for a blood donor reserve.

New Anti-Aircraft Gun

Operated By Electric Eye And Rejoices Fifty Shells A Minute

New anti-aircraft guns, aimed by an electric eye and capable of hurling 50-pound shells seven miles at a rate of 50 a minute, now ring London, the London Star, evening newspaper, declared.

The newspaper said every airplane coming near the city day or night is reported and "covered" by these guns as a practice manoeuvre.

The eyes is 50 yards from its gun, the Star said, and spots a "plane by a detector A pointer tells the crew the correct elevation and automatically sets the shell fuse, taking into account the speed of the "plane.

Value In Vacations

Every further who can possibly do so, should contrive by the exercise of a little ingenuity to plan for himself and family a holiday before the snow flies, even if it is only the matter of two or three days, and though it may be to some at a very modest scale and on an extremely slender budget.

For the great part of ten years now farmers in the province for the most part have been subject to a heavy and constant bombardment of the slings and arrows of misfortune. The great majority have stood up against grueling punishment with a courage and fortitude that have been the admiration and astonishment of visitors, and have come up smiling.

True, there are some who have succumbed to the disasters attendant upon a prolonged and severe depression. Some have left the country to seek better fortune elsewhere; a few have died prematurely as a result of disease accentuated by worry, privation and disappointment, and a handful have taken the quick way out by their own hands. But the number who have succumbed is surprisingly small, constituting a remarkable testimonial to the indomitable spirit of the man on the land.

Further are the courage and fortitude which have enabled him to weather the storm with a stout heart confined to the tiller of the soil. His faithful helpmate, who has stayed by her husband and children, through what must have seemed aeons of daily drudgery tempered by nothing more than an occasional faint gleam of hope for something better in the remote future, should be given a high place in the saga of farmwife and courage which have marched their course through a multiple forty days and forty nights!

The Little Woman

No measure of praise can do justice to the "little woman" who has not only kept the home fires burning for so long under adverse conditions, which cannot be realized by those who live among the comforts and conveniences of the city, but has often enough by a timely smile and an encouraging word, smothered her man from the abyss of despair.

And so it is not unmeet, after the long trial and distress of the winter season, to suggest that a holiday — a change of scene sort o' thus the former and still more to the faithful wife and homemaker who has not even had the small opportunities for brief relaxation that have come to the lot of many whose business sometimes forces him afield, declares in search of food for his livestock or on some other mission connected with his efforts to keep his head above water.

No monument is likely to be erected in any public square to the man on the land who has performed even his plain duty cleanly and well, but no matter how dimly it may have burned and even after it may seem to have vanished for ever. His noble recognition will be given in the harvests of the women who despite ten often a fruit frame has been a tower of strength to her husband and her offspring in a long period of great tribulation.

When the story has appeared in the conventional novel and in the drama, but no matter how vivid the portrays thereof may be it does not and cannot phasis the depths, which only those who have suffered could tell, and even they would not if they were given the gift of tongues to do so.

Surely the thousands who have suffered so poignantly, so stoically, so uncomplainingly in heroically, are entitled to some recompense from "the kindly ground, the common task", if by any means within command, it be arranged and provided.

A Change And Rest

It has been said that a change is as good as a rest. If there is any truth in this and who can doubt it.* it practicates the ability to get a rest, even though it does not involve a change of venue of more than a few miles or so, with very little cost. It would be out of place to suggest how he might be done. There are so many ways which may be made to fit the circumstances and the environment of the individual. Many a tired holiday has been enjoyed with little more equipment than a wagon, a tarpaulin and a team of horses.

The rest and the change afforded by a holiday no matter how brief and unpretentious, can be counted upon to pay dividends in the form of health and improvement, can be counted upon to pay dividends in the form of health and improvement, can be counted upon to pay dividends in the form of better health and a brighter outlook on life. Many a cheap holiday has saved much greater sums in doctors fees and hospital charges, and even funeral expenses.

Moreover, the pleasurable anticipation which goes with the laying of plans for a change of scene adds much to the value of a vacation.

Patience Rewarded

His Fisherman Reaps Something For His Patience

The proverbial patience of the fisherman is being rewarded. But whatever the size of his catch, he reaps an intangible but none the less valuable reward. His quiet taken him under the open sky. It keeps him in the haunts of fishing on and lying beside, or the haunts of the wild fishes haunted with the colors of the afterglow. It sends him back refreshed and better equipped, perhaps, to cope with the problems of everyday life

Co-operation

Co-operation offers the greatest potentialities as the basis of a free and progressive social order. Individual enterprise as the foundation of personal liberty is being destroyed by the growth of the great capitalist and government bureaucracies, the one subjecting all things to profit the other to authority. Co-operation is thus the best hope of building a new economy which sets civilization above riches, and humanity above government. Its objective is neither a narrow economic efficiency nor a rigid authoritarian system, but a wider, more abundant life for the masses of people. Co-operation respects no one. It requires the individual to surrender no more liberty than reasonable loyalty to the common enterprise demands. In return, he buttresses his economic independence, it enlarges his freedom to think and act in the light of his own conscience and intelligence, a right which it guarantees through its Principle and Neutrality in Politics and Religion. This Principal, rightly understood and applied, enables co-operators, while holding different opinions, to unite their forces, nationally and internationally, in order to promote their common interests and defend their rights.—An International Co-operative Day Statement issued by the International Co-operative Alliance.)

Alix Fair

With the weather man smiling, without roasting us all out, the 1939 Alix Fair got away to a fine start on Friday last, and managed to set a new high with a really first class collection of exhibits, an interesting sports program, and a large and enthusiastic crowd. The livestock show was well worth seeing, the ring attracting many appreciators, all the time, while the exhibits in the hall were both numerous and of high quality. Special mention should be made of certain public spirited exhibitors who showed not for the small cash money for the interest of the public: Peter Jamieson & Sons who showed one exhibit of Hampshire sheep; J. Liddell & Sons with Angus cattle and Eddie Wong whose very fine oil paintings in the hall drew very favorable comment. It is nice to know we have such talent in our midst. The local implement agents cooperated by demonstrating their wares and the bright lights from the Windscarger installed by Bobs. Whitsell, Jr., were appreciated by all evening attendants.

The ball games were all well attended. Stettler and Clive carrying off the honors in the hard ball, and the Bawlf team girls winning the softball tournament.

The odd horse race drew quite a crowd, the half mile being won by Tommy Knight's pony, with Les Eller up, and Peggy Wolferstan second.

Judges for the exhibits were Miss Dalkes of the Dept. of Agriculture, who judged the ladies work, Mr. R. Pattison, and Mr. John Weiss.

Mr. Dan Campbell, who needs no notes on "The Week in Edmonton", mentions that the Edmonton reception was probably the greatest in the whole Royal tour, singles out the "singing of the crows", on Portage Avenue, as an outstanding event in the celebration. We have changed the word "crows" to "crowds". But Mr. Campbell may be right after all, and, if so, we apologize for his absentia. We can imagine how sure it would be to mistake an Edmonton crowd for a flock of crows, especially if they were trying to sing, with Dan as a leader of the choir.

Voluntary Registration of Women

We have received a lengthy communication from Grace M. Ord, of Islington, Ont., on the above subject. The idea, briefly stated, is to utilize various provincial women's clubs to register women who are willing to serve their country in the event of war, as Red Cross, nurses' aiding, nursing, organizing, etc. One objective is to get a line on the number of experienced women in the various provinces and learn in what capacity they are willing to serve. When we hear more about the provincial set-up we will inform our readers on when and where to register.

Another question will be to find homes for refugee children and old people, thus relieving the Old Country of responsibility and burden of their care.

Economic Colonization

It must come somewhat as a surprise to prairie farmers and Western Canadians generally who have felt and still are feeling the impact of an economic and agricultural depression of great severity to find Eastern publications persistently harping upon the necessity of opening the gates of this country to more agricultural stock as a condition precedent to freer migration from European countries.

Before one be so gainsaying of the arguments of the protagonists of colonization that this country needs a greater population to help carry the burden of the cost of transportation and other facilities with which the wide open but sparsely settled spaces of the west have been provided at considerable expense but when it is suggested that the type of settler most needed is of some common supernatural or otherwise three should not be any room for a difference of opinion.

Better far as the west is concerned must necessarily be is the negative so long as the bulk of agricultural production in this country consists of commodities which must be sold in world markets at prices which are set by world competition.

Even in matters of economic or more common sense agriculture is highly developed as expert economists have found that 15 per cent of the population can easily supply the food requirements of the entire country. Here then is the problem of producing at a margin of profit going to be solved in a country in which more than 50 per cent of the population is engaged in agriculture and is forced to sell the bulk of its production with other producing countries by bringing in more agriculturists?

* * * *

All Occupied Now

Practically all of the arable land in Western Canada and some land which is not productive is now under tillage and there is even some suggestion on the part of economists that some of the acreage will have to be curtailed if the farmers already on the land are to be able to continue to make a living.

Those who are farming marginal lands cannot hope to make a profit if the bulk of their produce has to be sold in world competition and the bulk of the economic ills are to be borne by the farmers. Even if they are productive land must be sole there could seem to a few figures if they are to make their operations profitable and that means a power farming on comparatively wide scale which in turn means a comparatively sparse rural population over a wide stretch of country just so long as the bulk of production can not be disposed of in local markets.

What then is to become of the immigrant agriculturist? Is he to be expected to invest in living out of marginal lands which are only made unprofitable or he to be occupy good productive land which must be equipped with expensive machinery for large scale farming, involving the displacement of the present owners or occupants. Either alone would mean one of the present owners or occupants. And to what extent does the country benefit by the advent of the new farmer-settler?

When facts and the conditions under which agriculture has to be operated in this country are considered the question must be answered in the negative as long as the bulk of agricultural production is for export.

Under such conditions it would be a misfortune for the settler and for the country to be advised, the new settlers should be misled workers versed in the technical arts of converting some of the natural resources of the country into commodity useful to mankind. Other elements of this type under existing conditions, can be expected to be of economic value, even in the east and western states to the south of us they alone can be expected to assist the country towards the goal of a fairly balanced economy.

* * * *

The Bogeyed Type

As stated at the outset, more population is required to help carry the burden of taxation which has been found necessary to maintain the country's governmental operations and to finance the debt which has been incurred to provide the people with facilities and services.

But the type of settler needed is one who will be a consumer and not a producer of agricultural products than whatever the demand or need and enabling established farmers to dispose of a larger percentage of their commodities at home and a smaller proportion abroad.

The same applies to fit into the needs of the country, must aim be a producer but not a producer of agricultural commodities. Not only must he be a producer but he must be a diligent worker for the country cannot afford to pay too many contented laborers for the country's present industrial demand. One has only to read the reiet lists in the cities of the east to see that this is so.

If immigrants are to be allowed, the new settlers should be skilled workers versed in the technical arts of converting some of the natural resources of the country into commodity useful to mankind. Other elements of this type under existing conditions, can be expected to be of economic value, even in the east and western states to the south of us they alone can be expected to assist the country towards the goal of a fairly balanced economy.

Youth Training Plan

Establishing Young Men in Centres Connected With Aviation

Several provinces now have agreements with the Dominion in connection with the youth training plan and schedules of progress are being drafted. Attention is being given to establishing courses for young men in trades connected with aviation.

Some months ago Hon. Ian Mackenzie, defence minister and Hon. Norman Rogers labor minister, discussed the possibilities of training the youths for the airplane industry.

The large sum mentioned that over the three-year period of the plan a large proportion of the men might embrace the opportunity to engage with the R.C.A.F., while others would be absorbed by the civil aviation companies and the aircraft manufacturing industry generally.

Canada's aircraft industry flourishes in four provinces: Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba and British Columbia. At the same time prospects are for substantial increase in personnel of the R.C.A.F. in the next three years.

A doorway in a ruined building at Karnak, Egypt, is 60 feet high and 17 feet wide, and the double doors must have weighed 12 tons each.

Competitive Armaments

Civilization Cannot Stand Present Rising Pace Much Longer

We talk of another Great War destroying civilization. But how long can civilization sustain the present rising pace in competitive armaments? Sumner Slichter in the Atlantic Monthly of a criminal debacle observing on the brink of adventure, Smith daring to trot its toes in the mud, and the minister and Hon. Norman Rogers minor minister, discussed the possibilities of training youths for the airplane industry.

Take the case of Ireland. Since the year there was a large proportion of the men might embrace the opportunity to engage with the R.C.A.F., while others would be absorbed by the civil aviation companies and the aircraft manufacturing industry generally.

Sounds Like Good Advice

Young Men Should Be Active In Some Business Pursuit

Robert Bond, age 80, told the convention in West Ottawa that he had been fighting hard for a third party since he was 14. His advice to young men was to join a party and then help raise money to advance the good of their country. There are people who never go to church who find fault with the churches. They have a privilege to which they have no claim or right. And it is the same with the indifferent public who condemn both political parties, and only take a negative interest in the matters of public concern. —St. Catharines Standard.

Canadian Timber

British Government Decides That Canada Best Source Of Supply In War Time

The British government has decided that Canada is the best source of supply of timber should coal mine props in war time.

Geoffrey Lloyd, secretary for mines announced a comprehensive scheme for the production of "pit" timber supplies against the danger of enemy submarines cutting off supplies from overseas.

At present Britain spends £3,000 000 ($14,580,000) a year on imported pit props, mostly from Scandinavia and Baltic countries. The government's policy is to use Canada to get the bulk of the trade as war time.

It is understood comprehensive plans already have been made by Canada's timber companies to meet the new demand.

The wartime control scheme will have the object of maintaining production of coal at the highest level possible, and the special effort of the mines Prices will be set and suppliers distributed and of course the British-American cigarettes sell at a lower price in India than in the United States.

Money In Pigs

Pigs have created their way into second place of Canada's agricultural exports the value of bacon hog exports being exceeded only by wheat shipments. Last year pigs brought our farmers over $65,000,000 of which $20,000,000 came from abroad.

Wife Joins Hall Mark's Anything But Hard Boat It Through

It's been known for a long time that when Lord Beaverbrook gets down to a really much of a task the latter starts fighting hard to make the task the right.

Latest demonstration of this characteristic was given the British Home by the Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir Kingsley Wood in joining the Prime Minister and the Foreign Secretary on announcements this year would be the astonishing figures of $2,418,000,000.

That should be an eye-opener for every Hitler fellow.

In fairness they've been helped by Mr. Chamberlain as an orderly, irreverent and somewhat bewildered gentleman carrying an umbrella. But the elderly benevolent appearance has turned to forging his umbrella into the world's mightiest weapon.

Britain today is turning out as many warplanes as Germany. It will soon be turning out more than Germany and has the mightier fleet in battle array that history has seen upon the seas. The British in fact in the space of a few months Chamberlain by its new Inspector General of Training.

Premier Mussolini Has Ten-Year Plan To Divide Large Holdings

Premier Mussolini has announced a ten-year plan to break up large landed estates in Sicily and to subdivide them among peasant families in families living upon them.

The plan contemplates establishment of 100,000 peasant farms in an area of about 1,250,000 acres at a private public cost of $1,000,000,000 lire ($200,000,000). The large landowners are expected to cooperate voluntarily and receive compensation for their land.

The wealthiest Sicilian landlords are the Princes of Trabia, Prince Biscemi, and the Dukes of Terranova, Santo Stefano and Verdura. Mussolini's chief products are wheat and wine.

A Timely Warning

Reformers Should Remember Not To Go Beyond Their Depth

There has been an appalling toll of deaths by drowning already this summer and many of them are tragedies due to swimmers getting beyond their depth and strong swimmers losing their lives attempting rescues.

It is just as enjoyable swimming in water in which one can find a footing as in the deep water that the reformers is at a strong and expert swimmer should go beyond his depth.

The cruel offered good footing and with sweet-brown on the sled and with what strength remained in their arms Bertin urge Noel and Alan followed the dog over the river ice up the valley.

Turning in where at the other bank in the ice they found a broad, level bank into the timber.

Something must be done here and the panted Indian, shaking his hooded head. "The sun no Montagnais camp." We are out of dog food."

"No, there are no signs of dogs, no signs of well took at that."

"My pal white man, de Talking Bird!"

Standing beside the bushy trees throat rounded as he suspiciously sniffed the air while the he of his hands and both steady on Alan and Noel grazed in amazement at the penetrating log building, hooded figure with eyes which stood in the centre of the clearing that opened before them.

"White man on the Talking River!" Alan repeated, his curious eyes noting the tall form, the long white hair, the large wood-plastered chimney the huge platform racks evidently piled with supplies which were covered by canvas, the two piles of snowshoes and the toboggan sled stuck in the snow beside the door, and above by the ragged remnants of what had evidently been an enormous wood-pile in the autumn.

Dizzy from weakness Alan started for the cabin. Reaching the sick door he stood with his mittened hand and called out: "Hello! Hello there, inside!"

For answer the door slowly swung in and the two gathered close to the sick man's room like the blind drawn of an economic priest. Bleached behind the priest stood a bearded priest of a man whose bare-face eyes glittered hostility beneath a livid red scar that seemed to be burned on his forehead.

In all the wide north, starving men were not greeted in the fashion Alan Cameron's father even dazed by with anger as he met the cool stare that pushed him.

"You don't need that gun," he gasped. "We're starved out. Our dogs—last eye on the Old River. We trade at Fort George. A voyageur got there with the news and stopped every bit of fish and deer we had."

The threat slowly faded from the cold eyes and the gun went back in its holster. "Starved out, eh? Yet look fit."

"We were on our way to the Hudson's Bay Lake in the Montagnais country."

"Wal, you'd have been out of luck if you hadn't struck this place. There are no hunters on the Hunting Lakes this winter."

Alan and Noel exchanged perplexed glances.

"How, here," continued the priest, "I've got some caribou stew in the kettle that'll wipe that hungry look out of your eyes. Come in."

"My dog, here," said Alan, "you'll have to feed him, too."

"There's plenty of stew for you all. Unhitch him and bring him in."

Drooping his head between his hands Sergh as he threw off his collar and harness, Noel and Alan followed the priest into the cabin.

Dropping his head between his hands as he threw off his collar and harness, Noel and Alan followed the priest into the cabin.

"Drop your coats and mocassins here to dry," the priest said, as he pushed their heat, as the two starved men rushed in the appetizing odors emanating from a huge copper kettle, perched on a sheet-iron folding stove which stood at the side of the ship's plastered fireplace. The priest filled two aluminum cups and a pan from the kettle and handed one cup to Alan, spoon, now. It'll knock you out, if you bug it to your condition. I guess the dog can stand a panful."

The speaker placed a dish, cooled with a handful of snow, before the ravenous hungry, dropped some more into the rape and basted them to Alan and Noel.

Steady hove not all at once he warned as the two feverishly drank the nourishing and palatable broth.

We're here living or until the last week when there was of it, said Father Alan. I got two but they were ravenous—no strength in them."

"Father who?"

"He, white Arctic voiron."

That explained the missing coats for the catches and most of the door have moved east out of this country."

"That's why the Montagnais did not winter on the fishing Lakes added Alan.

Seated on a chair made of split spruce slabs, Alan from time to glances about the interior of the cabin while the big priest-trapper man offered Noel a plug of smoking tobacco and cut fillings for the huge pipe he held in his hand. The opposing walls were carefully chinked with lime plastered mud. Two small windows made of curious parchment through which the last rays of the setting sun were aided the lighting the room by a large candle set in a huge stick. On a wall a pair of caribou antlers held three rifles while from their bow irons hung two belts which carried a brace of revolvers. Built into a corner of the room was a double-deck bunk, mattressed with spruce boughs and covered with Hudson's Bay blankets and dressed caribou and bear skins. Near the bunk a shelf of spruce poles reach the ceiling on which were piled many roots and, at the end of the room, for the chimney was on the side of the cabin, was a small pantry-like affair in which were stored the supplies which were covered by canvas, the two piles of snowshoes and the toboggan sled stuck in the snow beside the door, and above by the ragged remnants of what had evidently been an enormous wood-pile in the autumn.

Dwarf Stars

Strange Phenomenon Is Discovered By New Telescope

Astronomers, by means of new telescopes, 10 dwarf stars, which are of extraordinary density and small. Some are thousands of times heavier than steel, were described in a conference of astrophysicists.

New facts about these strange objects were announced by Dr. O. P. Keiper, associate professor of astronomy, University of Chicago.

Dr. Keiper's findings in size from that of the earth down to the moon and from more than 150 000 to 200,000 times heavier than the earth.

Their gravitational pull is so immense that a man would weigh a ton on their surfaces.

Fight With Sharks

Three Men Had Narrow Escape In Fishing Boat Off Scotland

Three men had a narrow escape when a school of 50 basking sharks surrounded their boat and one of the monsters, 30 feet long, lifted the boat out of the water, off Pennover six miles from Stranraer, Wigtownshire, Scotland.

Hauled by water Hugh Cameron, the owner, clung to the wheel, and managed the boat back to an overhanging rock. Bringing to bed the sharks, the three men managed to reach land.

"We had not got far out when the Maggie (their motor-fishing boat) was surrounded by sharks—50 or so of them," Cameron said.

"Suddenly a fin appeared right in front of us, and I saw a shark rising to the surface underneath the boat. I could have touched it with my hand. I thought the shark would upset us, but propeller was struck by the shaft, and it was then that all of the sharks

Follows Strange Calling

Woman Keeps Spiders For The Government Through Whose Products

With notices as quick as the conveying of the 200 spiders she comes and goes, Miss Mary Pridhe keeps her 51st year recently on a border of the government threads upon by her charges.

Her handle Rogers followed swiftly the Dominion government's order to another, spooning the silk with brush and mimeograph.

It's the "spider lady's" job to ensure gossamer for insertion in the diaphragms of surveying telescopes. Her 55th year with the Kentish and Sussex plant in Hadlow, N.J., is completed and she was given a golden jubilee present by fellow employees and the company's board of directors.

Miss Pridhe is proud of her work, which includes the acquisition of the spiders themselves. Some are under the threat as fast they spin it. And inserting the filament in the diaphragms needs a fine hand of the "stick" to determine who wedge their flying hats Fun-filled days

The oldest woman pilot recorded is Edith Clark, 61, of Portsville, Cal.

Women Aviators

Nearly Twice As Numerous In U.S. As They Were Two Or Three Years Ago

Women aviators—as are at 61 and as young as 16—are nearly twice as numerous in the United States as they were 3½ years ago.

The number holding licenses has increased from 648 to 781 since May, 1937. In addition there are 28 girl flyers in Hawaii, Puerto Rico and Alaska. The women by big and little shops. Three are licensed to solo gliders.

Most of them fly for fun, records at the Civil Aeronautics Authority say.

Although there are no women airline pilots at present, 70 have flown the 200 solo hours required for a commercial transport license, and another 27 hold the 50-hour limited commercial license which allow them to fly passengers.

Changes Eating Habits

English People Gradually Dropping Practice Of Large Meal Monday

P. A. Francis of Raleigh, near London, arrived at Quebec in the liner Empress of Australia with the word that the Mother Country's eating habit is away from the Sir-Rosenfeld roast beef Mr Francis was on route to Cleveland to represent the British Government at the world poultry congress.

"In the Old Country we are turning more and more to light meals, cereals, fruit and greens," he told reporters. "Gradually the population is dropping the practice of large daily meat meals."

He explained that no one seems to eat heavily when he has to get up early the day at a desk or in a factory. Mr Francis said the change has also stimulated an improved market for imported poultry Canada figures largely in the supply, but other markets are expanded.

England imports 60 per cent. of the eggs consumed and 80 per cent. of the poultry, he said. Canada's exports to England are the subject of the House of Commons. Last Imperial meet was in 1926.

Prince Edward Island, originator of Canadian fur farming-breeding, now ranks fourth among the nine Canadian provinces in this respect.

Parliament members are liable to imprisonment in the clock tower at the order of the speaker for persistent disregard of the sittings of the House of Commons. Last imprisonment was in 1836.

Canadian Wheat Board

In last week's issue we printed an advertisement of the Canadian Wheat Board respecting delivery quota limits on deliveries to the Board. Every farmer and land owner should read these instructions carefully so that all risk of offending the Act will be avoided.

It will be noted that every person who sells wheat to the Board in excess of 5,000 bushels and in breach of the regulations set out in the advertisements is guilty of an offence and punishable on summary conviction by fine or imprisonment. If the agreed wish of the Wheat Board that wide publication and understanding of these regulations will prevent any infringement of the law and that all producers will co-operate to this end. The Board will have inspectors closely observing all the elevators and farms to assist in administration of the Act.

Any farmer or other person entitled under the Act to wheat grown on a farm who is in doubt regarding his position is invited to write to the Board submitting full details regarding his case.

NOTE AND COMMENT

The Central Mortgage Bank is swinging into action. As it is on a voluntary basis, Alberta need not stay out if he wishes, but they are allowing him two years to think it over. All other provinces are falling into line and will take advantage of its provisions to lower mortgage rates, and some seem very glad to do so and are hoping new adjustment will be a great advantage to those in debt.

We are somewhat puzzled at hearing nothing about a candidate being selected by the Lacombe constituency committee. The town of Lacombe has the matter practically in its own hands, but don't seem to be doing much about it. It is understood the C. C. F. party is determined to run a candidate of its own, so will hope of straight fight with the M.C. party is gone. But there is still a fighting chance, as the C.C.F. party was never formidable in this constituency and is likely to lose its deposit.

The writer of "Work in Education" quotes Fallows as saying, after referring to a belated railway, "It is much to the best penny, so that our children will not have to pay interest on borrowed money". Very good. But if Mr. Fallows is returned at the next election Alberta may have to pay interest on defaulted interest, which already amounts to $11,000,000.

While passing out words of commendation and praise to those who helped to make the Fair a success, we would also mention the splendid action of the Society's Secretary, Mr. Robt. Whitfield. In addition to being a glutton for work, he conspires himself secretary of all the technical details of inestimable value to society and tends to relieve the president of all worry. Events move forward smoothly and without friction. Alix Fair is fortunate in having such an able manager.

Here's the latest: Japanese countries have taken to slapping Germans now and are polite to Britons. The turn is events was caused by the Germans signing a non-aggression pact with Russia.

The Motorist's Prayer

Three passing the Bell's Church! Pastor invited to Paul preach in Newton Hall ends pleased The Minister's Prayer. A bell should be tacked to a sign to post within the church yard at the entrance to the Garden of Repose. This was copied from the Manchester Guardian and the author's name known.

The beauty of the prayer is greatly enhanced if it be seen in the original form, here given:

Grant me a steady hand and watchful eye
That no man shall be hurt when I pass by;
Thou guard life I pray no act of mine
May take away or mar that gift of Thine.
Shelter those near and dear, who lean on me
Nor soon, through love of speed,
The beauties of the world, that as I may
With joy and courtesy go on my way.

Ample evidence of appreciation was shown by the many envelope-size regrets taken from the rack inside the church door.

Lehmann and Torstein Wallhovd.

Mrs. H. Gunn played the wedding march and during the signing of the register sang "O Promise Me".

After the ceremony, a reception was held for the bride at the bride's home, 156 guests being present. The bride's table was laid in lace and linen and centered by two 3 tiered wedding cakes. The bride's table was by guests were Misses Margaret Olsen and Esther Magnussen, of Camrose

ALIX, ALBERTA, FRIDAY, SEPT. 1, [illegible]

Week in Edmonton

Edmonton, August 28—Completion of hard surfacing operations on the highway between Edmonton and the United States border was announced by W. A. Fallow by radio Thursday last. "The highway is finished," he said. "There are no detours, and it is paid for to the last penny, so that our children a will not have to pay interest on borrowed money."

Earlier in the week, Mr. Fallow stated that construction crews were being sent to the northern highway between Slave Lake and Grimshaw in order to do certain improvements. A great deal of tonnage is ready to move over the road, and it has been stated expressly that the road must be able to stand up to the job. Crews were sent up accordingly.

Meanwhile, Edmonton awaits word from Ottawa as to whether a matching sum of $25,000 will be forthcoming to complete work on the Edmonton-Hinton Bench section of the Jasper Highway. The province, having savings on hand due to the use of modern machinery, is anxious to have this part completed, and is placing the savings at the disposal of the new road requirements.

Hungarian partridge may be shot south of the North Saskatchewan river from October 2 to November 30 inclusive. The bag limit is 180 birds for the season. Ducks and geese may be shot from September 7 to November 7 inclusive north of the Clearwater and Athabasca rivers and from September 15 to November 15 between those rivers and Red Deer (north of that the season extends from September 20 to November 30.

Construction of a new federal government building opposite the Court House in Edmonton will commence late this fall, it is reported. The building is estimated to cost $40,000. Construction will take place on land which the federal government purchased from the civic government for $14,000.

Edmonton welcomed two distinguished sons of Nova Scotia here Monday, when Premier Angus MacDonald and Hon. C. D. Howe visited the Capital City. Guests of the commerce body and the Maritimes Association, both visitors attended luncheon in the Macdonald hotel at which Archbishop MacDonald, himself a Nova Scotian, Premier Aberhart and Hon. Leolen Maynard attended.

Work will shortly commence on a $60,000 extension to University Hospital. Intended for obstetrical work, the new addition is made possible by a legislature appropriation passed at the last session. Seven additional maternity wards, with air conditioning and other modern features, are included in the project.

Termination of Transportation contracts with truckers who have been handling Imperial Oil products from Turner Valley was made necessary by provisions of the federal transport act, according to S. R. Stevens, Edmonton divisional manager of the oil company. "With full knowledge of the facts, we believe the truckers will realize that both the cause and remedy rest with parliament," said Mr. Stevens. Many truckers are being thrown out of business, it is feared.

Probably due to the danger of war in Europe, activity in oil circles is noted here. Coincident with the completion of an aerial survey for oil drilling purposes in the north J. L. Irwin of the Lands and Mines department said it is likely that more major oil fields will be discovered in the province. With the vexed question of transportation removed, drilling will increase not only in the Turner Valley, but in many other parts of the province.

Edmonton's welcome to Their Majesties the King and Queen on the occasion of the Royal visit has been hailed as probably the greatest in the whole tour by an official commentator attached to the royal entourage. The Portage Avenue spectacle and the massed singing of the crowds were lauded as incomparable. It was said that "God Save The King" has probably never been sung as it was outside the Macdonald hotel, and probably never will be again.

Elimination of sleeping sickness in horses of the province by means of vaccine treatment has caused satisfaction among Department of Agriculture officials, who foresee in early treatment of the host safeguard against the repetition of the epidemic which decimated Alberta's [illegible] population last year. After a tour of Northern Alberta during which he attended 17 colt shows, Hardy R. Slater, secretary of the Alberta Percheron Club, said horses had not looked better in years. Sleeping sickness forced cancellation of all colt shows last year.

WEDDING

STONE—RUSSELL

Mr. Albert Stone, of Pamola, was united in marriage to Miss Grace Russell, of Alix, on Wednesday afternoon, at the Free Methodist parsonage, by Rev. C. F. Cowan. Only members of the immediate family were invited.

The bride's sister, Mrs. C. F. Martin, and her husband signed the register.

Enlisting at Alix

Alix is feeling the urge for war. Our citizens are peaceful, but they are stirred with indignation at the news coming from Europe—at the sinking of passenger ships without warning, the dropping of bombs on defenseless towns, the use of poison gas, even against children—and all the other horrors peculiar to German ideas of war. These are calling to our men and they are answering the call. In our town, sam-ong the first to answer the call to the colors, was Robt. Whitfield, of the 15th R.C.E.'s, Calgary; Pete Clark, Edmonton Panthers, formerly an employee at Holling's Garage; Major R. W. Cormack. The above mentioned will go overseas. There are several others who are preparing to enlist, but do not want their names published till they are ready to go.

Mr. Whitfield leaves on expiration of leave of absence. Mr. Clark has already gone. Major Cormack goes today. With them goes the good wishes of whole community. They are popular citizens and well-known throughout the district, and are of a class that will sustain the prestige of British citizen wherever they go.

Life Begins At Forty

Do you know that if you are a resident of Canada or the United States you get your best years of life absolutely free? That is to say, at the age of 1930 you had just as many years left to live as you had at the end of 1929!

The famous author, starting statement appears in a recent issue of Toronto Saturday Night as an editorial prelude to an article by H. Clark Noble M.A. M.B. M.R.S.I.P. Medical Referee of the National Life Insurance Company with headquarters in Toronto.

The article in question deals with the extraordinary advances made by medical science in the past few years, showing such a remarkable tendency, then recently that medical science has added, during the twenty years of life, to give us a decidence to humanity on this continent another full year of life expectation.

The main movement of founded upon unquestioned statistical data and if the statistics have not been manufactured, on statistics compiled with equal care by experts in the various states of specialism. For instance, we mentioned to see whether this means provided discoveries in the realm of medical science continue to advance at the present rate of progress. Dr. Noble says that in three decades, that the time is rapidly approaching when human life can be extended indefinitely. Certainly if the progress of the past half century may be taken as a criterion, and we are reminded, is it to be mentioned that at the end of every year hereafter, the life span is to be extended another full year." If so it can only be translated as extension of life.

On the other hand, does it mean that the saturation point to medical progress has been reached, and that hereafter there will be a slowing down in the life-saving process through new discoveries in the field of medical science and their application to disease and death? Apparently not. If Dr. Clark Noble in his prophetic moments is correct, for he concludes his article with the statement that "we are confronted with the astounding statistics on the progress of the past few years with the astounding fact that many more than the future with confidence that our span of life will be still further increased as years go by."

Human Measure Of Progress

In his analytical article covering the increase in longevity on this continent in the past twenty years, Dr. Clark Noble states that "This increase amounts to approximately nine years in the case of male lives and 12 years in female lives, representing 45 and 60 per cent. respectively. The latter figure is 61% in the former instance, and from 58 years to 69 in the latter. The increase has been fairly gradual until the past 12 months when the rate showed the enormous increase of one full year.

Prior to 1888 some authorities on the subject have been wont to point out that increases in longevity have been due largely to the savings which have been effected in infant mortality as a result of improved sanitation conditions and the preventive work of public health agencies. They pointed to the enormous increases in recent years in the death rates attributable to diseases of the elderly and more particularly cancer and heart disease. Such diseases, they claimed, were more or less prevalent then they used to be and give such reasons as fall at high tension in the present age as causes.

While that is undoubtedly true to some extent, it is because more people to-day are living to an older age than heretofore, and because of the greater percentage of the population to-day has reached the age where they become susceptible to such diseases. This, at any rate, is the conclusion reached by Dr Clark Noble, explaining his theory in the following words:

"During the 20 years prior to 1926, the decrease in the death rate among white males amounts to, roughly, 40 per cent., falling between the ages of 15 to 44 years of age. The decrease in the case of white females was 40 per cent. at the same age period, but in greater in the lower age brackets with the result that the general population is growing and, therefore, we observe an apparent increase in the number of deaths from diseases of middle life and old age, particularly death rate from the diseases of the heart arteries and kidneys."

Hope For The Elderly

If these percentages are acceptable, and there appears to be no reason why they should not be regarded as correct, they demonstrate very clearly the value and saving of life in the early years has been tremendous, on the other hand the more moderate saving in the later years of the human life span warrants Dr. Noble's use of the term "approved" when applied to the increase in the death toll taken by diseases of the elderly.

But even here it should be noted, there has been a considerable if somewhat lagging among the elderly as a result of medical research and discoveries, the recent discovery of the value of pneumonia being one of the latest.

So much has been done to increase the life expectancy of the infant and the young child, that it is reasonable to suppose that any further conservation of the lives which may ensue as the near future will increase the life expectancy of those who have reached middle age and beyond, and it is probable that Life begins at Forty will become literally a truism.

What Will the Harvest Be?

"Whom the gods would destroy they first make mad." Hitler has plunged Europe into another huge "purge", but this time he has to fight instead of conquering by lying and deception. The German Chancellor has been described as an egomaniac, but it takes more than one such to make a war. If Hitler had been the only one they would have kicked him up long ago. Conditions in Germany were ripe for the production of egomaniacs, because they were fed on only one kind of mental food—were put on a diet so to speak. With the suppression of free speech, and hearing only "their master's voice", many otherwise sensible Germans were lead to believe that they were a greatly persecuted people and soon began indulging in self-pity, and began to hate their "oppressors". One of the lessons the Germans are going to learn in this war is that Hitlerism is their greatest enemy—a source of weakness rather than strength. Lies and hoodwink and deception is just as despicable in a nation as it is in an individual, and always bears bitter fruit.

If nations had any sense, they would devote their wars by sending their oldest men into the trenches. They would not risk the lives of the young men except in the last extremity, and if it were, they would have to use regiments of lads singing "Tipperary" on their way to the slaughter-house. But the speciality of regiment of octogenar ians bobbling in the front waving their walking sticks and piping up to the tune of "We'll never come back no more, we'll never come back no more"—wouldn't we cheer that thing sentimentally? I should. Radio broadcast by George Bernard Shaw.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H.G.L. Strange, Director "The Crop Testing Plan

Crop Testing Plan meetings, recently held at 96 different points throughout the province, reveal that farmers are eagerly seeking advice about the variety of wheat to sow.

"Should we grow Thatcher, Ranchero, Reward or Marquis", they ask, "and are these rust-resistant sorts suited to our conditions?"

The advice given by the plant breeders was:—"Use only a rust-resistant variety in the districts of Manitoba and Saskatchewan where rust is a serious menace, either Thatcher, Renown, Apex or Regent will be found to be satisfactory. Naturally one of these varieties will eventually be found the more suitable than the others in certain districts, but it will take several years of field testing by farmers themselves before this can accurately be determined."

In Alberta and parts of Western Saskatchewan, ordinarily east of the rust area, a farmer is justified in his desire, for variation, the satisfaction thought, that he should be able to be free to consult with his Provincial Department of Agriculture or with his University.

One other piece of advice was given. If a farmer decides to sow a rust-resistant variety he should certainly purchase some new seed each year for the reason that each year these new varieties are being improved by plant breeders and seed growers.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Substance" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon at all Christian Science Churches on Sunday. The Golden Text is: John 6:27 "Labour not for the meat that perisheth but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of man shall give unto you: for him hath God the Father sealed." (Matt. 4:4).

Among the citations are passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by "The Psalmist prayed fervently and trust through wise and unselfish motives, shall be answered and satisfactorily, and the result will be spiritual growth."

The long drouth period came to an end on Sunday evening, Sept. 10, when rain fell during the night and continued on Monday, giving the thirsty soil a drenching it was badly in need of. Since the 1st of July, up to last Sunday, less than 2 inches of rain has fallen, and this during a period of weather when the thermometer ran its color up to 85 and 90 degrees day after day. Under such conditions our farmers were fortunate indeed to harvest such a fair crop as they did. Had it not been for the good rains in June we would have had no crops at all. This rain may delay threshing, but few will complain.

Honoring The Dead

In the minds of some people cemeteries may be regarded as a somewhat gruesome topic to write about or talk about, but it should not be and there is no reason why burial grounds should be allowed to present an appearance that naturally lends an atmosphere of gruesomeness to any thought or discussion of them.

Unfortunately as one travels up and down the length and breadth of the country far too often there breaks upon the view of the passerby the sight of a cemetery in a condition that would not be tolerated were it the site of the abode of the living.

One sees perhaps on a bleak wind raked hillside an unkempt parcel of ground riddled with weeds and dotted with leaning, cracked stained and weathered headstones of wood stone or marble interlaced with strong tenacious weeds which are belied by the surrounding pitiable scene of neglect and disorder.

Or maybe the home of the dead is located in a low lying spot of waste land. Perhaps these scenes are surrounded by a fence of rotting posts which are in a poor support in a few strands of trailing and broken wire. Here and there is to be seen a miserable and unwatered apology of a tree with its stature of straggling weeds and straggling flowering plants or old flowers which have long since given up the ghost.

Such pictures are there and a sore blot on the landscape. Fortunately they do not represent the great majority of the burial ground in the prairie provinces but there are still too many of them and they are not all spotted condoned by the rural districts. There are cemeteries to be found in the towns and even in some of the cities which are not a credit to the communities who suffer them.

* * * *

Some Homely Spots

On the contrary there are to be found in many of the towns and villages and along the country roads burial grounds which are a delight to the beholder and which diffuse that atmosphere of solemn peace and rest which properly belongs to the purpose for which such areas have been set aside and dedicated.

Where the grounds for the interment of the departed are well laid out and well maintained it will usually be found that either they are privately owned or if a municipal enterprise they have been placed under the charge of a committee of citizens who have sufficient respect for their duties and pride in their responsibilities to make of them a sacred trust and undertaking.

And where the best results have been achieved it will usually be found that custodianship has been vested in a committee not of the local council but of citizens representative of a number of community organizations men and women who are conservative who can scarcely find time to devote to the work and who can and do take a genuine and even a zealous interest in the undertaking.

Some of the most beautiful cemeteries in the country are entirely the result of voluntary community effort directed to committees of the type mentioned. The work is not done in a haphazard or spasmodic manner. Rather it is a labor of love. Members of the committee in charge make frequent visits to the last resting ground and when there is work to be done whether it be new plantings repairs or simple maintenance, a working bee is organized and the work is done without fuss or feathers.

Expenditure Necessary

Untold and financial conditions of course make it impossible to reproduce in many of the Western Canada cemeteries such as the famous one in Los Angeles where large sums of money have been spent on buildings, sculptures lighting effects and music in a setting of unparalleled beauty but the unsurpassed and unsurpassable beauty but the unsurpassed and unsurpassable beauty but the unsurpassed and unsurpassable

The Problem Of The Metis

It is not surprising that the Half-Breeds or Metis of Saskatchewan and Alberta have become a problem to the Indian Department of Ottawa, according to a statement made by Dr. Scott, Superintendent of Education, in the course of the annual meeting of the Canadian Association on Indian Affairs, held in Toronto on December 1st. Dr. Scott is reported to have said that the Half-Breeds have become a problem because they have no reserves, as have the Indians of Ontario and Alberta.

For the Metis there is a reserve problem, as well as that of a more acute character, that of the future of the young generation, the unemployment problem in the cities and towns and the question of the treatment of the destitute and the aged.

These matters are regarded now as only a few of the problems which the Dominion Government, and the provincial governments, have to solve. Besides the Federal provincial, and municipal governments have shown a disposition to wash their hands of the half-breed population. They are the unwanted children who have been treated as such.

From the first days of settlement of the country the federal government has assumed full administrative responsibility for the Indian inhabitants of the country. All those who have come into the country since the days when the plains were solely occupied by the Indians the breed and the pioneers, have assumed to be governed by the principles of government which they found existing, and which were established as a result of bitter struggles, when the Indians, through their chiefs, fought for the establishment of the federal and provincial governments, partly under the treaties, and partly under the guardianship of the Crown. The duty of the Government is to be the guardian of the distressed in partnership with the municipalities, as in other cases and some areas without municipal assistance.

Country Dwellers.

The great majority of the half-breeds reside in the rural areas. In the first place because by nature they are not suited to urban existence, and for the second place because they have inherited the Indians love of the land. They are not under the same abnormal conditions that have developed in the cities and towns. They

Union of U.S. and Great Britain

New River. A man of ideas and action is Charles Henry Davis, summer resident of Bass River, Cape Cod, and Winter resident of New York, Philadelphia and Boston.

Now Mr. Davis is promoting the idea of World Unity beginning with a union of the United States and Great Britain under one flag. If the two great English speaking nations joined hands under one flag, Mr. Davis believes it would set an example which other nations would quickly follow, leading inevitably to a union of all nations of the world and to universal peace.

As a means of achieving his dream of a United States of the World, Mr. Davis proposes that the government of this country "shall invite the British Empire to jointly and together establish and maintain 'Peace on Earth, Good Will Towards Man' by creating a World Peace Commission to determine the wording of the United World Peace Empire Magna Carta under which world peace shall be attained".

WHAT THEY ARE SAYING

London Daily Mail — "The immense momentum of the forces we are gathering will not be stayed by any offer of peace which leaves Hitler in power and Poland in chains."

C.C.F. Party — Canada's assistance to Great Britan and her allies in the war against Nazi Germany should be limited to immediate aid

J. S. Woodsworth (C. C. F. leader): "I am opposed to Canada engaging in war".

Tim Buck:—Wants a world conference.

R. J. Manion:—"I declare my complete agreement with Sir Wilfrid Laurier's declaration that when Britain is at war Canada is at war".

R. J. Manion:— "Let us remember that if the democracies fail Canada is the richest prize among the nations of the world".

Message Tells Reich Starving

Port Colborne, Ont. Sept. 11. —Miss Theo Mercier, cook on a Great Lakes freighter in port here Sunday, steamed the stamp from a letter she had received from a friend in Germany, at the suggestion of friends here that it would make a good souvenir. On the reverse side, she said, were the words "We are starving".

Identical message were reported to have been discovered by a Hamilton postal patron and a Brantford stamp collector.

—o—

An unidentified announcer, speaking in German, some where in Germany, said the station's mission would be to reveal the truth about Hitler's regime and furnish hidden details about the war. The message will be for the German people. The broadcast was picked up in Switzerland.

Everywhere people are buying groceries and stocking up on food. There is no excuse for this. There is a surplus of these commodities. The rush to buy only results in boosting prices.

Where Art Thou?

Towns have a reputation, and are commonly known as live towns or dead towns. Live towns may have the same population and wealth, but one of them may have an elemental drive action in it which its rival lacks. What constitutes this drive? It consists first in a willingness to work for the benefit of the community. If the people of a town won't organize and get behind their leaders, there is no practical sense in full blood. In a live town, people are constantly looking out for chances to get new trade, obtain new industries, to encourage the industries they have to expand, and to maintain active organizations that provide home town benefits. Any town can become known as a live town if the people are active and compatible.—Canada Recorder.

There is some talk of sugar shortage, but the manufacturer disclaim all responsibility for this. They say that there are thousands of tons of sugar on hand for distribution. They intimate that if there is any shortage or any withholding, the responsibility is not theirs. If this is true the guilt lies with wholesalers or retailers, and we do not think it is with the latter. The retailers are in business to sell and make a quick turnover.

The recent wet spell has brought complaints about the condition of the Alix-Lacombe road. Motorists tell us the gravel is fast disappearing from the surface, with the result that holes and depressions are forming. After a wet spell it becomes increasingly difficult to manage a car, and the accident risk becomes greater with delay in making needed repairs. The Alix-Mirror road is said to be in an even worse condition.

Centralization v. Decentralization

What — not for Canada greater centralization of government than already exists or a larger measure of decentralization of administration."

The foregoing question is one which is occupying a good deal of attention in the minds of the people of this country. It is a question which has a great many facts and one in which there is room for a great deal of honest difference of opinion one of the reasons why it is assuming a good deal of prominence

It is also a question about which there is a good deal of loose thinking and consequently a loose talking. It is a problem, however, which should, and must, be faced squarely and about which no snap judgment should be rendered in the popular mind, since the whole future destiny of the country depends upon the answer.

In this country there are two schools of thought representing divergent viewpoints and they are represented both in Eastern and Western Canada, with the general trend of thought in the former so expressed in public print instinct to support more centralization of power in Ottawa.

There are those who contend that Canada, with its federal powers, must, its nine provincial governments, its multiplicity of rural and urban municipalities and numerous minor local autocracies with their satellite boards and commissioners is very much overgoverned for a country with a population of about eleven millions to support them and that the remedy is thought that if some of these governmental groups were abolished or curtailed in number with their jurisdiction wholly or partially transferred to the remaining governmental entities, it would result in better government at less cost. They argue, doubtless with some justification, that fewer governments at the field with power to enact legislation would result in less overlapping greater efficiency and greater economy and would, therefore, help to relieve the taxpayers of some of the burden of which they now complain.

o o o o

Decentralization Argument

On the other hand the advocates of continuance of the status quo or even an extension of decentralization maintain also perhaps not without some justification, that greater centralization of authority would result in the building up of a bureaucracy which might in the course of time, become dictatorial in its attitude towards the people and supervisory of the local people, that long range governance by remote control is impractical in a country of such vast geographic expanse and wide range of different economic conditions as Canada becomes of the difficulty if not impossibility of central government catering to local requirements and of taking into consideration local conditions and that in short, it is undesirable because any curtailment of local self government, constitutes a weakening of the democratic form of government, on the ground that local self government is the keystone to the arch of democracy.

Insofar as Western Canada is concerned, opponents of greater centralization of government further contend that if a greater measure of authority were vested in Ottawa, it would tend to militate against the interests of the west just so long as representation in the federal parliament and the voting power of the people in the east is greater than that of the west.

If the premiers of both schools of thought can be accepted as fundamental and factual the sense then boils itself down to this Do the people of this country seek more efficient and more economical but perhaps less considerate government or are they willing to pay the price for a full measure of freedom and of close access to those who represent them, together with the greater responsibility to these demands and requests which naturally goes with accessibility "

o o o o

United Canada Again

Then, of course there is the question of Canadian unity of thought and purpose—a question which looms prominently at a time when dictator nations create a threat to the continued existence of the democracies.

This, too, is a very important phase of the problem of centralization versus decentralized administration and one which cannot be overlooked when this question is under review It is no home to be interested in as well as the national and local conditions which affect the present day and probably the future welfare of Canada.

What the concrete outcome of the discussions of this highly important and difficult problem will be, it is impossible to predict at this stage That there will be some measure of realignment of authority and jurisdiction is to be expected. Perhaps some middle course will be found which will result in greater economy and efficiency throughout the entire system of government without loss of any of the individual liberties and privileges of the necessities which the people of this country are now enjoying.

The question is one which the people of the country must ultimately determine for themselves and in view of its great importance it predicates the exercise of much care and thought if the ultimate aim is to be given and the solution most beneficial to the people of the country as a whole is to be found and applied.

An Interesting Test

Moose Men Tested To Lose Shooting Instinct When Hunting

Use person in seven has defective hearing A preliminary analysis of more than three-quarters of a million individual tests by the Bell Telephone Laboratories revealed

Hearing hardness runs acute with age And men tend to become hard of hearing sooner than women the Bell Telephone Laboratories report

The higher tones are lost first but those with low tones are affected to a certain extent One person in twenty in the United States suffers from appreciable hearing loss in 12 Such deficiency unreasonable difficult to follow

The new sense may cause no difference between some ladies at a morning and those taken at night Laboratory is not sure it is the surprise of this fact, he says it undesire fatigue does not dull hearing

Hearing hardness is the more rather, the case in New York and San Francisco

During the test a person stems with a telephone receiver in ears, which is connected to a source of pitches that grow fainter until the point is reached where the listener can no longer hear them

Such listener makes a record of this hearing by writing down the sounds a specially prepared form An hi standard adopted by a church as the form that indicates age-group not and race and runs it through a machine that automatically photographs it

Lisbon Tutors For Stroll Chinese Canary Will Not Sing

"It is an unexplainable but undeniable fact that the Chinese canary is entirely different in every respect of the breed refuses to sing unless taken for his evening stroll" declares Lisbon's Mr Harris former Lisbon Times correspondent. In the public square of Peking you can see every afternoon and evening, a number of men, mostly of good condition, walking their canaries on their shoulders

Mr Harris thought that the fact that the cages are covered and the bird unable to enjoy the scene prompted the canary interest in the songster, but no. Perhaps it is the movement of the cage on the owner's walk, or gratitude for the trouble he is taking Whatever the reason, the fact remains that the promenade will repay his master in melody at home."

Neither is the basis of fact for the assumption that drowning persons salvage their three times. GEORGES MAREN

"I'll need plenty of tea, tobacco and sugar to trade for dogs with the Huskies," said Alan, wondering.

"I'll give you plenty of money, but you mustn't show it at Port George They'd want to know where you got it. And I don't want them to know this summer that you've met me."

"But what good will that do?" demanded Alan, impatiently. "Every one in the north knows Sandy Mac-Tavish's daughter Christmas if they isn't born in November." Alan's face reddened under the sunburn and the degree of the flush clamped hard on the desolate valley, the past was made The rain-soaked hands of the blood giant with the gauntlet-covered, and the years in whose veins ran the blood of wanderers of the wide north met in a flash of fire which burned a friendship that was to take them far on a strange quest

One gray April day, two weeks later, Alan and Nicol reached the mouth of the open river and saw in the gauntlet-covered, and the years giving buildings of the Revillon Freres and the Northern Trading Company and, below them, the old Hudson's Bay post of Fort George

"Glen the old Scotch Sandy!" cried Alan to the dog who labored in the wet nose sticking above his head as he swam behind the sled. Nicol had run over at the old company and Sandy MacTavish, Factor

Tired and stiff from the long race against the spring break-up, the boys followed the high bank of the river, running with broken trail ice, the sticky snow weighing down their chest like lead.

As they approached the shore landings of the Company Alan's eyes waited for them at the next landing. Then, as he saw the familiar challenge the approach of the strange dog the deep throat growling with menacing fangs, Hough dashed for the first buttons, ears flat, hair stiff on neck and back.

They were close in to the log bank boarding when Alan called to Nicol. "Hold up and feed them, Nicol, while I get hold of Hough. He has licked ten of them but summer when the whole team jumped on him."

Swinging a paddle, Nicol drove the small-town from the dogs, and Alan leaped into the excited Hough to an upright and succeeded in getting his collar with from the boat. Then, blinking Hough to the sled, they went over to the big, frame trade-house of the Hudson's Bay Company.

"Hell, upon my soul it is Alan!" Alan Cameron and Noel! What's bringing you two lads to the coast in April?" exclaimed the agreeable Scotchman behind the cloth counter of the trade-room.

"Hello, Sandy! You haven't grown a day older since I saw you last!" Alan laughed Alan as the surprised clerk gripped their hands, searching them with red burned faces for signs of starvation that drive men to do the foul deeds in early spring

"Are you hungry? Where come from the headwaters in Where days That's why, you look like ravens in fly time"

"Hold on! Let us get our trap lines there

"Is a long, rough road Noel He got in one of his moods

"Oh the Wolverine eh" And you came down on the river before your grub gave out" Did you bring much fur 'with' added the always suspicious clerk of the post

"Not much but next year I've got some black muskrat and fox that'll make your mouth water Run out What's the news from out there" asked Sandy, eagerly, trying to learn what the Indians of John Hudson had told of Kant Alan

Aye, and there a plenty of news.

Alan and Noel, in Devonshire tache on his cheek round face appreciated Alan with extended hand.

Without comment on the remark, Alan went to the counter and began to trade. "The chief wants to see you at once, Mr. Cameron," said the Indian runner. "He has left the headwaters for Hudson's Bay."

Alan's back stiffened The blood seemed to him for a moment. Then, at the remark "How d'you know what I'll do, Nevard?" he replied.

What — you're Cameron?" demanded the elder of the strangers, a powerfully built man of forty with pale blue eyes, closely set beneath bushy, sandy brows. "I'm Nevard Mr-Cook's mate had deserted him at the coast with the dogs and supplies they had been sent for

Well, continued McNab, his job was to take Alan Nevard to the Indiana took his dogs and money and left him to shift for himself. Now he was stranded in three same with what he you had left. Alan Cameron! Fancy taking one's daughter into that wild bush!

Alan listened to the other's announcement with an expression of well-feigned surprise on his fine features. So, after all, McCord had been deserted by his men as he had feared Pretty tough on a girl" he agreed "But I hope to trade in there without help"

"He can't. He'll be shoving up down here with the wheel, trying to hire it "

The cloud-masked hull of April sun was lifted in the drifting floes of the bay when Alan opened the door of the cabin which formed the two trade-house a mile above the post of the Hudson's Bay Company

"Jim-gosh! Alan Cameron!" What on you here do for at April?" cried a tall, lean, bearded man, rising from a huge stove in the middle of the room "Why, you're grinning! Put the shoulders "Alin, Neel! What happen to you from the?"

"We had bad luck, Pierre," replied Alan. "A wolverene got to our dogs and killed half, then a blizzard try so we struck for the coast"

Pierre Lemoine suddenly remembered he resumed the less faces of the two men who had come in over the ice. "Where's your dogs?" he asked

"But you had enough to get home with—you did not starve?"

Alan thought of the two men and the dog who had barely reached Mc-Cord's cabin in the snowwood "We not come Indians"

"Then you had you sled hung suppose to trade for dogs with the Indians"

Swinging a paddle, Noel drove the small-town from the dogs, and Alan leaped into the excited Hough to an upright and succeeded in getting his collar with from the boat. Then, blinking Hough to the sled, they went over to the big, frame trade-house of the Hudson's Bay Company.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Reality" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all the Christian Science Churches on Sunday, The Golden Text is: "Be still, and know that I am God." (Psalms 46:10). One of the Scriptural citations is the following: "Blessed is the man that is at the same hour, in the which Jesus said unto him, They seek: and, behold Israel hath erred and his whole house." (Jeremiah 6:20). One of the authoritative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," is: "As the mythology of pagan Rome has yielded us a more spiritual idea of Deity, so will our material theories yield to spiritual ideas, until the Christ gives place to the Christian, statement to health, sin to holiness, and God's kingdom comes 'in earth as it is in heaven'".

Enlisting God

The mind of the German army ended his orders at the beginning of hostilities with these words: "Forward with God for Germany," repeating the phrase used by the Kaiser at the start of the World War.

The head of the Polish State, in a similar manifesto, urged his people to fight with assurance, thinking of the "righteous of the cause" and "confident in the justice of God".

The story is told of Abraham Lincoln that a friend once asked him: "Do you think God is on our side?" He replied, "I'm much more concerned to be on God's side."

Is there not here a key for every individual who today seeks a right course amid war's confusions? When God's support is claimed for conflicting human aims, a clear and certain sense of right will uphold him who seeks not to enlist Deity, but first to know and do His will. His eternal purposes are not turned aside by mortal designs. Unchanging Love is not involved in hateful conflict. His children can enlist His help only to achieve His purposes, only as they express His nature. In whatever human scenes they take that must be their first concern. — Christian Science Monitor.

During the past week, the world has witnessed one of the most contemptible acts ever recorded in the history of war. The closing in of Russia on the east of the Poles, who were fighting the Germans on their western front, simply means the dictators have lost every semblance of honor and decency. If France and Great Britian can exterminate that brood of two-legged hyenas they are doing the world a splendid service.

The Week in Edmonton

The Royal Canadian Air Force is opening a recruiting office in the Eaton buildings recently acquired by the provincial government. It has been stated by officials that applications for enlistment will be received from physically fit men for service as pilots and aircraftsmen. It was added that regulations governing for sergeant pilots as well as commissioned officers in this branch of service.

Setting up a Price Spreads Board with power to investigate all trades, to control selling prices, while working in harmony with any like federal body was announced by Premier Aberhart Thursday night in a radio address. Previously the "loss leader" feature of retail merchandising regulations was removed, thus giving retail merchants the opportunity to base their prices according to their wholesalers' prices. The Premier promised vigorous action to prevent profiteering.

Mr. Aberhart — The term "conscription of wealth" does not mean the general expropriation of all property, private and corporate, by some bureaucratic authority. He defined this as a form of Hitlerism which all British peoples wish to exterminate. But he believed that people wanted conscription if the Premier's system of the country to provide for the national needs and to control effectively finance, industry and commerce in the interests of the general public and not in the interests of a privileged few.

THE TOOLS OF WHEAT

By H.G.L. Strange, Director "The Crop Testing Plan"

The "Crop Testing Plan" has just concluded the analysis of 21,000 wheat samples, each one of which represents a farmer's field of wheat. While a large number of excellent true to variety fields were found, yet on the other hand tests revealed that thousands of farmers are losing money by producing crops which are made up of mixtures or of unsuitable varieties. These poor varieties and mixtures not only lower the farmer's yields and grades, hence loss him money, but as well tend to lower the general quality of Canadian wheat. Farmers, therefore, who had C's and "mixtures" in Crop Testing Plan tests, or other farmers who may be in doubt about the quality of their crops, should certainly not continue to sow poor money-losing seed, but should now lay their plans to secure more suitable stock for next spring's sowing.

In almost every district there are professional seed growers with moderately priced registered and certified seed to sell. There are also in each district farmers who have in their bins true-to-variety C stocks, which stocks can usually be purchased at a modest premium.

High quality wheat is a vital war necessity for Canada, Great Britain and their allies.

MORAL REARMAMENT AND THE WORKING MAN

It may interest our readers to hear how a working man sees that M.R.A. can succeed in class struggle. This week's story is by a Swedish steelworker who has come to America to bring his experience to us.

"I am an ordinary steelworker from Demanvrat, Sweden, and I am president of a trade union of 460 men.

"We, in Sweden, have the world's most highly organized working class. I am proud of my country. We have no unemployed. In the workers' movement we have found unity, but moral re-armament has given us new power and shown us the way to build bridges between employers and workers. It is clear that we must have peace in industry before we can talk of peace in the nation."

Wheat and Transportation

Argentina has 100 million bushels ready to sell, but the price there is 50c lower than in Canada which is indicative of the transportation difficulty. Brer Gould frankly says that the British will not money wheat from Argentina. The same will hold true for Australian wheat. The same is true of Danubian away from the United Kingdom then the Argentina-Australian farmers are in a dilemma. The government of that commonwealth will acquire the whole Australian wheat crop, and it is reported pay farmers for the same at the rate of 6c per bushel.

Western Canadian wheat is being largely diverted eastward, the demand being on the Atlantic coast. The long overland route will undoubtedly suffer severely because of war conditions. It seems just as impracticable to protect shipping via the Panama Canal as it is to protect freighters from the southern hemisphere.

ACME CREAMERY GOES TO SOUTHERN POOL

From Wednesday, September 6, the Acme Creamery, which has been operating in the Central Alberta Dairy Pool, will be operated by the Southern Dairy Pool, an arrangement which the directors of both bodies believe will be advantageous to the members of both Pools. Acme is about 32 miles from Calgary and nearly one hundred from Alix, so that it can be administered better by the Southern Alix by the Central Pool.—Red Deer Advocate.

A Responsibility For Value

THE liner which has made a fast crossing of the Atlantic, ever afterwards bears under the obligation of a hero record. Each succeeding voyage is undertaken with the knowledge that the rest of the six or seven day records, there would quicker round his name among the world's shipowners. It is with high achievement in any sphere.

A horse who has held the world's heavyweight title and goes down to the ranks from a horseshoer, because the laughing stock of some trifling and feat. The baseball or hockey team which is at the top of the league and goes down to defeat at the hands of a little known team, becomes the butt of jokes. People refuse to accept anything short of perfection, and high standard has been established.

Every business has a responsibility that is proportionate. The personality of a business can be changed by changing its salesmanager or the size of its price tickets. A commodity sells at the door doesn't give a permanent quality or a name upon which to make it succeed. There are only two ways.

Over the years EATON'S has built up an enviable reputation for value, giving and this responsibility she heavily on our shoulders. The personality of the Company is to give the best value for nothing short of which is acceptable.

EATON'S

Before we start entertaining any fear about Germany attacking Canada let us wait and see what Germany can do with England and France on their own soil. When the Allies start to back up it will be time enough to start worrying. England has the whole British Empire behind her to keep the fight confined to Germany. Germany has been on various times the start of the war.

A Harvest Thanksgiving service will be held in St. Pancras Anglican Church, at 2 p.m., on Oct. 1st. All are welcome.

Owing to the continuous spells of wet weather, threshing operations have been greatly delayed and there still remains a great deal to be done in the districts surrounding Alix. Now that we have passed the equinox better weather is expected soon.

The electors of M.D. of Have No. 226, are being asked to present a petition of at least 15 per cent of the ratepayers to the Council who will appoint a medical practitioner as a full time employee of the municipal district. The salary will be $4000 per year for all patients who consult him in his office. Outside trips $1.00 extra. If declination is made to employ a doctor the taxes will be raised about 3 mills.

There were 12 degrees of frost registered on Sunday night. Docks and geese are heading in Lotus and three farmers in the district are already frozen and [illegible] have a frost in the [illegible]. The present [illegible] has gathered in the fruits of his field and preparing for the coming season of [illegible] sow.

It is astonishing how our flowers withstand the frost and are blooming as fresh as ever. We have had several visitations from this destroyer, but there are many who can tell to smile back and wave in the breeze. The poplars are putting on their autumn tints and soon the country will be a blaze of gold with the falling leaves. October is one of our most beautiful months. Let us enjoy it while it lasts.

Another business block is about to be erected on Main street. It will be occupied by the Howlett Bakery. The present premises are too small, so Mr. Howlett is going to have erected a larger building that will allow for future expansion, with living quarters. This business has been established from the start and has given our town a service which it greatly needed.

The Free Press wishes to warn merchants about increasing prices, and remembers about hoarding. We would draw your attention to the fact that there is a very heavy penalty for both of these infractions. A merchant who will increase prices on his old stock is not taking a patriotic stand and is putting a burden on consumers that should not be imposed on them as it is not entitled to. This is just a general warning. Complaints are coming in already about raised prices that cannot be justified.

Now that harvest time is here please do not forget The Free Press. Terms in arrears are expected to do something to reduce their indebtedness. The price has been reduced to $1.50. If you take advantage of our clubbing offer you can save money by using our coupon. But in any case please make an effort.

An Encouraging Report

Reports of substantial increases in motor tourist traffic to national parks in Western Canada this year, as revealed in figures for the first months ending July 31 released by the Department of Mines and Resources at Ottawa, make welcome reading for all who are interested in efforts which are being made to widen the range of national income and of additional revenue for the people of the country.

A compilation of the figures published by the department discloses that the increase in patronage of motorists visiting these fine playgrounds of the national show considerable variations for the individual parks, but all except one of the more popular resorts the movement over last year is as high as 20 per cent, and in one case well over 150 per cent.

A one-third increase in a very material augmentation and where the patronage runs into the tens of thousands it represents a very considerable increase in the number of cars brought to the parks, and just as considerable in the financial return to the localities and communities that undoubtedly a large part of the visitors stop over in the neighboring cities and towns for supplies and entertainment before they reach the department at Ottawa do not tell the whole story, since customs officials who do not reveal statistics until after the season has terminated, but the indications are that they have noted a proportionate increase in the number of tourists brought to the national parks in the west by rail this year.

Without a comment the figures of the increase in the modernized tourist traffic to the national parks are of sufficient interest and importance to warrant reproduction.

* * *

A Good Increase

Banff National Park, says the news despatch conveying the information showed an increase of more than 20 per cent in motor travellers in that period, with 21,000 motor visitors in the last four months compared with 69,392 in the same period a year ago.

Jasper National Park, with 11 600 visitors showed a gain of 1 646. Kootenay and Yoho National Parks also had increases of 14 000 and 3 376. Tourist registrations respectively. A new high of 57 000 visitors was recorded at Waterton Lakes National Park, compared with 42 623 in 1935. Buffalo National Park, Alberta had 13 282 visitors, an increase of 9 319 visitors.

On the prairies, Riding Mountain National Park, Manitoba set a new record with 75 149 visitors in the period, 3 661 more than last year. Attendance at Albert National Park in Saskatchewan was mentioned.

When comparable average figures are allowed for those parks for which details are not given in their entirety, it is found that the total increase in the number of visitors brought to all these western parks by automobile for the period under review is approximately 50 000

It is recognized, of course, that all these are not ventures from the United States and other countries, a substantial percentage being vacationists some of them being inter-provincial visitors and some of them tourists from the parks within their own province

Nevertheless in the absence of statistical data as to the origin of these visitors, it is unlikely be taken for granted that some of the increase can be credited to foreign visitors who, as a result have made some contribution to an augmented income for the people of this country.

* * *

Holidaying At Home

The percentage of the increase that can be attributed to a larger number of Canadians taking their holiday in their own parks is also a matter for congratulation, since it means one of two things, either more Canadians who formerly visited abroad are spending their vacation money in their own country, or that more Canadians are taking a holiday this year who did not do so in 1935 probably a combination of both. In either event, the result should be regarded as highly satisfactory

The increasing popularity of the national parks is attributed by the department to the steady improvement of park facilities for tourists and improvement in the roads leading to the parks. Little, perhaps, can be done on this score but can be taken to the first-mentioned "cause" but there is some reason to doubt, the latter.

If a questionnaire were submitted to visiting motorists it would unquestionably be found the consensus of opinion that highways through and to the parks are good as they might be but that the chief factor in the increasing popularity of the parks is in spite of the handicap a good argument for the suggestion that more expenditure on the roads would result in a very much larger increase in patronage for these deservedly popular western playgrounds, among the finest in the world.

Man Are Hunting Key To Mystery Of Cosmic Ray

Dr Robert Matthias noted physicist, last week from Pasadena, Calif. on a six months' search for a key to the mystery of the cosmic ray.

Two miles up Mt Victor Hoiser and Dr. Wilson Pickering, took more than 30 types of apparatus for detecting and measuring the frequency and intensity of the rays.

The load will extend through Australia Tasmania and India

Cosmic rays constantly bombard the earth, passing through the human body. Only lead will stop them

But the origin of the cosmic ray is still pretty much a mystery," said Dr Millikan. "I made observations three years ago in India, but only at one latitude. This time we will try several latitudes."

New ray counters which Dr Millikan is taking will be carried up 20,000 to 100 000 feet by notching balloons. On the top they will broadcast the count back to earth to be recorded automatically on tape

Experiments Show Soil Erosion Biggest Factor In Loss Of Fertility

Experiments conducted by the Dominion experimental farm, Ottawa, over a four-year period show conclusively on a quantitative basis the greatest single factor causing loss of soil fertility, according to W. Ahrens, Dominion agricultural husbandry division.

Experiments showed a large percentage of the available plant food in soil is present in the weathered surface layer and may be removed entirely but through removal of that layer of erosion.

Effect on crop growth of varying degrees of erosion was determined by the experimental farm, Ottawa, work on plots from which amounts of the surface soil had been removed. The dark surface soil, approximately seven inches deep, overlies lighter coloured subsoil.

It was shown that when no surface soil was removed the average yield was 60 bushels of barley was 39.3 bushels; 27.7 bushels with three inches removed, 18 bushels with six inches removed, and 8.3 bushels with all surface soil removed.

The results, according to Dickson, suggest the importance of employing soil-conservation methods to avoid run-off and soil saving cultural practices, such as summer-fallowing on strong slopes of erosion areas.

Tip For Editors

Bulletproof Subscribers Might Use Special Ad They Had In Reserve

The editor of a Chicago weekly says he hitched up a Winchester rifle one day recently and started up the street, to return it to its owner. The delinquent subscriber got it into their heads he was on the warpath and a number of them he met insisted on paying their bills. One owed him 50c. On return to the office he found a total of $9, 15 bundles of corn, ten bushels of potatoes, a load of coal and a barrel of turnips had been brought in.

An average of 50,000 persons may be viewed in the back of a town, where entertainment and holes to cross their foot supports.

Lake Transportation is Now Progress Big Improvement This Season, Especially Transportation Of Mining Machinery

A big improvement in transportation facilities to the mining areas of the Mackenzie River district is reported by Mr. Gilbert Labine, president of Eldorado Gold Mines Limited, who has returned to Toronto from a visit to the property of his company on Great Bear Lake.

Mr. Labine said he believed the service this year would be the best in the district. Transportation of machinery and supplies for the mines was completed in record time, he said, and the ore was being moved out in large quantities

What the C.N.R. Does for Canada

Before anyone regards as too dismal the reading of the financial results of operation of the various lines of the Canadian National Railway, he should consider certain matters which materially change the picture.

In the first place the figures are for 1925, when the west had a wheat crop of only 186,000,000 bushels, the lowest for 6 years, and 1924. In the second place, the C.N.R. is not alone in the country. Since the C.P.R. has a large number of lines the revenue of the rest of the country, or new railways would be less expected to pay, now largely now to the Government system. Finally, the C.N.R. lines have greatly increased the production of national wealth, and the resulting benefit to business and the improvement of the general welfare have far outweighed the cost of making up the annual deficit. The vast service which the publicly owned railroads are rendering to the people of Canada is a reality which they should keep clearly in mind.

If anyone would be disposed to abandon C.N.R. lines that do not pay operating expenses, he knows would be begin! Would he stop the service on the line to the Pas-Flon and Sherritt Gordon mining field? That line cost $000,000,000 and it is losing money every year. But it has led to an annual production of $25,000,000 of new wealth. Would anyone close up the lines to other industries, or to farming districts into which many settlers have gone? Obviously, that cannot be done, and it would not be wise to do it, because many of the lines that are losing money are really serving the country well by encouraging and increasing production.

It may look like poor business from a railway point of view. A private railway, operated primarily for profit, would not lay our dollcits on such a scale. It would not do so. But a large corporation, operating a rail way in connection with one or more other industries which it was developing, would willingly absorb a deficit on the railway if it made the industries profitable. The Canadian people are in the same position. If they regard their railway as a great means of stimulating production from the rich resources of the country, which it is, they need worry little about the railway deficit.

Sixty per cent of our national wealth is produced in territory served by the Canadian National, according to Mr. S W. Fairweather, economist and head of the research department of that railway. He also states that, because of the manner in which the railways have stimulated production in Canada, our railway density though they may seem, consumes a smaller proportion of our national income than in many other countries, including Great Britian and the United States.

It is the facilitating of production that has placed Canada so high on the list of nations, and has given our people a standard of living which is amongst the highest in the world. This country, with its comparatively small population, holds fourth place in export trade, and is fifth with the great nations. And what the production of which has been done for the welfare of the people is seen in the number of motor-cars they possess, and radio sets, telephones and other things, which, in almost all other countries are not enjoyed to anything like the same extent.

The production of new wealth which has so benefited the country would never have taken place if railways are not to be built unless they would pay operating costs and fixed charges, or were to be abandoned if they ceased to earn a profit. Deficits on railways in new territory, which they are built to develop, are to be expected. The C.P.R. was not expected to pay for some years, and it was very heavily subsidized for that reason.

The privately-owned railway to operated for profit. That is the reason for its existence. The constant purpose of the management must be to try to ensure that profit. The publicly owned railway has a quite different function. It is not exclusively a railway business. The people who own it have other large interests. The prosperity of which is of great importance to them. If they regard their railway as an effective agency in advancing their other interests — the development of the latent wealth of the country—and on that account do not regard to seriously the fact that the railway does not meet all its costs, they will be following a sound business policy, precisely the same as a large development corporation would do, thinking only of the total results of the combined enterprise.

Any general abandonment of lines that are operated at a loss would cause a great reduction in the power of industries: it would inevitably unemployment and give a hard blow to the business of the country.—Winnipeg Free Press.

Next week Jack Smokestack will only get 9 cigarettes for 25c. Larger pages will be 3 for 25c. Ping tobacco will be made in a smaller bundle, but retain the same popular prices. The farmers and consumers are going to make a substantial contribution towards the suppression of Hitlerism — but it is worth it. The fellow who rakes in the big profits will be caught on the income tax. There are two classes of people now those who are worrying about what they haven't got and those who are worrying about what they have got. Why worry at all. "Trust not thyself" is good advice.

The Romans built their roads straight so that the Britons could not hide around corners.

THE GIANT of ALBERTA

THE ancients thought the sky was held up on the shoulders of the giant Atlas. But Alberta is actually carried, from an economic standpoint, on the shoulders of the giant Agriculture.

Last year, less than 100,000 Alberta farmers produced $167 million of new wealth. Of that total $118 million came from field crops, mainly wheat.

Where would Alberta's 775,000 people get a living if it were not for agriculture? Yet the great industry must struggle along with the burden of marketing methods which, more often than not, provide inadequate prices.

Sophistry and theorizing settle little. Action is needed. The Wheat Pools and the farm organizations got the Wheat Board. This was a great forward step in marketing wheat, to which all now subscribe.

But it is just a step. The Board must be perfected. The agricultural industry must have greater all-round price protection. There must be no return to the laissez-faire methods.

An aroused agriculture can make progress by uniting its strength. The best way to do this is to build up farm organizations and co-operatives.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Unreality" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon at all Services for next Christian Science Society. The Golden Text is Prov. 12:7 (but of the Revised standard version is "The blessing of the Lord, it maketh rich, and he addeth no sorrow with it." (Prov. 10:22).

One of the corrective passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" is "Christians rejoice in eternal beauty and beauty, hidden from the world, but known to God. Self-forgetfulness, purity and affection are constant prayers. Practice not profession, understanding not belief, gain the ear and right hand of inspiration and the heavenly melody flows infinite blessings."

The Dominion Government has urged that golf must be continued with renewed vigor in these troublesome times. The Northern branch of the Amateur Athletic Association are going ahead in the unexpended boxing tournament, and Alix will be the first place to hold an all star cast. Webb Frizzel, of Lacombe, Western Canada's open 135 lb. champion and Dominion finalist, will be the main event, with Ring Hickens, our local boy. No boy in Alberta, at his weight, would meet Webb, who has had over 50 year's experience and holds the Legion Belt for the best and most pleasing buzzy in the Alberta finals last spring. This will be a severe test for Ring, who is predicting nothing but a quietly confident of the result. Other boys slated for Alix are Gordon Frizzell, Sonny Frizzell, and Don Johnson, of Lacombe; Mellroy, McGill and Powers, of Innisfail; Jack Collins, Ken and Frank Siddons, Andy Crawford and Leo Eier, of Alix, besides J. Walper who made in a real ling. Further announcement next week

Military Wedding

The Pro-Cathedral, Calgary, was the scene of a very pretty wedding, on Saturday, September 23rd, at 3 p.m., when Livinia Alberta, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Jones, of Cheadle-on R.C., and Lieutenant Colin S. Andrews, eldest son of Mrs. S. C. Andrews and the late S. C. Andrews, of Alix, were married. The Canon of the church and Chaplain of the Calgary Highlanders, Rev. Patterson, performed the ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length gown of pale rose chiffon over satin, with white accessories, her bouquet being tea roses and ferns.

Miss Myrtle Jones, sister of the bride, the bridesmaid, wore pale blue chiffon over satin with silver accessories and carried a bouquet of pink and white carnations and fern.

Lieut. Douglas Robertson was best man, both the groom and best man were in Highland uniform.

After signing the register, and on leaving the church the bridal party were honored by a guard of honor formed by the officers of the Calgary Highlanders.

A reception was held in the west reception room of the Palliser Hotel, at which some 60 guests were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrews will reside in the Drake Apartments, Calgary.

A Pioneer Passes

A well known and highly respected citizen of Mirror passed away on Saturday, September 30th, in the person of Christian Henry Reid. He was born on Nov. 8, 1854, in the State of Wisconsin. With his parents he moved to southern Minnesota when ten years old. At the age of 20 he married Hollie Jeanette Hamlin of Lake Crystal, Minn. At the time he was a butcher and stock buyer. In 1903 Mr. Reid and family came to Alberta and settled in the Ripley district and in 1913 moved to Mirror, where he has since resided.

He leaves a wife and three children to mourn his loss. His children are: Mrs. Mabel F. Merritt, Ripley; Rose and Karl Reid, Mirror. In addition there are nine grandchildren, two great grandchildren and three brothers—Gates of Mirror; Wallace of Lake Crystal, Minn., and Ralph of Idaho, Idaho.

The funeral service was held in Mirror on Feb. 2nd, pallbearers were Messrs. H. H. Moon, F. A. Moon, J. H. Scrase (Edmonton), C. W. Peacock, W. Peacock and E. Hopkins.

The floral offerings were numerous and very beautiful. A large crowd was in attendance to drawn from all over the district to show respect to their departed friend.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to extend our thanks to the friends who sent their expressions of sympathy to us in our bereavement, and also to the choir for their beautiful message in song.

Democratic Citizenship

It is the sacred duty and should be the pleasure of the voter to vote. The foregoing is perhaps not to some extent. It has undoubtedly been said many times before, set in these exact words, but with the same meaning. But as the saying of history and comparatively recent history at that, it seems unfortunately respect the admonition contained in the opening phrase has been largely forgot.

And forgetfulness is one of the synonyms of a percentage of those who could in most fairly call themselves "dry." It is an able something under whether it be a federal provincial or municipal election. In these days, however when so much publicity is given to abstinence as the daily and weekly press and over the air, it also hardly be classed as an excusable excuse. Rather it should be labelled a crime.

As a matter of fact, of all the weak excuses offered for neglect to exercise the franchise forgetfulness is one of the weakest. Even for those with some memory, democratic privileges very lightly is a poor reason.

While forgetfulness is a weak excuse for not voting the "What is the use" attitude is one of the most futile and indefensible, yet that also is probably a good deal more popular than "I forgot."

It is futile and indefensible because after enough of those who use it seem to go to the polls and oppose their choice, they would be sufficient to turn the tide in the direction of their own sentiment.

A Sacred Obligation

Those who refrain from voting on this ground are doing themselves, their community and the elected representatives and defeated candidates a grievous injustice.

Their breach of duty towards themselves lies in the fact that they are neglecting themselves of a function which they ought to perform in justice to themselves. They are taking away from themselves all right to complain if the elected representatives do not conduct themselves in the manner in which the neglectful voters would have them conduct themselves, if they do not fulfil the promises which they have made, or if they do not carry out the principles which those neglectful voters would have had them make good.

They are rendering a disservice to all the other electors in the electoral district in which they are qualified to exercise the franchise, because they neither lend support to the majority nor give that support to the minority. To the extent to which they refrain from casting their ballots they are abdicating the viewpoint of the entire community.

As for the elected representatives and the defeated candidates, they have a right to complain of unfair treatment if the voters do not turn out and register their views at the polls and if they do not cast their votes in accordance with the wishes of the majority of his constituents, it is to elected by a minority of them? And then to what happens sometimes in a closely contested election when a number of candidates are running on election day. He does not know their views, or at the best, can only guess them.

And the defeated candidate also has good ground for a complaint. He might have been elected had it not been for the negligence of some of the citizens.

* * * *

A Serious Problem

The need for the remainder is evident when it is pointed out that in the highest general elections of 1926 only 782,726 votes were polled in Saskatchewan, or only 54 per cent. of those entitled to vote. In Alberta the percentage was that seventeen. This means that nearly one half of the eligible voters in the province stayed at home in sending representatives to the House of Commons in that election.

A better showing was made by the Saskatchewan electorate in the provincial election of 1929 when slightly more than 70 per cent. of the eligible vote was polled. Even that, however, is not a good showing when it lacks over one-fifth of the voters failed to record their views on provincial administration.

Doubtless, if the figures were at hand, comparable results could be shown in the other prairie provinces.

The question arises what is to be done to arouse citizens of the country to the importance and necessity of taking a greater interest in the management of their own affairs. Compulsory voting, with penalties for failure to exercise the franchise, has been tried and is in effect in some countries, but it is not regarded as an unqualified success.

In any event, it should not be necessary to compel people to look after their own affairs and their own interests and especially in such important matters as government.

The basic principle of democracy is self-government by an enlightened and interested citizenry. This fundamental is badly shaken and the form of government for which our ancestors fought over a thousand year period is seriously menaced if a substantial section of the citizen body fails to exert itself of its privileges.

But Men To Get Real Things At The Festival of Vii. In Rome.

The hottest housewife in England is Mrs. Monica Felton, who has just been appointed chairman of the London county council supplies committee.

Mrs. Felton has $15,000,000 to spend every year, but she must spend it wisely and well, getting the best things at the lowest prices.

Her predecessor will resign from buying to bullfighting equipment, from beer ages to X-ray apparatus.

The buying of food is one of the most important aspects of the committee's work. L.C.C.'s food bill last year was in the neighborhood of $7,000,000.

A Scotsman and an Englishman were indulging in the usual boasting of their respective countries.

"Well, after all," said the latter at last, "there is very little difference between the Englishman and Scotsman."

"Perhaps you are right," replied the Scot, "but think between the differences."

Orange County, New Jersey, Has Fifth Honored The Onion

Last year plans to hold an annual festival in Orange county found the county head to be abandoned because of floods which ruined much of the crop. This year the festival was successfully in a big way. Middletown Boats showed the entire process of onion from planting to marketing. An onion queen was chosen from among the candidates, and the onion parade was a feature. Many floats were entered, and the onion queen was crowned with the onion crown of onions. Then the onion dance was held by the secrets a endgood by modern home economics, who used onions in every conceivable way. Onions and onions as grains are other culinary treats.

The festival was originally started to improve the onion Chilbreton growers and others in the district. That would keep well and not appeal to shortage. Their specifications were met successfully. The onion growers of Chilbreton Brown, in which the good quality of American onion flavor is retained and their poor qualities eliminated. Some of the experts say that the reddish skin that farmers have to start when onions are pickled and shipped to the consumer would soften under the onion to produce more of the tear-producing oil than the unskinned onion. But the public "eat" unless grown during winter, spring or early summer. They will order other than those of the small variety grown later in the summer.

Bishop A. L. Fleming, bishop of the Arctic, back from Aklavik, described at Toronto the work of the mission hospital and surgery being carried on by the Church of England in Canada at Aklavik and outposts in the Arctic Circle.

The Flying Bishop, as he is affectionately called, was particularly enthusiastic about the recently-installed dental surgery only one in the Arctic, and the most northerly, it is believed in the world.

Fido found it difficult to withstand a recent heat wave at Salt Lake City, Utah, so his owner, an engineer motoring to Los Angeles, complained of the effect to the Utah State Automobile Association. Disposal Of Straw

Is Matter Of Considerable Importance To Prairie Farmers

Utilization of straw is one of the most pressing problems in all considerable agriculture.

A recommendation by the college of agriculture University of Saskatchewan is that "straw" be returned years only a relatively small part of straw is used by livestock for bedding and for bedding straw on many farms is considered as a waste and is disposed of by burning. With the adoption of the combine, the practice of burning straw stubble has become widespread. Plowing under large quantities of straw tends to dry out the soil with resultant lower yields, but with moderate applications, it may be possible to conserve the valuable source of humus.

Before the introduction of permanent agriculture the burning of stubble and straw is very wasteful. But today, when large quantities of organic materials are destroyed and, where straw piles are burned, the accumulation of ash in one location results in an area of excessively fertile soil on which moisture needs later than the remainder of the field.

GEORGE MARSH

"We want a word with you alone," said McQueen.

"Sure, here is my partner," replied Alan. "We have no secrets between us."

"But you sometimes have a secret together, eh?" broke in Slade.

Alan gazed blankly into Slade's leering eyes. Police or no, he didn't like the cut of the jaw of these two men. "I don't get you," he said.

"Well, and I'm tired of curiosity to know what a hunter just out of the bush is doing with a piece of Canadian Pacific money," said McQueen. "I suppose you got it from a Sioux."

"To the horror of the watching Steel, Alan calmly produced his pouch from his pocket and drew out the bill. "You mean this?"

Commercial instinct leaped in the dour-eyed trader's eyes. He reached out and turned to Steel.

"I've got to see Ned Campbell before anyone else from Fort George reaches him. As soon as the ice clears the canoe we head for White River."

CHAPTER IV

The vanguards of the marching spring had reached Fort George and swept on up the East Coast of the Bay of the north.

It was late in May and two men waited in the little log cabin that rain winds from the foot of James Bay waved with the fire-ice that locked the bleak East Coast. Not yet might a canoe hope to pass the treacherous ice floes that drifted in the Bay.

Alan and Steel had been at Fort George for a month. Officers McQueen and Slade made repeated attempts to obtain from him details of the story of how he happened to have Canadian money in his possession.

It had been better news to Alan when Chief Commis told him the ice was breaking up. Then he said:

"Alan, I don't blame you for being a little mad before you knew all they were," said Gabriel, "but the law requires that we give the police they help possible. I suppose order us to furnish guides, supplies, whatever they require. They'll have a man who went in to Nichicun by way of Rupert House last summer. He can show them the route."

Murder! John McCord with the straight eyes and the scar on his heart—a murderer!

"His Indians came out at Rupert House in September—deserted him," continued Dunstan. He had hired Alan to go to with him he trade for fur. They came out to get dogs and supplies but he insisted them to go back the interior, this summer, and they were afraid to go. What was the matter with him Alan? He is a better. That was why the police were suspicious when you dropped that bill you got from Ned Campbell," the stunned Alan heard Dunstan say, as if from a distance. "They know there's no money used in the bush country and they suspected you might have run into him."

Alan's head spun out the friendly grasp of the factor like a whirling. I understand. But I don't go up river with these police. I've got to get some good, dogs from the Nonikon That will take me weeks."

Well I'll tell Sergeant McQueen that you must get your dogs from the Rainmont first. If he insists on taking you to the headwaters instead of some of our Indians."

But while the laggard spring benched the East Coast slowly with its magic to Alan who chafed at the delay, hastened by his problem there was one at Fort George who was impatient—Corporal Bertie. The young Englishman had come to the post on the Talking River, when he met Slade's small canoe on his known who was on his way to Rupert House. He had met Slade on his known before and had taken a dislike to him. After Dunstan humable trapper of Alan's story the black-eyed girl could voice her protest.

Pearls From Herrings

Roubs Shipped To United States From New Brunswick

Reports to the Dominion department of fisheries from its inspectors in the province of New Brunswick have been full of the continuation of business in herring scales, which are being shipped to the United States where they are used in producing pearl essence for the making of artificial pearls, imitation jewelry. The scale business is by no means a large one, but has amounted to slightly more than $12,000 in value for the year, 1929, in New Brunswick.

In making pearl essence the business partners adhering to the scales are removed by a special process and the remainder thrown away. The essence under is drawn off and the essence remaining is then mixed with gelatine in the way, are deposits at very thin blade-like crystals of pure guanine, which is the basis of the pearl. The crystals aremixed in the essence are roughly proportionate to the size of the fish from which they come, those the crystals from the smaller herring are more valuable than those from larger fish and make an essence of finer quality. Trans-Canada Planes Travel On A Beam—Small Bottle

Trans-Canada air lines planes need fly 1,200 feet higher than the highest hill of land over which the mechanical beacons are placed, by international regulation, the pilots know that they will have plenty of space to clear mountains on the route.

As the routes are all carefully charted and the pilots operate their planes with the help of the radio ranges there is little danger of their flying out of all tunnel during a flight.

The planes also travel on what is known as the double-track route.

Cost Considerable Money

Luxury Steamboat Trains More Expensive Than People Imagine

Luxury trains are not the only kind of rail travel that is expensive. It is said of nurses in the wreck of the Southern Pacific's crack streamliner Sunset Limited. It is commonly known the fact that a luxury train costs from $1,000 to $1,000,000.

That huge amount, says W. L. Clark in the Windsor Star is for the steep trains not for a fleet of trains. It means that a huge chunk of capital is required before such a train can be placed in service It also requires a huge sum to maintain the coaches and to keep them in the best of repair and conservation.

It has often been suggested that the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National railways should put their luxury trains in service between Toronto and Montreal.

There is no doubt the Canadian railways men would like to put luxury streamliners on routes other than on Canada. But, at $5,000,000 per train, the thought is hard to change from a wish to a fact.

Pool Directors Meet

The directorates of the prairie Wheat Pools met in Regina on Monday of last week and gave careful consideration to the wheat situation. The following resolution expresses the general pool opinion:

"That this conference of the three wheat Pools of the prairie provinces recommend to the Dominion Government that in any course of action of the Government, affecting the marketing of agricultural products which may be necessary in the present situation of the country, the principal be adopted of establishing and maintaining parity as between the prices for agricultural products and other commodities."

This resolution does not by any means make an extravagant demand and it may be fairly said to represent western agricultural opinion. The prairie farmer has never demanded anything other than more justice. He wants prices for his products that compare equitably with the prices of the the things that he must buy.

The Wheat Pools of Western Canada have no intention of trying to cause undue trouble and complications in the Dominions at a time of serious crisis, but the Pools are determined that the interests and welfare of the farm people of he prairie provinces will not be sacrificed in a serious as they have been in prese times.—The (Pool) Budget.

The Week in Edmonton

Edmonton, Sept.—There is no shortage of sugar in Alberta. This summarizes the preliminary findings of H. A. Smith, K. C., legislative council and member of the Alberta Price Spreads Board who has been appointed special commissioner to inquire into shortages and prices of the necessaries of life. Any apparent shortage is entirely due to the abnormal purchases made by householders, he stated. He added that the amounts purchased are not unreasonable.

The Price Spreads Board under the chairmanship of W. D. King, deputy minister of Trade and industry, proposes to cooperate with the federal War-Time Prices and Trade Board Regulations. Set up under the Department of Trade and Industry Act, the Board is empowered to inquire into the production, manufacture, distribution or sale of articles, wares or merchandise to which the act does or may apply.

Offences under the federal regulations are divided into two or just, and if a maximum price has been fixed by the War-Time Prices and Trade Board, that price may reasonably be demed reasonable and just.

2. No person shall manipulate or withhold from sale any necessary of life beyond an amount thereof reasonably required for his own consumption or his household or for his ordinary purposes of his business.

3. No person shall unduly increase, limit or lessen the manufacture, production, transportation, sale, supply or distribution of any necessary of life.

4. No person shall in any way impede or prevent or attempt to impede or prevent any investigation or examination lawfully authorized by the board.

5. No manufacturer, producer, wholesaler, jobber or retailer shall sell or offer for sale a necessary of life in respect of which a license is required unless he has first obtained a license from the Board.

The order defines a necessary of life as a "staple or other article of food, clothing and fuel, including the products and materials from which they are wholly or partly manufactured and any other articles which the board may prescribe.

Regulations also provide for investigations into costs and prices, concerning of necessaries at fair prices, selling through designated agencies, and the obtaining of information relative to inquiries under such or all sections.

Penalties for infraction are severe. Those found guilty may be fined up to $5,000 or be imprisoned for not more than two years, or both. In addition, it is likely that if necessity arises, the provisions of the Alberta Trade and Industry act regarding profit selling goods and services below the fixed minimum required by a code will draw penalties. In any case, the federal body is empowered to report violations to the Provincial Attorney General concerned.

"Are the Heavens and Earth Silent" is the subject of the Lesson Sermon to be read in all churches of Christ, Scientist on Sunday. The Golden Text is Psalms 39:3, 6. The Lesson-Sermon includes the text: "And he that was dead came forth, bound hand and foot with grave clothes: and his face was bound about with a napkin. Jesus said unto them, Loose him and let him go" (John 11:44). One of the citations accompanying the Lesson-Sermon is Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy: "The Spirit of Truth quickens the dead, and the Spirit of Love makes alive."

With no coal and coal until Christmas, winter will be just a normal one this year with no long stretches of bitter cold weather and frequent mild spells. So says Alaska Bill Slocum—an old-timer of the Northwestern Indian tribes and certainly one of Canada's best authorities on forecasters.

What might have proved to be rather a serious accident happened south west of town one afternoon last week, when Mrs. J. W. Hogan, who was driving a coupe on rounding a sharp curve collided with Mr. Webb's truck, which was loaded with coal, on its way to town. A good deal of damage was done to both vehicles, particularly to the coupe, but fortunately no one was injured. Although at the time of writing Mrs. Hogan is still suffering from slight cuts and bruises.

The weather lately has not been conducive for the harvesting. We have had a few rainfalls that delayed the threshers. But when it is enough is enough for the elevator men. Reports state that grain is not being exported fast enough to clear the terminal elevators, and there is more complaints that there is plenty of room in Fort Arthur and Vancouver. Grade is going and this year, and even, if conditions remain as they are now, will be the lowest on record.

Walter Dunman, of Clive, on Wednesday, was seriously injured when he slipped and caught his foot in the cylinder of an open separator, working on his farm. He was taken to Lacombe hospital where his foot was amputated.

Of the number of fatal accidents which occur every holiday keeps up, it may be in the interest of public safety to abolish the holidays. These accidents seem to be on the increase with each succeeding year.

A Worthy Cause

The shining appeal which has been sounded during the past few months for funds to complete in every continent and country of Jack Miner's bird sanctuary at Kingsville, Ontario, should strike a responsive chord in the breast of every lover of wild life and of every true sportsman on the entire continent.

When it is remembered that Jack Miner at great personal sacrifice in himself and family has done yeoman work in bird banding for a long period of years resulting in valuable information which has made conservation of game birds on present day scale possible it is not too much to say that he is worthy of recognition in a practical way at least to the extent that will assist the work to be carried on. It would not be going too far afield to state that every sportsman in the United States and Canada owes a debt of gratitude to Jack Miner.

The banding of ducks and geese by Jack Miner and in later years by the Biological Survey of Washington has revealed that there are four migration routes which the birds follow in their annual flights to the north in their breeding grounds. One route lies east of the Mississippi valley, one west of the Mississippi in the Rocky Mountains and the third is along the Pacific Coast west of the Rockies.

The ducks and geese banded by Jack Miner at Kingsville Ontario which is centrally located among the great Lakes are practically all reported shot east of the Mississippi with the exception of the odd bird which has strayed across to the western side of that big river.

It has been Jack Miner's knowledge and his activities at Kingsville that have served a breeding supply for hunters and especially those who enjoy their sport in Southern Illinois and the junction of the Illinois and Mississippi rivers and eastward through to Charlotte Sound, Lake Muskonombert and other water quarters.

Brookfield Gossip

The band records compiled by Jack Miner over a long period of years prove that the sportsmen along the Atlantic Coast and in the Eastern United States have every little from the activities of the great goose population of Western Canada.

The result of the Jack Miner's bird banding activities is that it has given the people of the United States and Canada indisputable records of the number and percentage of ducks and geese cared for by the famous Canadian bird sanctuary at Kingsville that are shot in the United States.

Jack Miner, as well as many other leading Canadian sportsmen conservationists and public spirited citizens feels that the sportsmen of the United States should, without hesitancy support him in a lengthy way by raising sufficient funds to enable him to maintain his establishment and keep it going.

At the present time hundreds of thousands of dollars are being spent in Western Canada by Ducks Unlimited money which is raised in the United States to restore former breeding grounds and establish new ones in Western Canada to raise ducks for the American sportsmen to shoot. If it is possible to raise such large sum among the hunters of the United States for this new project it would be a wise investment for every [illegible] Jack Miner whose activities have spelled success for nearly half a century.

In the winter of 1929 Jack Miner had a flocking population of between 25 000 and 30 000 Canada geese for three months in the spring and [illegible] were shot by him and given a safe haven from the hunters guns.

Last winter a flock of Canada geese number between [illegible] and [illegible] were remaining at the Kingsville sanctuary all winter. The increase from that flock alone will give the sportsmen in the United States that fall an opportunity to shoot an additional 10 000 to 15 000 geese.

* * * *

Miner's Fortune Spent

With these facts in mind an appeal to American sportsmen to maintain the Jack Miner sanctuary should not fall on deaf ears.

The result of time spent with Jack Miner and his work over a period of many years, contributors can be assured that any assistance that may be given will not only be gladly accepted but will be expended to the greatest possible advantage. Jack Miner himself has made no entire personal fortune on this work and has contributed his own time and that of his family to this great cause.

It is a recent announcement it was pointed out that cheques should be made payable personally to Jack Miner Kingsville Ontario, and it was stated that to those who wish to receive a statement of actual financial [illegible] large amounts are contributed a sworn statement of the bank handling the account at Kingsville will be mailed.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Doctrine of Atonement" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon at all Christian Science churches on Sunday. The Golden Text is I. John 2:1. "And if any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous." Other passages from the Bible include the following: "Present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." But he, who is righteous, of the multitude of his tender mercies shows, can never remain in this world the divine judgment of our Lord." (page 336.)

Kenora, Ont., John Melnick, a miner, was recently acquitted of manslaughter. He was accused of cutting fire to Dr. Smith's masquerade costume. The doctor was dressed in a south sea costume of imbroidered grass rope. Melnick forwarded a match to it. The doctor suffered a fatal burn.

Brief Mention

Alberta's fourth health unit, to be established in the Stettler area, will shortly be functioning. The Government bears half the cost, the other half will be met by local municipalities.

There is a shortage of teachers in Alberta, about fifty schools being without teachers. The reason for this is that teachers do not apply for schools in poorer districts owing to inadequate funds to carry on. The Minister of Education has promised to remedy this condition and make it possible for all children to secure an education by supplementing by special grants funds which cannot be raised locally.

Farmers wanting trees for wind-breaks should apply to Hon. N. E. Tanner before Jan. 31st next.

Autumn from Regina suggests that Canada may own or control the C. P. R. by the end of the war. The British Government has announced a policy of financing war purchases in Canada by repatriation of Canadian bonds held in England. There is still $500,000,000 worth of C. P. R. bonds, or more than 50 per cent of the railways total bond issue.

The war time purchasing board has announced that wool prices have been fixed at the per lb. cited basis. This represents an advance of nearly 50 per cent over prices a short time ago. Mr. D. C. Dick, federal wool commissioner, said: "The price has been fixed because it is fair."

W. S. Thompson, director of Censorship, has announced that there will be no political broadcasting during the war. This is done under the Defence of Canada Regulations. This applies to all political parties in Canada, including Alberta and Quebec, and this does not mean maybe.

Premier Duplessis, of Quebec, has started a mud-slinging Campaign in appeal to the voters. Everything goes.

The Italians are not pleased with the German Russian pact. Some Italian papers refer to Siemians as "bolfoons," "pawns of axe" and "symbols of gross bestiality".

THE BRITISH FLAG

By H. S. Windsor, Sudbury

The British flag—red, white and blue,
Floats o'er the silver trees
Of Gerrit's city, Bethlehem,
Triumphant in the breeze.

Flung outward and flung skyward,
Safe guard almighty it betokens
The freedom, ease, valour-bred
Beneath its shining folds.

Or calm, or wind, or sunshine,
Mirk day or midnight,
The kin and the unborn

And then our flag—the British flag
That flies above Jerusalem.

SUNDAY SERVICE

"Protection after Death" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon at all Christian Science Churches on Sunday. The Golden Text is James 1:12. One of the Scriptural citations is "For, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me." (Psalms 23:4) One of the correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy is as follows: "As the hour of death, morbid fear, or the near approach of the unknown foe, (1) blast their every hope, (2) they look back upon the periods of a new belief" (p. 291).

Aircraft instruction under the youth training program has been extended due to war needs and the Calgary Institute of Technology and Art will train 60 wireless operators, fifteen riggers, and fifteen engine fitters in co-operation with the Royal Canadian Air Force. Classes will begin about October 31.

A War Problem

Whatever part Canada may be destined to play in the war now raging between Germany on the one hand and Great Britain, Canada's ally France and Poland, on the other the fact that Western Canadian agriculture will be charged with the highly important duty of assisting in the task of supplying Food commodities to the Allied belligerent nations and their cousins is quite clear.

What is not clear, however is the extent to which and for how long Western Canada will be called upon or will be able to render this duty or part of its contribution towards the winning of the war. That is dependent upon many factors such as the length of the war, the beneficial or otherwise of the crop yields while the war is in progress, the extent to which the war lords can be kept upon the lee conveyance of foodstuffs and other commodities which the allies can make, or may be forced to make by the exigencies of warfare, to ensure an uninterrupted flow of food supplies to their war-torn lands and their fighting forces.

It would be a bold prophet who would venture to predict specific answers to some of the questions involved in these at present unknown factors. The war, for instance, may be a lengthy conflict, so protracted or more so than the unprecedented one of 1914-18. On the other hand it may be of very short duration. There are those who are making predictions of the length of the war ranging all the way from twenty weeks to twenty years. The most that can be said for them is that they are only guesses and one man's guess is as good as another's.

The Immediate Requirement

That being the case, it is impossible for the individual farmer, or even for those in charge of the nation's affairs, to devise a long range program of production and distribution of agricultural products for the entire duration of the war. All that can be done at the present time, is to go onto the distributant of the crop year just harvested in such manner as to meet as directly at such times and such places as to furnish maximum assistance in the prosecution of the war and to lay plans for production to meet as well the immediate needs within the country as a whole. The former is now the problem of the government, and the Canada Wheat Board with the assistance and co-operation of the wheat pools and other marketing agencies.

The latter, the question of preparation for, and production of next year's crop, is one which will involve the co-operation of the individual farmer with the government of the country and the various distributing and marketing agencies. To what extent the quantity and type of production will be left to the discretion of the individual farmer or to what extent, if any, the exigencies of the national welfare will warrant or necessitate directional assistance over production effort on the part of the government, has not, at the moment, been ascertained.

Whether or not any measure of government control over production is assumed, it may be taken for granted that, as long as a supreme effort may be required in the prosecution of the war with the utmost vigor, the farmers of the west will give loyal and effective support and a full quota of cooperation, even though it entail some sacrifice and the abandonment of much cherished plans for the time being.

o o o

Mistakes To Avoid

Whether however, the former retains full measure of liberty in ordering his production program for the next and subsequent years, or not, it is to be hoped that plans laid down will take some cognizance of mistakes unwittingly made during the last war and efforts be made to avoid them so, if that is impossible, to ameliorate their after effects.

During the last war, it will be remembered, a great deal of sub-marginal land and marginal land was brought under the plow and seeded to wheat in a strenuous effort to meet the requirements of the allied nations for more and more food. As a result of this fine effort land that was originally acquired was furthermore and so when needed, and unquestionably the number in which farmers responded to the call for an adequate supply of foodstuffs played an important part in the ultimate victory.

Unfortunately, however, after the war, when power of foodstuffs dropped to pence time level, and labor, farmers found they had on their hands broken land which was no longer profitable to till and seed and, as a result, much of that land became harborage for noxious weeds and breeding grounds for insect pests which infested good lands and gathered good crops, and eventually became a problem of serious magnitude.

If it is again found necessary, in order to ensure the successful of the war with maximum efficiency is again use some of these ordinarily unprofitable areas in order to raise bread foods, then subsequent problems should not be overlooked when plans are being made.

Consideration ought will be given to the alternative possibility of increasing yields on the more profitable land by more widespread use of pure, vigorous and healthy seed and the adoption of more scientific methods of cultivation, wherever this may be practicable.

And if land is not deemed sufficient and seeds marginal and sub marginal lands must be used in order that war requirements may be fully met, then some consideration should be given as to the use to which they may be put subsequently and immediate plans for their use so modified and ordered that this latter contingency may be met without undue harm.

In the meantime, however, the prosecution of the war with the utmost vigor is the first claim on all citizens of Western Canada and this must be the prime and immediate objective, regardless of the sacrifices entailed.

Seeds For Export

Ottawa, Nov. Estimated area, black fallow, Northern Soil Expert Of Many Issues And Clever Seeds.

Canada has come quite definitely into both production and export of many grass and clover seeds, according to statistics issued by the Dominion bureau of statistics. Under the heading of "Canada's export seeds" the bureau reading as a number of the many issues in the export trade are now transferred to the export trade. Clover is common to common Alsike clover and timothy. In the export trade, the small seeds are now transferred to the export trade. Clover is common to common Alsike clover and timothy. In the export trade, the small seeds are now transferred to the export trade. Clover is common to common Alsike clover and timothy. In the export trade, the small seeds are now transferred to the export trade.

Timothy seed production in 1936 was 11,838,000 pounds. Canada imported 10,228,000 pounds. Timothy made a rather poor showing as, while production ran to 4,318,000 pounds exports ran to 4,000,044 pounds. Crested wheat grass, however, makes an excellent showing production ran to 1,038,000 pounds with an export of only 1,000 pounds, but an export of 634,979. Of awnless brome production and export nearly balanced, production was 2,200,000 pounds and exports 2,374,504 pounds.

Unfortunately, this report does not give any idea of the price at which these seeds sold. It is known, however, that the price of alsike seed for 1936 was around 16c per pound and crested clover from 2c to 4c and, while this price for sweet clover is too low for much profit ide for alfalfa certainly pays.

Common Tombs Broken Into After Many Years Some Rare Finds

According to the London Listener H. G. Boulenger, Curator of Reptiles at the Zoological Society, has made the facts to tell about the common toad. Mr. Boulenger says that the toad "lays its egg masses in the first water that is available immediately it has risen through the water that endowed in a pudding; the mechanical load on the toad is an amazing one indeed. It retains year after year to the same pond in order to undertake its breeding activities even if there are apparently equally desirable ponds nearer at hand. Whether questions and the tendencies which might be over the toad's instinct."

These annual ravages are usually made in the dark and the toads possess a truly amazing sense of direction. I have shown that by experiments lasting years (pg. 2 filled a large bag with toads from a particular pond and I turned them loose in a distant locality. Without exception one and all of them after a few days' aimless hops sallied forth towards the pond they had been taken from as I may say that for the purposes of the test. I say it is that there were other ponds near the place where I had turned them loose.

Natives Of New Guinea

Supposed To Be Fond Of Human Flesh Appears To Be 5000 A Head Power In The Land

Sir Hubert Murray, governor of Papua, has been in charge of the territory of Papua and New Guinea since 1908. He has made a study of the natives of the territory and has written a number of books on the subject. Here is a description of the natives of New Guinea, which is taken from his latest book, "Papua or British New Guinea."

The natives of New Guinea are supposed to be fond of human flesh, and there is no doubt that cannibalism was formerly practised in many parts of the territory, but I am inclined to think that the natives of the Papuan Gulf, who have been under the influence of the London Missionary Society for many years, are not cannibals at present, and I have never seen any evidence that they were in the past. Cannibalism is practised by the natives of the Fly River district, but I am inclined to think that the practice is confined to the consumption of the bodies of enemies killed in battle, and that it is not indulged in for the sake of the flesh as food.

Parrot Did Not Long Survive Death Of Friend

Although parrots and cats are naturally deadly enemies the case of Polly and Blackie was an exception.

Both pets of Percy Baker of Hawkeye Glen they became friends at first sight four years ago and were inseparable companions.

When Blackie a Persian took ill and died, Polly grieved for two days, refused to eat and finally passed away of a broken heart.

Percy said the parrot was at least 150 years old and was brought to America in 1776 after being found in a pirate craft in the China Sea.

CHAPTER V.

Shrewd heart with Bertha a colonel, Allen sought the old Friend Pierre to learn what had been the comment at the Bavalon Fresno on his sudden departure for the north coast.

"You mak' quack start, eh, dat night you have for de nor'"—laughed the big Frenchman when he and Jules had welcomed the wanderer. "Those gentlemen, dey want ever'one'w you beat dem to Whale Riv-ver.

"What did they say when they got back?"

"Wal, I beer dem talk wid de boss. Dey say you race dem to Whale so you can tell Neil Campbell about de mine."

"What did Gabriel say?"

"He say he don' know, dat dog."

Good old Gabriel, thought Allen, he's still my friend. Then he asked "What has Marcel been saying? I know that he's done all he could to harm the Bertha agains me. Bertha wouldn't talk to me tonight."

Pierre scowled and shook his head. "Ah, dat ees bad—ver' bad Madame Dumaine she lak' Armee, yes, she lak' dat young feller. But Ma'm'selle Bertha she wen' be all right. Ees not de money. Marcel, he's got all de trouble. She turn Fort George up hees head, so wen Armee tell Bertha you talk to her to-night.

"I got de pups in de basket-pullet, come quick, Mr. Allen!"

"Ah-hah! And she make trouble! dere quick wid Madame Martin. De dance was on and wen I come to wesh out teil dem wy' she come to Fort George."

The lesson was up when Alan took the river trail to the Hudson's Bay settlement. Long before dawn he was over the mood in which he had found Bertha. There remained but a short space, now, before he would have to start for the headwaters probably with the police only one brief an leisurely swim back Bertha. And then there would be months of absence, months of a new love affair in the service with John McCord while Pierre and Madame Dumaine remained behind. But McCord had promised him money and money he must have.

The following morning wher, Alan and Neil returned from their fish nets and were playing with the huge puppies inside the dog stockade, they heard a shout.

"Greeting, Cameron!" Alan looked up to recognize the black-set figure of Sergeant McQueen behind the stake of the gate. "You got your dogs, I see, Cameron, too! Nothing like them at Whale River."

"I got the pups in the Hantspahan, from a Husky," he answered, as the snake-grey figure appeared by Alan and the brown-patched Rogue circled him in a mad race, while Rough lay near at hand, watching their child-ish antics through condescending, oblique eyes.

"I want to talk with you, Cameron."

"All right."

Leaving Neil with the dogs, Alan joined McQueen and entered his house. The policeman took the chair Alan offered and leisurely filled and lit his pipe, then asked abruptly, "When do we start up river?"

"You mean—me Allen mustered to say

"That beast! Take that beast away from me!" she cried

Jimmy Pongo commanded Allen "You're scaring the lady. Did you think she was going to bite me? I did. Good-night Mrs Hanbury!" he opened the door. "But that's the way a special agent from Ottawa handles the mails!"

Neil was sitting at a Monteagnain a fire. Allen dropped down beside him. There had been a list of things to be bought for Hanbury Bay—and Neil had made the purchases. Then he had gone to the Hudson's Bay store and had McCord wanted to—as he expressed it—"get Fort George and the girl who doubted him?

HOT'N AND COMMENT

Hitler before the war, was making bitter complaint about Anglo-French encirclement. Today Russia is very active in that game but Hitler is no longer speaking on the subject.

Finland, Denmark, Norway and Sweden are within the Russian scope for further encirclement. By the time this war is over Germany may know the real meaning of encirclement. With Holland, Belgium, France and Switzerland on the western and southern fronts, the Russians could say that Germany will be surrounded and no longer a maritime country.

The legionaries of the U.S. are loud in their demand that the States stay out of the war. When warriors oppose war the indications that the promoters of war will soon be put out of business. It is instructive to find that men who know war are anything but belligerent.

Russia is looming large as a shadow over not only the Balkan but also over the Balkans. There is likely to be an alliance among the northern countries facing the Baltic, and Italy may be counted on as a factor in the Balkan contest. Italy is now going to exert a fundamental threat to its interests. In this the Vatican is strongly opposing any expansion of Russia in Europe.

It is a mistake to assume that size is the main factor either in man or a nation. Goliath was a far bigger man than David, yet the little man was the victor, when it came to a show down. Saul was chosen King because of his size, being a head taller than his fellows. And here again David, who was many inches shorter than Saul conquered the giant, because he was a "head taller" than Saul when it came to intellectual accomplishments, spiritual vision and endurance. Russia is being looked upon today as the Goliath of nations, because of her size and large armaments. But when she comes to a "show down" with other countries led by men of spiritual mindset she have learned the value of freedom and liberty and the rights of people to work out their their own destiny. Russia will go the way of Goliath and that!

Canadians

Edmonton — Prediction that Canada will be the centre of the British Empire was made here recently by Senator A. McDonald, of New Brunswick. He thought that Canada's population would increase to at least 25,000,000—largely as a result of immigration from England after the war.

Ottawa — Hundreds of millions of dollars will be spent in Canada to make her the new air centre of the Empire. The plan was announced in London recently and involves training air force recruits from Britian, Australia, New Zealand and Canada, as well as manufacturing all types of air craft in the Dominion. Building and training will be adaptable for both war and civil aviation.

Calgary — Allowable production from the wells in Turner Valley has been increased to 30,000 barrels of crude oil per day. This was announced recently by the Alberta Petroleum and Natural conservation board. Proration of individual wells now sets an output of from 65 to 800 barrels per day.

Edmonton, October—There is little likelihood that Alberta will be asked to pay higher personal taxes in order to raise $1,000,000 extra revenue as proposed by Professor Jacob Viner, who was engaged by the Province some months ago to investigate the public debt situation. Premier Aberhart intimated in an informal statement that those in the lower brackets cannot well be asked to pay more.

J. A. Hutchinson, assistant director of forestry for the province, has been appointed officer in charge of the Royal Canadian Air Force recruiting office in the city. A veteran Air Force flyer, he volunteered for service some months ago.

Establishment of public live stock markets in the province will not tend to close out existing markets, as they will operate on a competitive basis. The minister of Agriculture is ready to give written assurance that the provisions of The Marketing Act regarding commodity boards would not be met and upon receipt of the petition of the industries affected, following the plebescite.

The price of butter has advanced 2c in Calgary October.

Serving The Miner

They were roaring days in that Spring of 1898 when gold was discovered in the Klondike. Transportation was difficult and slow, and the trials of travel took a heavy toll of life. Those days are long past, but it was impossible to buy goods or services of the same high quality at prices that low. Eggs sold for $2.50 a plate, and freight over the 6 miles of the Chilkoot Pass was $5c a pound.

Life in the mining fields is different today. Fast efficient methods of transportation are breaking down the barriers of distance, and in the province or at Red Lake, in the rodent miner at Great Bear Lake and the gold miner at Dawson goes the EATON'S catalogue, bringing best the trade functions. Today only a group of these homes like EATON'S can offer to a widely scattered people, then the large selection of merchandise that is found in the EATON Catalogue. That's why hundreds, even thousands, of families in every province can now mail their orders from EATON'S with the confidence of the confidence our distant customers have in us.

EATON'S

Registration of Women

The national organization for the registration of Canadian women has been organized for the purpose of compiling, by volunteer registration, a complete and accurate record of all female citizens of Canada, so that they can be called for national service, in their own locality, in case of possibly emergency. Even if you have registered previously through some other organization, such as I.O.D.E., please sign the form supplied at your registration booth. Do your bit by registering to the very best of your ability. Do not be afraid to sign—it does not, and can not, commit you in any way. All services will be voluntary.

It is hoped that registration may be completed the week following Oct. 23, but an extension of time may be necessary. Watch this paper for further announcements regarding dates and method of registration in your town.

Broader Power for Churchill

The Times of London, soul to Winston Churchill before he became first Lord of the Admiralty at the beginning of the war, is urging editorially that he be given broader scope. Advocating a compact war cabinet, the news-paper said; "Mr. Churchill, for instance, without whom no war cabinet would be complete, might well be allowed to range over the whole field of war, and not merely over the oceans, with his fertile imagination and his inimitable powers of expression."

The Times approved a proposal that the War Cabinet be cut down from nine members to six at most

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H.G.L. Strange, Director "The Crop Testing Plan

A dispatch from Ottawa tells us that the Honorable Mr. T. A. Crerar, who is to be Canada's representative to Great Britian, is taking overseas with him "The Canadian Wheat Puzzle". It would be better put, it seems to me, if the dispatch had stated that the Honorable Mr. Crerar is taking to Great Britian the most welcome news of the splendid contribution that Western Canadian farmers have made to ultimate victory in the form of the large amount of wheat they have produced, and which is available for Allied use.

In 1914 there was no wheat surplus, and it was "touch and go" whether there would be enough food for the Allied Armies and Civilians, but the wonderful Western Canadian crop of 1915 assured the necessary supplies of food staffs. This year Western farmers have again produced a great surplus of wheat, which is certainly the world's most important war munition, for no army can fight without food, and of all foods that are required of soldiers, none quite compare with good bread made from high quality wheat.

The news, which Mr. Crerar is taking with him, of this generous supply of fine Canadian wheat, will unquestionably be heartily welcomed by Great Britain and her allies.

—oOo—

There is reason to hope that out of the welter of confusion over European affairs good may come. The British Government desires the formation of some stable international system such as the United States of Europe. This movement has a growing army of supporters on the need for sacrifice of national sovereignty in favor of control by some central federal govern-ment.

COMMUNICATION

Editor Alix Free Press:—Recently, by Radio and in the Press, Mr. Aberhart has announced the Social Credit war policy, and in the House of Commons the Federal Social Credit Members defined the stand of Social Credit, and of New Democracy.

Briefly this war policy is "Conscription of Finance and Industry before conscription of Man Power".

We are convinced that in no other way can we, as a nation, make the maximum and united effort which alone can bring

This policy is not a new one for Social Creditors; it reflects what is, and always has been, fundamental in their teaching and beliefs.

There seems to be some confusion as to what is meant by conscription.

Conscription does not mean confiscation. It means effective control so as to obtain the greatest efficiency and, as far as possible, equality of sacrifice.

Nor does conscription mean nationalization of everything, which would result in the wholesale expropriation of all property and, from a prutical point of view, the loss of all property rights. Absolute power would be centralized in bure aucratic authority, and regimentation clamped down on us rivalling the dictatorship which we are fighting against.

With regard to finance, conscription does not mean confiscation of people's bank balances and savings, but it does mean that the Federal Government shall assume absolute control of the financial system and shall become the sole issuing authority for all money—including monetary credit. This will enable the Government to finance all war requirements by the debt-free issue of money against needed production and the retirement of this money as such production is used up.

Taxation should be steeply graduated as to larger incomes and profits on the basis that those who profit most must pay most. By an equitable system of taxation, and price regulation, it is entirely possible to prevent inflation, i.e., any unwarranted rise in prices.

Farmers must receive adequate returns for their enterprise and produce, and agriculture recognized as the basic industry.

In introducing the War Budget, Mr. Ilsley said, 'The real cost of war must come out of current production." That is obviously true, and it seems incredible that its implications are not fully understood. It means that in a real sense we must pay as we go. In Social Credit terms, "The cost of production is the cost of consumption." If our financial system reflected the physical facts of our economic life, we would emerge from the war without added debt for "the real cost of war must come out of current production." The real cost of war is paid in blood, in sweat and in tears. The financial system should be merely a convenient method of keeping a proper record of what we produce and consume. It should reflect the physical facts. Yet the staggering debts of the last war still press on us and, unless something is done about them, they will continue to do so for generations to come. The people of Great Britain still are being taxed for the Crimean and South African wars, in addition to the last World War. The insanity of such a system of war finance should be evident to all.

Mr. Graham Towers, Governor of the Bank of Canada, has told us that a Government can finance its needs by borrowing, by taxation or by money expansion. Social Creditors believe that only the two latter methods should be employed. In other words, we can, and must, pay as we go.

The Government can, through the Bank of Canada, create and issue the money it needs to finance the war, without adding to Canada's debt. If we find it necessary to obtain more war material than we can ourselves produce or exchange for exports, obviously we must borrow where we obtain the material—that is abroad.

Conscription of industry does not mean its confiscation nor its nationalization, but its effective direction so that it can, as quickly and as efficiently as possible, reach a maximum output. It means effective and equitable control of prices and profits.

We believe Canada can make its greatest contribution to Victory by a maximum production of war material of all kinds, including food.

Finally, we are utterly opposed to conscription of man power for any purpose unless preceded by conscription of Finance and Industry.

Failure to grasp the foregoing facts will spell national disaster. Continued use of methods of finance which have proved so fatal to economic progress in the passed will land us in a quagmire of debt that will wreck our national life.

Until this vital question has been tackled, and until the economic security, present and future, of all persons engaged on active service, and their dependents, has been guaranteed (we have found promises are not enought), the issue of the conscription of man power cannot be entertained.

Citizens of Alix received a public notice from the Calgary Light Co., this week, to the effect that they were expected to pay the government tax on the amount of electric juice used. In view of the service tax imposed on light users in this part of Alberta, the rate of the opinion the company could easily absorb the government tax—for cooler than some of our hard-pressed citizens can do.

Winter has come to Alix. Snow has fallen to a depth of several inches, and temperatures are down to near the zero mark. Not more than half the threshing has been done which may or may not be disastrous-gone to the farmer, depending largely on the price of wheat next May. According to reports many farmers would have to hold their wheat anyway, owing to lack of elevator space.

We wish to correct an error. An announcement was made that voters had to register in September. We should have stated that the list is open to the end of this month. You have now got till next Tuesday to get your name on the voters list. If you want to vote this year you must register with Mrs. Tarwood.

Owing to the war, a problem has presented itself in finding a market for Canadian apples. The Dominion Government is taking an interest in the matter and will try for a solution. England is not buying our apples this year as a measure of economy. Tons of this fruit will be wasted if buyers are not found. One way would be to eliminate the middleman and sell cheaper.

Everybody's War

For the first time in history Canada has declared war against another country not a war against the German people who, in the main are probably no more loving a people are the Canadians but against the authority in charge of the government of Germany, in short against the dictator, Herr Hitler.

Since Canada went into the great war of 1914-18 she had not assumed the full status of nationhood and although this country at that time behaved the load of the Motherland willingly and even with enthusiasm she did not have the breadth of choice that is hers to-day.

The time Canada picks up her reins as a belligerent with all the force and power of a sovereign nation is her own right. She enters the conflict as a co-partner with and of the same status as Great Britain. She voiced her decision to do so of her own volition and expressed her decision in the democratic way through her parliament the symbol of her democratic form of government which the people of this country have doubled to uphold and maintain.

What is more, the decision of Canada to participate actively in the war as voiced through parliament was unanimous. All political parties represented in both houses joined forces in uttering the decree which Britain had set up the country with British Premier and Premier against the dictator who is apparently willing to sacrifice millions of his own people as well as millions of the subjects of the democracies to enable him to satisfy his lust for power and conquest.

Insofar as Canada is concerned she has decided unanimously to play the role of a Freedom Lover in a war to stop Hitler from overrunning a number of international blackmail and terrorism. The people of this country know and along with the people of France Great Britain, Australia and other units of the British Empire that it is high time to call a halt to the kind of thing which has constituted a continual menace to the peace of the world for the last two or three years.

The people of Canada, along with the people of the other democracies now in the fight, are peace loving. They are anxious to be allowed to go about their own business, to be able to make progress in the fields of agriculture and industry without hindrance, enjoy their social life and the happiness and contentment which are rightfully theirs. But this people of this country are not willing to buy peace at any price. They are not prepared to surrender the liberty and freedom won for them by their forbears. It must be a peace with honour—a peace which carries in right of self-preservance for Canada and all those nations whose people believe in their high privilege.

War's Responsibility

Canada, having decided of her own free will and with all the authority of nationhood in her own right to engage in this conflict, the people of this country have, for the first time in their history, assumed the responsibility of waging war upon people who declare war upon others.

As a result of her own decision, as voiced through the nation's assembly, Canada has become deeply involved in the conduct of war. How well wage this fight on a voluntary basis and this entails upon every individual in the country the responsibility of doing his or her utmost to do his or her share to the best of his or her ability and in the manner in which he or she may be best fitted.

Such an effort is going to entail sacrifices, but the people of this country have announced that they are willing to make the necessary sacrifices, so we must look upon any hardship we or her encounter as a necessary evil.

In this country, it is everybody's war. The duty of prosecuting the war with the utmost vigor is not confined to those who volunteer their services in the industrial, science or air forces, either on the battlefield or the home front. It should decided to need an expeditionary force overseas, or to serve in the second line of defence on this side of the Atlantic. It is confined to the members of the veterans' and nursing organizations who recently responded so nobly to the call for registration of volunteers for emergency service in this country, if and when required.

No, in war time, the call is much wider than that. It embraces every man and woman in the land, even the youth of the country, for the welfare and the business of the country generally must be carried on with the maximum of energy and efficiency with the winning of the war as speedily as possible as the single objective.

The job is found necessitates a single purpose pooling the activities of all our people, whether they be employed in the field, factory or office, or executive position, these industries perform dictate the necessity for preparedness and for the whole hearted and active support of all the forces this country are committed in making them proportionate and in waging this war. The war is a war for every Canadian.

University Closed

Week At Present, Defied In Middleburg Is Discontinued Indefinitely

Middleburg University world-famed seat of learning which began to do so since following the advent of the Hitler regime, will remain closed indefinitely, it was announced today.

Only two universities in this country will continue classes during the winter semester. They are Berlin, Leipzig, Jena, Munich and Vienna. The two were deemed sufficient to handle the number of students during wartime.

Jesus In The Game

The name can be stated as Canada stated it long ago, says the Toronto Star. With the substitution, now, of "nation" for "nation", his declaration is this: "That this world, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth."

Kitchener Of Khartoum

Remained With Pretty Much Girl Spoiled His Life

It is an old gray Scandanavian in County Kildare, miles from the nearest town, lives the woman Lord Kitchener of Khartoum wanted to marry, writes H. Trevorth-Hobbton in the London Sunday Dispatch.

All through his later life he was reputed to be a woman-hater. He never married. He was feted to the point of rudeness with women he had to meet. But his love for Miss Katie Kelly, farmer's daughter, whom he met when stationed at the Curragh in the late seventies was never forgotten.

Now their story can be revealed for the first time.

Miss Dor Lotie Kate, he called her in his letters to her after they were parted. "I am only happy when I breathe the same air as she does," he once told a friend.

With her all else seemed unashed The rather solemn young officer remained became gay and merry only in the company of the green lanes that led from her home at Hill of Rathbride. There the great military plots where he was sowing

Never was a shadow in their love. Miss Kelly's mother disapproved of young Kitchener paying court to her daughter. Indeed, she did not approve at all of their friendship. For the Kelly were Catholics and devout ones, and Kitchener was a Protestant. It was on that rock that almost wrecked the romance.

Now a little old lady of nearly 90, she lives alone, her only companion a single maidservant. In the typewritten letters which she has preserved in her cottage she tells how Kitchener came to have one.

Kitchener was a youngster with youth. The publicity where they pounced the splendid officer, Kitchener's friends and her brother were famous, media meeting them and making love to the girl who inspired of the stables. No laughing visitors came up the lane to Hill of Rathbride now.

Canadians

Quebec Canada may become the centre of Empire aviation in peacetime, in the opinion of Lord Riverdale, head of the British mission. The air strength co-ordinating scheme, he said, is "not only a war measure."

"It need not stop with ending of hostilities," Lord Riverdale explained. "Commercial aviation is still only young, and this country can become a centre for peacetime training and mass facture of aircraft."

Winnipeg—Buying of Canadian wheat by the British market, since ninety days started, is said to be resuming. It is thought possible that new orders will relieve the congestion. In the meantime Vancouver grain men are hoping that empty storage space there amounting to some 13,661,000 bushels will be used.

Canada's carryover from last year is about 180,000,000 bushels. The 1939 crop is estimated at 465,000,000 bushels. Total elevator storage capacity is 488,460,000 bushels.

—oOo—

Ottawa—Denial that the expenditure of the four governments concerned with the new Empire air training plan would total $700,000,000 the first year was made by Lord Riverdale, head of the British mission. The previous estimate of "several hundred millions" still stands.

Representatives of the governments of Australia and New Zealand are now en route to Ottawa to consult with the British mission and Canadian representatives. Canada will be given control of the gigantic plan.

Estevan — Governments at Ottawa and Regina have been invited to operate coal mines in this area for the duration of the war. The invitation was made by a United Mine Workers of America official after a two day strike. Mines in this area are used to supply the fuel needs of relief recipients.

Ottawa — A plan to register skilled and semi-skilled labor for war time industrial needs has been announced from Ottawa. The registrations will be undertaken by provincial employment services and will be used in filling demands for workmen in the trades. Scarcity of labor in certain locality will be relieved from a district in which there is a surplus.

Ottawa—P. E. Cote and Wilfred Girouard, both members of the House of Commons, have resigned in order to contest seats in the Quebec provincial elections, it was announced by election officials. Mr. Cote was minister of highways in the Godbout government. The resignations may necessitate federal by-elections.

Ottawa—Canada's gold production in 1939 set an all time record both for quantity and value. In that year 4,738,117 fine ounces of the metal were valued at $165,833,000, according to a recent report issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

Vancouver — British Columbia's government will shelve their demands for more equitable redistribution of tax sources for the duration of war. "This is a time for harmony and getting together," declared Premier Patullo. "It's no time for disunity and petty grievances."

The Week in Edmonton

Alberta's newest industry received important recognition recently, when an order for 10,000 army blankets was placed by the Dominion government with the Magrath woollen mills. Government of the province assisted in the purchase of raw wool just prior to a steep rise, thus enabling the factory to carry out the order.

Alberta's school book shortage, reportedly caused by the sinking of the Athenia by Nazi under-seaboaters, is now relieved, according to Dr. G. McNally, deputy minister of Education. Ordered through a Toronto house, the volumes missing—two French texts and one reference book are now on the way and the classes delayed will be able to proceed with their studies.

Youth training centres will be operated at 20 to 25 points throughout the province, according to details of the dominion-provincial plan just released. First schools will open November 6. Courses for boys, girls and for both boys and girls will be available. They include workshop, farm, home and city mission classes. Eligible ages range from 16 to 30. Last year 7,000 young people attended 37 centres.

Members of the Alix Junior Grain Club:—

Dear Members—Once again we approach the date set by the Department of Agriculture for our annual Seed Fair. Doubtless by now you have all received official notice that the 10th day of November has been chosen for that purpose.

You will recall that our membership did not exhibit 100 per cent as our club would have desired last fall. However, the opportunity presents itself once again, and this time our club hopes to profit from its past experience. Do not let your club down. Have your sample on exhibit in the U. F. A. Hall not later than 1 p.m., when judging will commence.

Exhibits will be shown much the same as at last fall's show. Each weighing 15 lbs. and exhibited in a white cotton sack. Screens are still in the Pool Elevator.

Remember to invite your parents and others to come along. They will find much of interest to them also.

Yours faithfully,
Roy Barritt,
Club President.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Everlasting Punishment" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science Churches on Sunday. The Golden Text is Exodus 20:6. One of the Scriptural citations is "But the Lord of hosts shall be exalted in judgment, and God that is holy shall be sanctified in righteousness" (Isaiah). One of the correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, is "Every supposed pleasure in the evil forsaken paves the way to experiences of purity, until the belief in material life and sin is destroyed" (p63).

Editorial by Aesop

Once upon a time, long before Hitler was ever dreamed of, a woodsman went into a forest to ask the trees to give him a handle for his axe.

"It removed our modest a request," according to Aesop, "that the principal trees agreed to it, and it was quickly done; them that the plain, homely ash should furnish what was wanted. No sooner had the woodsman fitted the staff to his purpose than he began laying about him on all sides, felling the noblest trees in the wood.

"The Oak, now seeing the whole matter too late, wringed out to the Cedar: "The first concession has lost all if we had not sacrificed our humble neighbor, we might have yet stood [illegible]." — Montgomery (Ala.) Advertiser.

The Problems Of War

The war in which Canada is currently engaged as an active participant may be expected to solve, at least temporarily, some of the problems which have mostly afflicted the country in the past few years. On the other hand it may serve to accentuate some problems later on, if not now.

It is apparent, for instance, that in a war of even moderate duration, a wide scale relief problem is destined to vanish for the time being. Certainly with the demand for man power for the fighting forces, for elevator shell-holes and to some extent for augmented agricultural effort there cannot be much idle in the urban centres, except those who would normally be unemployed by reason of advanced age or physical or mental infirmity. Even some of the latter will no doubt find it possible to make satisfactory business towards their own support under war conditions.

In the rural districts, which will be called upon to supply added beforehands with large quantities of foodstuffs, a widespread RELIEF PROBLEM is almost inconceivable while the war is in progress, except where man or illness may be induced by complete crop failure over a wide area. A condition which it is hoped will not occur in the lifetime of the present grown men. Even however if crop failure should occur on a small or drought or from any other cause, it is a reasonable assumption that many resourceful PROBLEMS would be found to help solve some of the unemployment occupations in the larger centres, opportunities undreamed because of the existence of a state of war.

The Railway Problem

The war too may be expected to accentuate the national railway problem. If Canada is to fulfill one of her principal missions at the war she will not only provide the allied fighting forces and their nations with large quantities of food, but a no substantial supplies of ammunition, these aeroplanes and possibly ocean bottoms as well as raw materials for the processing of these and other commodities outside the country.

The transportation of such raw materials and finished commodities may reasonably be expected to furnish the railways with a very material increase in tonnage to the full extent of availability of rolling stock and just as long as the allied navies are able to keep the sea lanes between this continent and Europe open. Hence so long as the war is in progress a big increase in railway earnings may be expected with a corresponding shrinkage in deficits.

The war may also be expected speedily to terminate the expenditure of considerable sums of money on public works of the type now still being authorized by the federal government as unemployment relief measures. Not only should there be no unemployed requiring sustenance in this or any other form, but the moneys now being used for that purpose will undoubtedly be required for the prosecution of the war.

* * *

Sacrifices In Prospect

While the sharp curtailment or disappearance of these irritating problems may be anticipated for the duration of the struggle against the other side of the balance sheet is destined to show some tenure, temporarily at least.

For example, there is little doubt that the war will bring a halt to the demand for larger expenditures for social reforms not only because the money which might have been allocated for such would be under heavier contribution, will be required for the more vigorous prosecution of the war but also because improved economic conditions will reduce to some extent the necessity for such expenditures. In like category may be placed such social projects as state hospitalization and medical care, extension of the old age pension plan and others of that type.

It is even possible that the exigencies of a prolonged war may, in course of time necessitate reduction in expenditures for such highly essential services as education and public health, a contingency which it is devoutly to be hoped can be avoided. One of the surest ways of avoiding such a reduction is to shorten and terminate the war with much speed as possible, and of purpose and with all the available resources, that it will be brought to as speedy a conclusion as possible.

The war has definitely forfeited richness, existent and potential, which may have to be sacrificed or curtailed before the war is over but the most certain way to minimize these sacrifices is to substantially hasten the termination of the war the matter of greatest concern, and that in turn, signifies a joint co-operative effort on the part of every citizen, every one of whom can and should make some contribution towards a speedy termination of the war. Until this is over the social and economic progress of the country on a sound basis is bound to be hampered and delayed.

Noted Scientist Dies At Edinburgh

Professor Sigmund Freud Was Famous Physician and Psychologist

Professor Sigmund Freud 83, famed physician and psychologist, died at his Hampstead, London, home recently. Freud left Vienna and came to England after Germanan annexation of Austria last year.

The famed scientist arrived in London June 6, 1938 in search of "peace, study and work."

"I am deeply grateful to my future life with my students, my books and my studies," he said then.

"They let me bring some things out of Austria just enough to work on. I still have the material with the Fates and my own personal books and papers. Everything else—all my money and my property in Vienna is gone."

With him when he came to England were his wife and their daughter Anna, his sister-in-law Minna and a nephew Harry Freud. The Jewish psychiatrist and his family remained for a time allowed to leave Austria after the German annexation.

The cause of his death Dr. Freud, whose researches in the influence of the mind on physical ills of the world-wide fame still was working on the book in which he intended to explain the Ego reflected the subconscious yearnings and fears of the people of antiquity.

The message read:

War And Science

Wants Advances In Human Knowledge, Not Its Expected

"War is adding its quota to the sum of human knowledge," Dr. Karl T. Compton, president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, declared in an address. "But the main purpose of war is the scourge of mankind."

"War is still the greatest destroyer of wealth. It sows no seeds of course the additions of science and technology to the world's progress. This was especially true of the last war," Dr. Compton said.

In Germany great strides were made in chemistry, but it was partly at the expense of physics, he said. There was however the chemistry of synthetics, which Germany developed a great many useful substitutes for the materials she could not get on account of the Allied blockade.

But not only chemistry benefited by the World War. British and French scientists made great strides in the development of the physics by winners of radio and aviation. And surprising be how the lines everywhere abided in their knowledge of human physiology and their skill in patching up casualties.

All of these advances however were purely incidental to the main purpose of science, which is to increase human knowledge, not to destroy it.

The Weeping Willow

Interesting Story Relates That Tree Came Originally From Smyrna

The weeping willow is an exotic in middle-ening in North America, originally from the east through the agency of the Right Honorable Joseph Banks, under Pope states George A Steven" and gardener at the Hampton Estate, Middlesex. Banks had sent a box of fruit shipped to England from Smyrna and observed that one of the sticks appeared as if it contained some life. He planted it in the hope that it would grow into something not known in England, and from this grew the willow tree that has given birth to so many others During the American Revolution a young British officer brought a slip of Pope's tree with him across the Atlantic, and from it, it is said, have come all the weeping willows in North America.

Lomaroa the great botanist, named the tree Salix Babylonica, or willow of Babylon, in allusion to the passage of the 137 Psalm, where the captive children of Israel are represented as hanging their harps upon the willows by the rivers of Babylon.

Limit Of Air Speed

Few Military Aircraft 400 Miles Per Hour in Set By Expert

A 600 mile-an-hour speed limit for military aircraft was set by an expert at the British Association meeting at Dundee.

The expert is Mr H. S. Wimperis, director of scientific research at the Air Ministry from 1925 to 1937 and president of the engineering section of the meeting.

A definite limit was being imposed by the laws of nature, he said. If rapid advance were to be made then the speed must be controlled to suit the conditions.

In regard to civil air services, Mr. Wimperis said that there were good economic reasons for speed to settle down in the 200 to 300 miles an hour range.

The night the canoes reached the Serfis, the police came to Alan's camp.

"Well, Cameron, we're here," said McQueen with a sigh of satisfaction lighting his pipe with a red ember from the supper fire. "Now it's up to you to decide whether you're going to stay still nestled and later pay the penalty of the law, or will decide to be sensible and talk."

"We've been all over this ancient ground," Cameron said, with an air of indifference which belied the anxiety that lay beneath him. "It's not up to me. It's up to you. You say Mr. Card is somewhere in the country. How would you have me find him? Ask the first Indian we meet? Tell him we're looking for a deadly lunatic and being important enough by the help of nature, he must if rapid advance were to be made then the speed must be controlled to suit the conditions.

Wars Unite States

Says Bodoni Of Allied Crimea Would Confer U. S. Belgium

Major Edward V. Bodoni 2nd, retired general of Artmon assorts victory for Germany in the war would render the United States financially helpless, economically and materially naked.

He told the Artmon National Career: "I believe we will" enter the war and added:

"If Germany wins and takes over the bases of France and Great Britain it would have complete control of the sea and its air force would dominate the 13 key points in the world. Whoever controls these points has the world at his disposal. Whoever wins Adolf Hitler will be the greatest power while he red tongue sought her face.

Circling the wet neck of the wriggling dog with her arms Heather pressed her head against it. It panted shrill then with the yelping hunky leaping beside her returned to the dripping bank. There having her breath she quickly disappeared up the path and he and the dog returned.

"Where did you leave Alan, Rough?" Where's Alan?" she demanded, seizing the dog by his jowls and looking into his face.

The husky sprang away from her grasp and stood with forepaws planted, eying at the opposite shore, then, yelping, he plunged into the river

Heather's face flushed. Breathless across the water. There on the steep bank stood a man. A long rifle across his forehead supporting the push on his back. Beside him romped three huge dogs.

Heather uttered a return, her heart fluttering with excitement and the joy of seeing him. "Who-hoo-o-o, Alan!"

Listening to a canoe lying bottom up on the beach, she turned it and, with the help of the paddle, shoved it into the stream and paddled hard in the wake of the swimming dog.

"You didn't kept your word! You didn't forget us?" she chided, wind-ing the canoe in the shallows and grounded.

Alan dropped his pack and seized both the girl's hands as he swung her from the canoe "Heather Mc-Queen! It's you! Why, you've grown into a beautiful young woman!" he cried, eyes sweeping her strong, graceful figure from head to foot in admiration. "What a big girl you've grown since I saw you!"

"Yes, I've no grad, Alan! We are beginning to think——"

"Where's Mr. Cameron?" Alan cut-ted as he thought of the police he had left over on the Mad Rondstone Portage. "Isn't he here? I'm sure he'll keep my word!"

"Mr. Cameron? Yes, I know. What a shock Rough gave me, Alan! I thought he was a bear when I first saw him swimming——"

"He knew you."

"I'm sure he did. He swam over when I called and almost smothered me, the old dear."

"That's more than I did, Heather," he laughed.

Heather eyes fell before his. "Oh, you got your dogs and what remember?" she said. "Mr. Cameron? Yes, he's well at the time of the above. Stopping at the outcoming Rock Portage."

"Two sixty-grays and a brown one! Don't be glad! Why you talked about nothing but your cooking days!"

"Here you, Shed, Powder!" he called. "Come here! Don't try to hide behind Heather! You're afraid of strangers, aren't you, Rough, you old dear?"

The dogs slowed in from the water and gathered around Alan.

Trans-Canada Highway

Completion Of Big Road Expected Within Two Years Will Be Boon To Tourist Trade

Now impetus to tourist traffic across the Canadian Rockies is expected with the completion of the Big Bend Highway which is expected to be open to traffic next summer. The prospect of being able to drive from Vancouver to Port Arthur is being hailed by motorists on both sides of the Rockies as a development rivalling the Canadian end of the first transcontinental railway more than a half century ago Not only will the new highway provide a direct route from Western Ontario and the Prairie Provinces to the Pacific Coast, but it will also bring much needed famous tourist centres as Lake Louise, Banff and Jasper within easy reach of centres from Vancouver and the coast cities of the United States.

The Big Bend Highway has been built around the great northern bend of the Columbia River between the towns of Revelstoke and Golden in British Columbia. It is 130 miles in length and on completion will form the final link in the western half of the Trans-Canada Highway which will ultimately extend from Halifax to Vancouver, a distance of approximately 3,500 miles

With a rich historical background of exploration and conquest of fur traders and gold-seekers the area through which the Big Bend Highway passes comprises a magnificent mountain region within sight of snowfields glaciers and all the other charms of a truly alpine world. The Columbia River, which is crossed by the Big Bend of the Columbia River and the Selkirk Mountains and of the great peaks which form part of the main range of the Rockies. It passes through one of the finest stands of virgin timber in the West, where giant cedar trees having butts up to six feet in diameter rise high above the valley along with the more modest mass of spruce which attain a height of 150 feet. Hemlocks of great age and stately firs from three to four feet in diameter are also found along the way.

To Protect Apple Market

Pulley Designed To Cope With Varying Sizes Of Fruit

To cope with the wartime loss of Canada's apple market in the United Kingdom, the Dominion government announced a comprehensive policy designed to save the country's agricultural needs of the apple industry.

The plan provides for government purchase of 1,500,000 barrels of export varieties if unsold by March 31, or earlier if conditions warrant.

Ontario and Quebec growers will be protected from possible collapse of the markets from British Columbia and New Brunswick by restrictions tending to preserve the Central Canada market for growers in that area.

Since the Canadian home market takes only 5,000,000 barrels of the annual crop, Hon. J. G. Gardiner, agriculture minister, submitted a detailed plan to the government for meeting the situation

The basic price to be paid British Columbia growers for export fruit, a minimum of 100 000 boxes is $1.40 a box.

Prices in Nova Scotia growers on 1,000,000 barrels are $1.47 a barrel for No 1 large; $1.29 for No. 2 small $1.62 for domestic large and $1.41 for domestic small.

The plan also provides for settlement of disputed classifications by arbitration board and a uniform-grade interpretation to be recommended in Canada.

New Zealand Sheep Farmers Keep Interest In Empire

New Zealand's offer to send an army division to aid Britain "in any way" was made at the annual meeting of a society of independent thinkers, Gog at London.

"Assuming it, the prime minister of New Zealand, called the decision of the Empire to go to war," Wells said. "We stood at that moment, in one or poles, united or misery," the speaker continued.

"From a little society of 1,500,000 citizens the effect of a fully united Empire would be felt in every part of the world to a great degree."

Gardner's Cove Named Trafalgar To Honor Chinese War Orphan

A foster-father has been found for the best-known war orphan in China, the little girl who was rescued last October by blue-jackets of the British river gunboat Sandpiper at Changsha, capital of Hunan province.

The Chinese secretary of the British Methodist Mission at Changsha has legally adopted the infant, who was given a Chinese name meaning "Water Fury" by her rescuers.

The child's mother was killed on Changsha the baby was blown into the water from a bombed junk, rescued by British sailors, given antitetanic treatment on the deck of the Sandpiper, and then sent to the American Yale-in-China Hospital at Changsha.

While in the hospital she became the pupil of Miss Chiang Kai-shek and Mr. Archibald Clark Kerr, British Ambassador to China, and the head of Commander W. E. J. Hasan, the Australian commander of the Sandpiper, and the rest of the ship's company.

The crew of the Sandpiper, after the child's rescue, contributed funds of $1,000 dollars for the little girl, ready for the day when she will be old enough to go to school.

What Be Licensed

Order-in-Council Here In Effect Governs Metal Exports

Metal such as copper and nickel may be exported from Canada only under licenses obtained from Hon. C. G. Ilsley minister of revenue, it was announced.

Licensing of such metal exports, a wartime measure, was authorized by an order-in-council which has now already gone into effect.

Licenses may be issued by the United States for consumption in that country are being given freely, government officials indicated from Ottawa, and it is expected the licensing provision will not interfere with normal trade between business and trade.

The measure was taken partly to prevent materials needed from being treated to the enemy and partly to conserve domestic supplies. It applies to all buy metals.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

By H.G.L. Strange, Director "The Crop Testing Plan"

One of the most remarkable features of this last crop in Western Canada has been the—to some—amazing recovery of the semi-arid or so called desert area of Southern Saskatchewan.

It will be remembered that many thought that normal rainfall there would never come again, and others said that even if good rains did come, that normal yields could not be produced because soil blowing and "soil mining," they believed, had permanently destroyed fertility.

Yet this last year normal rains did come, and the normal rains brought with them once again normal yields.

Students of agricultural history are not surprised, for they have faith in the wise observation of Ecclesiastes, having noted that natural conditions come over and over again in this world, and so they believe that any piece of land which once produced a good crop can certainly do so once again.

History and Ecclesiastes suggest too, however, that some day drought, and no poor yields, will come again; against these there is but one safeguard which is to prepare for the lean days by saving up something during the periods of good rain fall and of good crops.

An intensive drive is on in California to aid the EX-Every Thursday campaign which is sweeping the state. Thousands of workers are enlisting to sell the idea to the voters. In spite of these frank campaigns for weekly or monthly dividends we still hold to the idea that governments should be supported by the people instead of the other way round. A system that undermines thrift and industry will produce economic indigestion and lead to a paternal government that will work more ill than good. Spiritually minded people will work out their own salvation and a high er civilization based on the Golden Rule.

In China there is an increasingly hostile attitude assumed by the Japanese towards christianity on the ground that it stiffens Chinese initiative and self-reliance.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Adam and Fallen Man" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon at all the Christian Science Churches on Sunday. The Golden Text is: Ephesians 6:10, "Be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might." The responsive reading is: "And when Adam was ninety years old and nine, the Lord appeared to Adam, and said unto him, I am the Almighty God; walk before me, and be thou perfect" (Genesis 17:1). Other of the correlative passages from the Bible and "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, is "Adam, where [art] thou?" and the results sought previous to request of the Messiah, as Christ, which have stood these years in the divine estimate, the essence of Truth" (p. 332).

According to official word received from Ottawa, there is a possibility that the province may receive an increase of $10,000 for the advancement of agriculture this year. Distribution of the money will likely be handed over to the Seed Board which recently discussed plans for use of the money should it be received. The Board consists of the deputy minister of agriculture, superintendents of the Dominion seed branch and Lethbridge experimental station, president of the Alberta seed growers' association and of the Dominion seed growers' association.

Fur field days at 13 centres are planned by the department of agriculture. Classes in the rearing of pen-raised animals and the marketing of pelts are on the agenda. All may attend. Under the direction of Wm. Culpetts, fur farm supervisor, classes will be held at Mirror and Erskine. Look for local announcements. H. M. Pearcek, Canadian National Silver Fox Breeders' assn. and H. B. Harris, of the Hudson's Bay Co., will assist at the classes.

Government will place Vet-Craft wreathes on all Cenotaphs and War Memorials in the Province on Remembrance Day. The wreaths all bear a ribbon from the Province bearing the legend "In Remembrance". Stating that disabled men and their families will benefit by the orders, Mr. Pully added that government's action showed recognition of the sacrifice made by soldiers who enlisted in the last war and gave their lives for Canada.

Alberta's now famous bull exchange plan, by which farmers are enabled to bring pure-bred sires to their herds at small cost while liquidating scrub sires, is now climaxing the year's operations. 200 animals valued at $10,000 have been assembled in Edmonton stockyards. Said by experts to be the finest herd ever assembled in Alberta, they are about ready for shipment to farmers in all parts of the province. All breeding stock is purchased from established breeders, is tuberculin tested and cared for until shipment. Since inauguration of the exchange plan, not one of 580 bulls have reacted to the test for bovine T. B. it was stated.

Sources Of Peril

Great as have been the results of the campaign against tuberculosis in the Dominion and particularly in Western Canada, there are two potential sources of infection which require constant watching if the gains which have been made in the past few years are to be consolidated, unabated and extended.

They form the sanitive methods and later the preventive precautions which have been adopted in recent years to curb this great menace have brought remarkable rewards in general improvement of the health of west-erners and in reduction of the incidence of this specific disease in well known. The story has oft been told with indisputable figures and facts to substantiate it.

It will suffice to state here that the tuberculosis death rate in Canada has dropped from 87.6 per 100 000 in 1921 to 59.9 in 1927 and for Saskatchewan, which has a low inroad death rate from this cause to begin with in the Dominion it has declined from 43 per 100,000 in 1921 to 31.3 in 1927 and in the latter year "one-third of the deaths were among Indians."

Much of this result can properly be attributed to improved technique in treating victims of the disease and as much or more to the suspicious efforts are being made regularly in the schools and other recruit points of the potential infection 55 part of the program of prevention which is now occupying the vanguard just in the battle against tuberculosis.

* * * *

A Summer Resort

A moment ago it was pointed out that one-third of the deaths from the whole plague in Saskatchewan in 1927 were among Indians and this gives a clue to one of the two most dangerous sources of infection yet extant. The other is the unrecognized, nevertheless to the country sense of whom have come from countries where tuberculosis is rife and where adequate steps to combat the disease on the order adopted in Canada have not yet been put into effect.

But only is there a danger that the tubercle-riddled Indian may spread —and, in fact, does spread the scourge among his fellow countrymen, but he is a source of danger to the white people with whom he associates. Equally dangerous is the unsuspected from some of the European newcomers not only to those of his own nationality with whom he may colonize but especially on to those who are established in localities to the north or long residence will accord no comfort and tubercular harbour.

While the incidence of tuberculosis among Indians has shown a substantial decline since the white man has imposed the red man to the reservation the fact that one-third of the victims of this disease in one of the provinces was confined to a group forming an admittedly small percentage of the entire population, indicates the necessity for special care to substantially reduce the hazard in this quarter, not only for the sake of the Indians themselves but also to prevent them from becoming a source of infection among the "whites."

Recounting the history of the disease among the Indians in the west, Christian Smith, in a series of articles written as a contribution to the work of the Saskatchewan Anti-Tuberculosis League, recently declared that more than one quarter of the Indians of the first generations affected by the plague domin died. The second generation sustained a loss of one-third but the third generation is showing a much better trend.

Back in 1890 , said Mr Smith, "tuberculosis was so common in Indian boarding schools that 50 per cent of the pupils around the Qu'Appelle Valley in Saskatchewan had tuberculous glands and in localities other forms of the disease in 1921 however, only seven per cent had tuberculous glands In 1927 it had dwindled to three per cent and last year (1927) only 1.211 pupils who were examined in the boarding schools of Saskatchewan only 30 were found to have tuberculosis of all forms were found, which is equal to a rate of 1.32 per cent."

* * * *

Lost In Transit

The lowered incidence of the disease among the Indians during the period from the discovery of the terrible by the "whites" to 1890 is largely attributed by the same writer to the application of the law of survival of the fittest Since that time further results have been secured as a health unit composed two Indian reserves in Saskatchewan, established some years ago by the federal government. In the health unit here 1920 the death rate from T B. has declined from 847 to 300 per 100 000 . To what extent this can be attributed to the continued operation of the law of survival of the fittest or to the application of health laws best principles, it is yet too early to say.

The work among the white population and the experiment being conducted on the two Indian reservations referred to in connection with the still comparatively high incidence of the disease among Western Indians emphasizes the necessity for prosecuting this work with increased vigor and the advisability of its extension to the entire Indian population in the west with the prospect that in time the degree of infection among the Indians can be reduced to that among the white population.

Fire Victims

People Should Touch Children The Principles Of Fire Prevention

Last year the Fire Demon numbered among his victims 15 women and many women and children. In 1927 100 children lost their lives by fire while on 1926 118 children's lives were claimed. This is a staggering total and the responsibility for such tragedies lies in most cases in land Sometimes the negligence of parents who far too often leave their helpless little ones alone in the house while they visit neighbours or go to a show. These holocausts frequently occur on rural districts where, many hours are long darkness away and where firemen are unable to reach the burning home in time to save their children from a horrible death.

Even Before War Ottawa Women Were Taught To Drive Trucks

With the intention of becoming ambulance drivers many Ottawa women are now taking instruction in automobile mechanics.

More than 50 women applied for the course at the Ottawa Technical School night classes and registration for the course had not been completed.

Last fall it was reported many applications were received from women by the Technical School for instruction in mechanics. Before the end of the first week in October, 1927, the enrolment was limited to 50 women.

Whether its true or not, it's a good story.

When Viscount Swinton was minister for air in the British cabinet, he was the guest of honor at a luncheon given by the Royal Aeronautical society in London.

Sitting next to Lord Swinton was another famous aviator, Sir Alan Cobham, whose circles carried lower and lower, just as the luncheon was ending. The compliment got so alarmed he finally rebuked his lordship that any attempt to land a seaplane on land would result in disaster.

The big man said nothing but said his plane higher and finally returned to Southampton. There, he landed on the water and taxied up to the dock. That was enough."

Cobham's face grew red with satisfaction. "You were going to keep your word whether it was with a seaplane or not, eh?"

"I wouldn't think about it. There Minister was only one thing to do, and that was keep my word."

Whereupon Lord Swinton removed his helmet and solemnly cut greatly into 50 feet of water.

Should you be feeling discouraged or depressed about your lot in life, visit the Veterans' Hospital at Halifax.

Mr Chalmer is a patient on Camp Hill Hospital, Halifax, injured in an R.F C plane crash in 1917, since 1918 he has been totally blind, overwhelmed by natural trouble and arthritis. But he possesses a fine character which almost one his hands. He is other. Night years ago his wife died, leaving him with a young son to care for.

Mr Chalmer has a hobby By reading books in Braille, he has learned to do bookbindings, and composed verse to while up his time. He sells some of his poetry, too.

His nurse tells us that "the spirit and courage of the patient is a source of inspiration to all who have the pleasure of his acquaintance."

If you think your lot in a pretty tough one, you might, now and then, think of Mr. Chalmer.—Montreal's Magazine.

When Viscount Swinton was minister for air in the British cabinet, he was the guest of honor at a luncheon given by the Royal Aeronautical society in London.

Sitting next to Lord Swinton was another famous aviator, Sir Alan Cobham, whose circles carried lower and lower, just as the luncheon was ending. The compliment got so alarmed he finally rebuked his lordship that any attempt to land a seaplane on land would result in disaster.

Whereupon Lord Swinton removed his helmet and solemnly cut greatly into 50 feet of water.

The Last Band Recess

Associates Last Good Citizens In Month Of Obsolete M. Schwab

To compute what Charles M Schwab made for himself and other men in terms of money would give a poor idea of the man. It is a better measure to say that some of the great figures of America's industry grew in a fuller life at a happier one than he. In him were combined qualities of good fellowship and pleasing, gambling and cold calculation. He was one of the pioneers here in the Steel Age, the last of Carnegie's young men. From a boyhood in one of the industrial works he rose to be head, in succession of the greatest of steel companies in America, Carnegie, United States and Bethlehem. The last of these was his dominion for the last 15 years and he built them in less than one half of a human generation. Into that bitterest men he became. His character was lovable, his humor was infectious, his generosity was unbounded, his courage was high. This last of the Steel Heroes wrote a remarkable chapter in the story of American business and opportunity.—New Steel Sun.

Farm Fire Losses

Official statistics show that in the ten year period, 1926-35 farm fire losses in Canada, exclusive of dwellings amounted to over $36,000,000 in 41,705 fires, an average loss of $863 for each of those farm conflagrations.

Now, over three and half millions of dollars going up in smoke every year at a substantial loss to the nation and a loss of $863 represents quite a serious blow to the individual. There are very few farmers in the Dominion who could regard the loss of over $800 in the space of a few hours and probably as the result of carelessness, as a matter of little consequence.

For this reason, it is highly important that some reflection be given to the principal causes of these fire losses on the farm so that the hope that the knowledge thus gleaned will result in material curtailment of these hazards in the future. Fortunately, this problem has been tackled by the [illegible] Mr. [illegible] of Ottawa, and sound advice on [illegible] information has been gained as a result of the study made by officials of that department.

The information, however, is of little practical value unless it is digested and borne in mind, with the remedy kept in the forefront as a guide for future conduct.

* * * *

Right Start Chimney

Of the known causes of loss of farm property in Canada by fire, it is authoritatively stated that eight of them are responsible for 55 per cent of the total. Some precautions can be taken to eliminate these losses entirely or reduce them to an subsistential minimum, there seems to be no reason why the fire loss on the farm should not be curtailed very substantially.

There are very special and even more urgent reasons why every precaution should be taken to prevent an outbreak of fire on the farm. One of these is the absence of adequate and mechanized fire fighting apparatus which is available in greater or less degree in towns and cities, and even some of the smallest of villages. Another reason is the lack of a copious supply of water under pressure to fight fire. A third is a lack of man power which is available to detect and cope with fires in their early stages, the much greater risk of loss of life by fire in the country in the winter months due to the long and villages because of the comparatively greater distances which separate neighbours.

Importance Of Prevention

All of these factors indicate the importance of practising preventive measures against fire on the farm and especially those which are related to the eight major causes previously cited and which are briefly discussed in the following paragraphs

1. Defective chimneys and Bose Chimneys should be cleaned out regularly and not allowed to burn themselves out, as sparks often escape through crevices in the chimney and set fire to the attic, or they may drop on dry, combustible roofing, setting fire to it. The safest type of chimney is a good brick chimney built from the ground up and lined with fire clay or vitrified clay of a thickness or at least ½, of an inch

2. Sparks on combustible roofs- This hazard can obviously be eliminated by means of incombustible re.ing material instead of a material that will ignite readily when exposed to sparks or flying brands from adjoining fires.

3. Lightning—The tremendous toll of life and property damage annually caused by lightning can be materially reduced by means of well installed lightning rods which have proven to be nearly 100 per cent efficient

4. Spontaneous ignition On farms this occurs most frequently in undercured or damp hay although it also takes place in numerous other substances. To guard against this hazard, the following precautions should be observed (a) Cure all hay well. (b) Do not pack the hay. (c) Do not place straw, loader bundles of grain or grass hay either at the bottom or top of mows of alfalfa, clover or mow.on hays. (d) Guard against wetting of hay in storage from a leaky roof or open doors and windows; (e) Ventilate hay as much as possible after it has been put in the mow. (f) Avoid if possible, wide, deep mows.

5. Matches Make sure that your matches are completely out before discarding them. A good practice is to break them in two after the flame has been extinguished. Always strike matches away from you. Keep matches away from children and do not permit smoking in barns or other combustible materials. During threshing operations build on everybody's clearing their pockets of matches and place them in a safe container

* * * *

The Gasoline Peril

6. Gasoline or kerosene Gasoline or kerosene should never be used to start or revive a fire. Avoid the use of gasoline, benzine or other inflammable liquids for cleaning floors or clothes. There are safe and cheap substitutes on the market for these purposes Never fill lamps, lanterns, stoves or gasoline stoves while they are burning. If necessary to keep small quantities of gasoline, it should be kept in an approved can painted red and plainly marked "gasoline". Small quantities of kerosene should be kept in closed cans of a size and shape different from that holding gasoline in order to lessen the chance of mistaking the one for the other.

7 Heating equipment Heating equipment should be properly installed, operated and maintained Wooden floors under stoves should be well protected. The ashes and back of stoves and ranges should be at least three feet from woodwork or wood-lath and plaster partitions Avoid long runs of stove pipe. The sections should be securely joined and pipe properly supported at frequent intervals. Smoke pipes should be at least 18 inches from unprotected woodwork. They should not pass through floors or closets or enter a chimney in an attic, and they should be cleaned at least twice a year

8 Electrical w.ring Electrical wiring and repair work should be done by a competent electrical contractor Circuits should not be overloaded and fuses of the correct amperage (15 amperage for the average farm circuits) should be used. Disconnect irons, curling tongs, heating pads and other appliances when not in use.

Lion cubs are carried by their mothe, which gradually fade until the adult animal has a plain coat all over.

Indians used bark and leaves of white head shrub to relieve pain.

Provincial Pledge They Support In Efforts For Food Supplies

At a conference between Ministers Deputy Ministers and other officials of the Provincial Departments of Agriculture and the members of the recently formed Agricultural Supplies Committee of the Dominion in Ottawa September 27th and 28th the Federal co-operation of the provinces with the Committee was pledged in order to make the production of essential food products to meet the needs of Britain and her Allies and the people of Canada, was go-gged

Hon. Thomas D. Pattullo, Premier, Honourable Minister of Agriculture as the open [illegible] the meeting, stated that it had been called with a view to getting co-operation to an effort to increase the food supplies now available for the Allies and the people in Canada. He suggested that the Committee should be kept in mind that the city will not cease to function and consequently it would not be advisable to plan now on definite lines of production, but on that the industry of agriculture should be kept in a position to expand quickly. He [illegible] Mr. Pattullo then called on

Dr. G. S. M. Martin Deputy Minister of Agriculture who said that it was the hope that the Agricultural Supplies Committee would not be a new body for co-ordinating the various agricultural services that are consigned to do special duties on recommendations of the war He explained that no yet the fullest information was not available as to just what food products would be required. At that the conference could hope to do for the time being was to shape a tentative programme. One of the big post contributions in the way effort that can be made, he said, is by the sending of supplies for the Red Cross to the United Kingdom. Every effort should be made to see that the [illegible] of dedicate surpluses rise

Dr. Martin then called on

Dr. C. H. Mc Donald Dominion Commissioner of Agriculture to make a statement on the food supplies position in Canada a reflection of everything have now great on the level of economic and [illegible] conditions on the [illegible] of the war which is now nearly four months ago and [illegible] Dr. Mc Donald said that [illegible] Canada's agricultural [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

The Week in Edmonton

Of far-reaching importance to persons on military service and their dependants was government's order declaring a moratorium on soldiers' taxes and debts, announced as signed by the Lt. Governor. The order also provides for administration of a soldier's affairs if he so wills. These regulations are extensive in effect and depart from the usual practice in that they provide a simple and inexpensive way for a soldier to have his estate managed by the public administrator, pending his enlistment," said Premier Aberhart.

Youth Training projects have been organized at Beaverlodge, Irvine, Hanna and Standard, it was stated here this week. One at Myrnam is scheduled to open Nov 15. Prior inception of this dominion - provincial scheme, some 7,000 rural boys and girls have received training in occupational, social and cultural projects.

An all-time record in wool production, which places Alberta in the lead among provinces in the phase of agricultural activity, was set this year. Announcing that the current year's production reached 4,020,000 lbs Agriculture Minister D. B. Mackenzie said that the present sheep and lamb population is 834,000 head, an increase of over 300,000 in two years and 400,000 in twenty years. During 1938, Alberta marketed 192,000 head of sheep and lambs, with 78 per cent grading "good handyweights".

Order closing of Wainwright buffalo park and slaughtering of the buffalo roused sportsmen's associations in all parts, until it was discovered that Elk Island park is to be doubled and Wainwright taken over by the military authorities.

An Old Timer Laid to Rest

Another of our highly esteemed pioneers of this district, in the person of Agnes Dixon Loughridge, passed away at her home in Alix on Monday, Nov 13th, at the age of 84 years and 9 months.

Born at Stormont, Ont., on March 31st., 1855; married on December 25th., 1883. In 1899 she came to Alberta and since 1900 has been a resident of Alix and district.

OLD TIMER
ON THE EDMONTON TRAIL

There is no more or open houses
Before the locomotive came,
But that is left to Wilson Atkins
Wa. the one last known to fame.

One night on a dog sleigh
Bound for Calgary from the North
Made remarks... Wolf sure gnaw me!
That one old Wilson Wash.

The pay to that he was serving
Had the best years here
And the gentleman suggested
He put on another pair.

As Bill heard not the rash shots
He wasted by replied
"I may make post-don't suit you,
You can cut your grub outside.

History does not tell us
What the aged couple said,
The one thing that's certain—
They went supperless to bed.

There's a moral to this story
Which these pencil lines disclose;
Though appearances may short you
Don't criticize the clothes.

Sunday afternoon, at Denis Bailey, an elevator containing 25,000 bushels of wheat, burnt through the walls and spilled over the C.N.R. tracks. The building, no doubt, crumbled up like a crate under the weight of the wheat.

Dr. J. W. Frey, noted U. S. Government marketing expert, says there is no good reason for varying margins in Alberta retail gasoline spreads. Some spreads noted were: 4.5 at Calgary, 5c at Edmonton, 5.5c at Drumheller, 5c at Lethbridge, 5.5c at Red Deer and 5.7 at Three Hills.

The B.C. Government reports a surplus of very close to $4,000,000 in public accounts this year.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Soul and Body" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon at all Christian Science churches on Sunday. The Golden Text is: "Bless the Lord, O my soul: and all that is within me, bless his holy name." (Psalms 103:1). Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Who forgiveth all thy iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases; Who redeemeth thy life from destruction; who crowneth thee with loving kindness and tender mercies" (Psalms 103:3,4). Also the following from the Christian Science textbook, Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy: "Let the sick learn that God, the divine Principle of man, is the only healer, and that Christ, Truth, is His healing power. Let them learn that sin is the only disease, and that the destruction of sin is the only cure for disease. Let them learn that Life is God, and that man's eternal life is the reflection of Life, Truth and Love" (p. 495).

R. Roy M Lees, Optometrist and Optician, will be at the Alix Hotel on Tuesday morning, December 5th. On Wednesday he is in Stettler of each week. Consult in Calgary office at 2-3-210 Northern Building.

The U. F. A. chicken supper has been postponed to Wednesday, Dec. 6.

The wood pile at the print shop is getting low. This is a suggestion to some of our readers who are in a arrears.

Howard McCallum left on Wednesday for his home at Fawcett after spending several months with his brother, Douglas McCallum.

Say Tommy, about that item you had in the Bashaw Star of Nov. 16th, something about your local butcher trying to scare a stray animal into his shop. Did you mean "Bos" or "Bos"?

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Page journeyed to Gladstone on Tuesday of last week to attend the funeral of Mrs. Page's father, Duncan McRae, who passed away on Sunday, Nov. 19th., at the age of 69, having resided in the Gladstone district for the past 43 years. Mr. and Mrs. Page returned on Thursday evening.

Thursday of last week, Mr. Pfahl, of the Highway Service Station, met with an accident on the trail south of Alix. Going up to the condition of the roads, his truck skidded and turned over into the ditch, badly crumpling his fenders, running board and cab. Mr. Pfahl escaped with slight injuries.

The members of the Women's Institute are holding an Auction and Contract Bridge in aid of the Cemetery fund, in the Legion Hall, on Dec. 1st. Admission 25c, supper included. The quilt and a picture will be raffled. The next regular meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. A. Pearn, on Dec. 8th.

When you are buying stuff at an auction sale make sure you know what you are buying. John Schaury, west of Bentley, lost 14 head of cattle among which were nine head of milch cows. At the administrator's sale of the effects of the late John Riddell, Mr. Schaury bought a sack of what was supposed to be common salt, some of which he mixed with cattle feed. It proved to be some sort of a weed killer, and was fatal to all stock eating it.

Weather conditions have been such for the past week as to allow the resumption of threshing operations. So far in Alix district is concerned, all wheat will be in the bins by the end of the week. The wheat will be tonight and the price low. In conversation with Mr. H. H. Mann, on Monday, he expressed the opinion that the farmers would receive between $1 and $1.25 per bushel, hardly enough to pay expenses. Alix, however, is largely a mixed farming district and will come out ahead of the all wheat farmers.

Another boxing contest is billed for Friday night in the Legion Hall. Mr. Biddle is making a strenuous effort to raise money to buy new equipment for the school gymnasium. The one held a week ago was quite successful and has encouraged Mr. Biddoe to try again. The preliminaries on Friday evening will be repeated in Lacombe on Saturday evening in the Pavilion Hall. All who are interested in exhibition among the pupils of the school should show their interest by attending the boxing matches tonight. Len's interest in the educational and physical welfare of the pupils is deep and genuine.

Mr. A. G. Ditto is on a moose hunting trip, accompanied by Ole Sorde, of Red Deer.

The Alix Bakery will move across the street to the new premises about the first of December.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Meikle and Miss Jean Meikle were in Edmonton the fore part of the week.

The Ladies' Aid, of Alix United Church, are having a Banaar, Sale of Home Cooking and Tea in the U. F. A. Hall, on Saturday, Nov. 25th.

Alix will be the first place where the fans in town Pincoka is charging 75c for the same card. Your support is needed for Alix has fired choice for the Northern Eliminations which would be for two nights and the champions named here at Alix. The Value Of Trees

The value of trees is almost inestimable

On large or small scale arboriculture, the science of the cultivation of trees, can be made to yield dividends in cash, land and comfort; in cash, because their produce may be sold, in land, when their maintenance is used to promote the production of other commodities and in comfort, where they are used to satisfy a sense of appreciation of beauty and love of home surroundings.

While much has been done in recent years to stimulate the cultivation of trees in the prairie provinces, it is surprising that much more has not been done when one reflects on the many benefits which trees confer upon mankind.

Consider, for instance only the direct economic value of trees, that is to say, the produce which they yield in the form of a crop which is saleable in the ordinary manner. Even such value of trees to an institution that a columbine might well be filled in enumerating the great variety of valuable produce which they can give. To mention only a few of these, reference might be made to timber for building construction, posts for fencing, logs for fuel wattles for wickerwork and basketry, stakes for horticulturists, repair parts for farm equipment and fruits and nuts for human and animal nourishment.

When one reflects on the variety of return possible from the growth of trees it is surprising that there are not more farmers growing them as a cash crop. Many of the things enumerated above could be sold for cash on the premises and many of these products used on the farmer, which they are grown, thus saving the necessity for cash expenditure to acquire them.

• • • •

Needed In Every Farm

Farm posts are fuel, for instance, are a necessity on every farm. A few acres planted in quick growing trees of the right type, properly tended and intelligently harvested, would provide these two essentials for the grower in perpetuity

While the direct cash value of trees grown on the farm may be great, they may also have an even greater indirect cash value where they are used to promote shelter for other crops and for livestock, to prevent soil erosion and drifting and to harbor and conserve moisture. Even where not a single tree is cut down for fuel or for fencing, a shelter belt can be used to increase acreage as an aid to the cultivation of vegetables and fruits, to protect and furnish moisture for, cereal and other field crops and, as a shelter for homes, cattle and sheep they have a value which cannot be estimated.

The use of trees as an adjunct to diversified agriculture is a necessity, and without them, it would be difficult to make any farm a self-sustaining unit

But trees can be made to yield dividends in a form other than dollars and cents, and there are many who would be willing to say that their intangible value is even greater than that measured by the number of dollars that money returns. Bedrooms, of course, is made to the influence which trees have in the promotion of love of home, in the cause of satisfaction which they bring by their very presence and live with them. In their ability to satisfy man's yearning for the beautiful and the appeal they have to the aesthetic side of man's nature

• • • •

An Alberta Progress

The appearance of a group of farm buildings on a prairie knoll without a tree to soften their outlines or the verdure of shrubs to anchor them to the earth and blend them with the surrounding landscape have an ugliness to the spectator of something vital missing from the scene. And yet there are many such

A shelterbelt number to that just depicted cannot be called by any other name than a "home"—a place to get away from as often as possible The place where the dwelling is surrounded by a shelter belt with protective trees skirting the outside and encircling a garden well stocked with fruits flowers and vegetables, must be dignified by the name of "home"—a place which lends one and allures

The more farm homes, so distinguished from houses, there are on the province, the more permanence there will be in citizenship, the more pride there will be in the community, the more stability there will be in the great industry of the west—agriculture, and three things spell the welfare of the country

By all means let us have more trees

A Little Polish History

Marvellous Powers Of Recuperation Shown After The World War

When Poland was set up at the end of the World War the area, if all were had had 1,000,000 acres of forest. Her little industry was almost entirely confined to the textile stations. All of the rolling stock of the railways in Russian Poland had been taken as well as 7,000 locomotives and 1,845 locking engines.

Now completely detached from any country except Belgium, Poland has 11,000,000 acres of farm land, a part of this and but 6,000,000 acres of forest. Her little industry has almost doubled, War with Bolshevik Russia halted her progress after the Armistice.

But and the Treaties of Versailles gave Polish independence by combining Russia a invasion not until 1924 was Poland's position established and its budget balanced. Then Poland had had only 13 years of recuperation. Ten of them were years of bitter world-wide depression in which

Poland reduced tillerary from 31 per cent. to 24 per cent. Her progress formerly held by Russia, where 39 per cent. were illiterate, to 23 per cent. Poland had 15 tones as many as much coal as before the war. Her commentary schools that enrolled 3,000,000 students 7,000 high schools 17 universities

Besides an army, she had built a navy of 16 warships, a merchant marine from nothing to 112, and tone built the port of Gdynia on the Baltic from a village of 600 in 1920 to one of 150,000 in 1939 purchased 4,000,000 acres of land, mostly from estate to create 700,000 new farms in a broad and progressive program of land settlement.

Her population had increased more rapidly than any in Europe in 1939 her wheat and rye production surpassed that of pre-war years and she was Europe's third largest producer of crude oil, the world's third largest producer of zinc and the host in lead her steel industry to eight times what it was in 1913 and built 820 miles of railroads built 4,730 hydro-electric plants. And although her industrial production had quadrupled a problem that no intelligent Pole denied existed had been steadily increased. Poland rushed 85% among the world's powers in heroes, eighth in cattle, fifth in pigs.

Rate of increase in her productive capacity in many remarkable fields its quantitive increase; between 1926 and 1936 coal production jumped 39 per cent.; zinc production 15 per cent; cement production 84 per cent.

Heartbroken and constituted Poland's brothers have lost their lives in defense of their country at the railway station in Rumania. No trains ran to the destination that they had to flee. The Republic was dead. In its place it left life it had grown despite the fact that it had only a period between 1926 and 1939, some 20 years, to make good the poverty and woes who divided it tallied of the injustice of the treaty of Versailles—Time.

British Sailors Have Attached ID Names To The Name

British sailors have attached an ill-name to the famous Royal Oak, which was sunk in Scapa Flow by a German submarine. The Royal Oak was one of the battleships that were sunk in the harbor.

THE RIVER OF SKULLS

by George Marsh

"He must have had a streak of Indian in him."

From time to time this man Murdock had caught fragments of their conversation and had seen a part of the sketch and map, knew that the two friends were concerned with a gold strike and was curious to see it. Now, he had bounded them with his knowledge of Murdock. If McCord's stay in the hospital Mitch Drummond had had a secondary operation from which he died. Involved in the death of the River of Skulls is leaving her without protection. She handed her necklace, in the previous summer, John McCord had started from Rupert with Heather and his crew of Ojibways to find the headwaters of the Kokanesh and the gold mines of the River of Skulls.

"Do you understand, now, why I wanted you for my partner?" demanded the giant.

Allen and Bevan farrowed in thought. Then he asked "How did you get away without McQueen finding out that you'd come by Hudson's Bay?"

You see I decided then They knew that I hadn't arranged to sail, but because of what Mr. Hudson Bay Company's or the Revillon Frères supply ship that stops at Chimo and they heard that I was to [illegible] I could get over there [illegible] I took good care that they would hear it. It couldn't have been said some time in the winter that they learned that we had gone to Moose and to From Rupert House Have ag that I was somewhere in this big hearteate country, they come to Fort George to get letters guides And then they run into you. As judas they could command any kind of aid, as they carried forged papers Later, she followed them by plane to help them, but if I know her, to keep an eye on them as well.

They might not be here now if I hadn't dropped that bill."

"Yes, they would! They know where we've headed and this is the way their McCord's eyes outlined, hard and cold as his mind, intently. Now it's war to the knife. Mitch Drummond spent years to find it and I'm McQueen and his pair of half-breeds try to follow to the last drop of blood our gold I'll wipe them out as I would vermin."

Allen's long mouth twisted. McCord asked "Crazy—am I? If you're thinking that, you're wrong. I'm pretty wild, I know—this plan of mine why—"

Allen looked sheepish at the other. His nose thrust out his head and he gazed at his partner.

"The River of Skulls or bust!" he cried. "But we ought to send Heather back to Fort George, Mitch believe we start [illegible]"

McCord shortly shook his head. "It needs it now! Heather, here."

Revert To Horse And Buggy

Residents Give Up Cars, Owing To Scarcity Of Gasoline

Horses and buggies are coming into their own again now that the high price and scarcity of gasoline has forced many British Columbians to give up the use of cars.

At Chase, a town bearing traffic which includes horse-drawn vehicles, the Chase Board of Trade, for instance for several of the main thoroughfares in Central London.

Many residents have already gone back to the horse-drawn wagon of a half century ago and Chase Lumber it is now the common thing to see women driving in the station to the post office, seated in a pony trap instead of a car

To finance its equipment—and the ponies as well—no longer be bought even at a staff price, but, as in the old days, on credit, too, are becoming difficult to get, especially since they are no longer the commonplace sight they were in small quantities.

One of the most prominent salesmen devised to make the gasoline ration go a long way is becoming increasingly popular in Chase. Having been refused it, keep their car in the garage and buy a runabout, they combine removing their gas rations for the week, but use it instead for their business, getting about nine times the mileage.

Some Comments On Admiral Byrd's Antarctic Expedition

Admiral Byrd's Government-financed expedition to the Antarctic is to be commended for its contribution to the war in Europe.

There is a subject of thought which should occupy our deliberately It would say that Admiral Byrd is on the job. Canada should be able to take advantage of the opportunity offered by the U. S. Congress. All our principal claimants to the continent—except Argentina—are now fighting and Argentina is weak. So why not take advantage of the opportunity to grab the whole or a large continent?

Happily there is no colonial or territorial claim by Great Britain that would be in the way. Or at least we hope not.

We hope America is so disgusted with the land-grabbing and advantage-taking that has put Europe into its present state that it will tell Byrd to stay at home. Or, if the Government must send him let it commission him to grab Antarctica for Canada or for the Pan-American Union or for the world for anybody in fact, but the United States which needs no such retrogressive empire.

Byrd says there is coal and oil to be found in Antarctica. We say that, before the world is ready to go in for exploitation of it, it will either have found a way of freely shoving natural resources about from land to land war of extermination the civilization that knows how to use them.—Detroit News.

The fascinating theory that Christopher Columbus disregarded glowing accounts planted by Continental America on his fourth voyage of discovery, and thereby missed finding the fabulous Mayan Empire was advanced.

Dr Franz Blom director of Mexico-Americana Research Institute of Tulane University, who took the great discoverer to task for his poor judgment said that through it Columbus missed his "supreme opportunity"

Of Honduras, Blom related, "the Spaniards found only a primitive race in fare with his supreme opportunity A great empire appeared, however natives with more from a brilliantly civilized empire. Its temples and palaces, advanced astronomers, mathematicians, engineers, artists, agriculturists and manufacturers made it the Greece of America

"And Columbus turned west when the canoe had come, he would have discovered that empire Montezuma Spaniards, and extended himself from the very doorsteps of the Aztec capital.

"Instead, Columbus turned east," Blom said.

"Who, if not Maya, could these Indians have been?" asked Dr Blom. "Whence, if not from the wonderful Maya seat of Southern Mexico, Yucatan, El Salvador, Honduras and Guatemala, could they have come?"

Haynes News

The November meeting of the Ladies Aid of the United Church, was held at the home of Mrs. J Daly, on Wednesday of last week. It was decided to hold the Annual Chicken Supper on Friday, Dec. 8th., in the Haynes Community Hall. Please note the time and place. There will be a Banner table for the ladies and some things for the men too, also a Fish Pond for the kiddies. This is the big event of the fall season so don't fail to be present.

A branch of the Red Cross Society will be formed in Haynes as soon as roads permit travelling.

Miss Letha Lawton is visiting relatives in Calgary for the past couple of weeks.

After repeated delays, threshing was again resumed last week, and is now practically completed in the district surrounding Alix and Haynes. In spite of the prolonged spell of rain and snow, yields and grades are better than expected, but the price remains very disappointing. No. 1 wheat being only 44 cents per bushel at local elevators.

Owing to the condition of the roads it has been impossible for Mr. Thompson to reach Haynes lately, but services, we hope, will be resumed on Sunday next, Nov 26th, at the usual hour, 2.30 p. m.

C.A.D. Pool Celebrates

On Saturday evening of last week members of the staff of the Central Alberta Dairy Pool held a social evening in the Legion Hall, Alix, which was participated in by employees of the Red Deer and Rowden staffs. The evening was spent in dancing, singing, etc. A delightful lunch was served at midnight.

During the evening the gathering was addressed by Manager E. A. Johnston and Mr. McIlmoyle, of Rowden, president of the Pool. Other speakers were also heard.

It was a very enjoyable occasion for all present.

1940 Willy's Car

Delivery of new 1940 Willys car reveals to motorists a diverse array of refinements and mechanical features usually found only in cars selling at much higher prices.

Improvements in the new car give greater room and comfort in the interior accommodations. The front seat has a frame of tubular construction with a new type of sig sag springs. It is the most comfortable front seat ever installed in a Willys car, and has mountings which give added foot room for rear seat passengers and also for air circulation under the seat. Head room in rear seat has also been increased.

Wherever it appears, on the road or at motor shows, the 1940 Willys has received the admiration of motorists, not only for the beauty of its appearance but also for its durable safety construction and brilliant performance.

Inspiration

It is getting near to Xmas,
And my thoughts still fondly stray
To the days when we had plenty
Of what? folks now will say.

We always helped our neighbors
With gifts both large and small.
And if they hadn't got them
Why we sent them some that fall.

Now here's my dark and deepest blue
To all you with spirit?
Just send a Pail of Spuds this time,
To those whose bin is empty.

One Who Knows.

Church Activities

A meeting was held in the Alix United Church on Wednesday afternoon. The speakers were:

Rev. McDonald, of Irricana, Foreign and Home Missions.

Rev. Brown, Trochu, Religious Education.

Rev. Rev. Bundie, Three Hills, also addressed the meeting.

The main purpose of the meeting was: That by the exchange of ministers dealing with separate activities of the church work, the members would become better acquainted with the efforts of the church to carry out its purposes, and by gaining their sympathy would enlist their co-operation.

After the meeting here the reverend gentlemen proceeded to Mirror to hold a similar service there.

THE WORLD OF WHEAT

One Tenth Plan

By H.G.L. Strange, Director "The

An appeal for funds for the Canadian Red Cross is now being made throughout Canada.

During the last war numbers of Canadian and allied soldiers were taken prisoners, and many of them are alive today only because "prisoners' parcels" supplemented the meagre rations of the prison camps. Hundreds of thousands of our soldiers, war-weary, shell-shock, gassed, wounded and shattered in battle, were better able to endure their sufferings because of the extra "comforts" they received. Untold numbers of old men, and of women and children, refugees from, or living in, enemy occupied areas, found a few "necessities" given them the only bright spot in their sad and dreary lives.

The prisoners' parcels, these comforts and necessities, were provided by the Red Cross; and large supplies of all these same good things will be needed during the present war.

Each one of us has the high privilege of being able to assist this splendid Red Cross work by responding generously to the appeal for funds. Some can donate cash, while others perhaps can better give grain, butter or eggs. Whatever each gives will bring comfort and cheer to our soldiers who, under shell fire and in front line trenches, are steadfastly and gallantly defending our precious freedom.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Ancient and Modern Necromancy, alias Mesmerism and Hypnotism, Unmasked" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon at all Christian Science Churches on Sunday. One of the Scriptural citations is "Watch and pray that ye enter not into temptation. the Spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak" (Matt. 26:41). One of the correlative passages from Science and Health is "That evil or matter has neither intelligence nor power, is the doctrine of absolute Christian Science, and this is the great truth which strips all disguise from error. . . The supremacy of [illegible] power over evil comes to the central point in 'Christian Science.'"

—o—

Red Cross Campaign

The needs of the Canadian Red Cross Society are greater than at any time in its history. Not only are there materials and supplies needed for present and future hospital cases, but millions of dollars are required for the purchase of ambulances, the care of the refugees and the relief of suffering in general.

In a few days a representative will call upon you, asking for your donation. Remember the very much worth while cause, — and give generously. It is your privilege.

A Basic Problem

Waste much has been said of the importance of the use of fire prevention methods in the bush country because of the immense losses caused to one of the most valuable resources of the country timber as the result of uncontrol conflagrations, little thought has been given to the fact that even a few common other and preparable losses

Reference is made particularly to the destroying of valuable wild life as a result of fires raging through bush areas and particularly in the northern reaches of these prairie provinces

Evidence that forest fires spell destruction to wild fowl and fur bearing animals to a staggering extent is brought to the attention of the world at large by biologists and engineers working in the employ of Ducks Unlimited in the Province of Alberta as reported by Wynnard Hartbrecht in a recent issue of Forest and Outdoors, official publication of the Canadian Forestry Association.

The Province is one of wide life and of valuable lumber resulting from carelessness and insufficient protection in the forests of the great Northland regions of the prairie provinces indicative the necessity for greater precautions being taken in the future if this wonderful heritage is to be conserved to the use of present and succeeding generations and for the pleasure and enjoyment of the people of this country and visitors from outside

A few extracts from Mr Hartbrecht's article will constitute a revelation to the great majority of the people in the more populous areas of the east and should awaken them to the absolute necessity for greater and more effective conservation measures For instance, to quote Mr Hartbrecht

• • •

Study Area Confined, Destroyed

Last winter when Ducks Unlimited engineers and wild life technicians personnel of engineers of Alberta's Northland selected blocks for further study and development as wild life production centres at MacKay Lakes and Gordon Lake Dr A D Bajkov aquatic biologist, reported that for per cent of the streams in the adjacent regions had been destroyed by recent fires Working on these projects during the winter and the spring Ducks Unlimited engineers and biologists have seen at first hand the ravages wrought from the underlying smoking through the snow and threatened camps and lives.

Fires were particularly prevalent this season in the Northland—due to light rainfall and persistent drying up of surface waters. All summer the men on the D U projects have been employed under the terms of Lieut Manning engineer in charge of development work at Gordon Lake reports that during June 26 per cent of his crew's time was required to fight fires

Up to the time of reporting while fire had blanked the country to the south, they had succeeded in keeping flames from destroying any large strips of standing timber within the project The Commissioner has given instructions to remove this menace to the numbers of nesting ducks and ducklings destroyed in the destructive sweep of such fires in previous seasons many have reached staggering totals. Becoming unchecked over vast expanses of the Northland these fires leave drastic evidence of their killing power in blackened forests smoking sawdust piles and the carcasses of wild fowl and fur bearers, and in starving natives whose pots hang empty over dead fires."

• • •

Will Lose Everything

Again, to quote Colonel Newcomen in his report after he had inspected D U projects

Before I left for Gordon Lake I heard that fires were burning all around that region. When we flew over Gordon Lake I could see three fires one southeast of Chrown Lake approximately on the Alberta-Saskatchewan boundary one east of Gypsy Lake, in the same block and one right in the centre of Gordon Lake on the point where I camped last winter The fire burning on the boundary of our Gordon Lake project would cover more than nine miles frontage It is impossible to describe how much damage it has already done The fire east of Gypsy Lake must have covered about a mile frontage, where it was still burning The damage done by this fire we fought on the point where our old camp was situated I cannot estimate, either, it was burning when I left. I would say that the whole of the point was burned out and valuable timber lost and good cover destroyed.

"It is vital," says Col. Newcomen "that fire control be organized before we do anything else—or we will lose everything we have done Our money may be set by careless natives They wander over land and water trails, we don't know how far and never see them They say they could only be brought to understand that these fires (most of them man-made) are the chief cause of wildlife depletion—and their own empty bellies.

One could not better sum up a discourse on wild life than to quote the words with which Mr Bartbrecht concludes his article

"The success of any program of development established to utilize the vast potential wealth of timber, waterfowl, big game fur, fish and scenic assets, depends upon one simple basic problem controlling fire and water movement."

Shape Of Human Frame

Apparently Has Something To Do With The Length Of Life

Human body proportions and odd an average of about 25 years to life were reported to the National Academy of Sciences meeting here by one man only This was not because feminine shapes may have no such amazing effects, but because the studies have not been made on women.

In general, it is said, the man is he far from the average American or Canadian in weight and chest size Those who beat toward the overweight class are taking more chances of premature heart trouble than those then the men who tend to become skinny

The study was made by Dr Raymond Pearl of John Hopkins University, who has been working for years ago made the report that balance smoking always shortens life. Collaborating with him was Dr W Ribeiro Miniford of John Hopkins, a new finding recently that the high pulse rate was a forecast of early death, especially among overweight, neurotics.

Blood pressure, contrary to what most persons suppose, were a sign of long life in the later years.

Touching Incidents On Recent Tour Of Canada By Sir Ed

Interesting and touching incidents which occurred during the recent tour of Canada by the Prince of Wales are related in an article in the Canadian Magazine, entitled "The Prince Charming" by Mary Macmillan.

Mrs. Ernest Brown, wife of the Quaker missionary, was ordered by the doctors to leave the Yukon, but refused to go because she knew that there was no one to take her place. Hearing that the Prince of Wales was coming to Dawson, she decided to see him, if only from a distance. She was in the station the afternoon the train arrived, but at the last moment, the crowd carried her across the platform and she found herself face to face with the Prince.

Mrs. Pepys felt that the death of her husband, the last survivor of all the officers of the 8th Battalion had not prevented the wonderful 8th Battalion Association from holding its meeting, and a tremendous power. On the return trip from Vancouver the King and Queen were to see in the station the association's name among the soldiers of the last war. Then they saw the vast arena which had been erected for the occasion from a chair. The queen approached smiling in a wheel and speaking to many. She passed the man in a wheel chair, and saw the pain running his face. Then, but he is different, she thought. Then again she passed her hands gently on his shoulder.

With tears streaming down his face the veterans said: I shall thank You! Magnificent! Thank you!

She replied: You couldn't thank me as I thanked you.

Leaving Keogh with Heather Ann and John took the puppies and they dropped downstream to meet Noel at the Forks and bring his heavy arms up the firmer water of the Talking River.

When the sudden chill of the early September dusk settled on the river Keogh and Heather Ann had not supper but believed Heather into the cabin and while she ate, lay on the floor at her feet.

Suddenly the husky raised his head and growled deep and menacing.

"What is it, Keogh—a wolf come to eat on us?"

The dog stalked on stiff legs to the door, his hair rising and then walked through the crack at the bottom, then darted his breath in a low snort.

"Why, what can it be?" continued the girl, and then she was in the middle of the room listening At dusk she had dropped the heavy cross sash of birch which made the door secure, like its mate on each of the door panels. With a step she reached the gun-rack, drew her .38 revolver from its holster and slipped it into the big pocket of her wrapcords. Then she untied her 30-30 carbine, seized it, and stood beside the unsteady dog.

Presently the husky flew into a terrible frenzy Hair bristling, he smashed frantically at the door of entering his anger with snarls of rage.

"Keogh, Keogh, what is it, boy?" she whispered. "I can't open the door, Keogh! What's there, boy?"

Shortly, above the dog's growls, came a voice outside the cabin.

"Halway! Halway!"

Heather Ann's face was white, gripping her rifle. Indians! It was the Montagnais ambushes in thickets or strategems—but they McQueen's men? Did they know she was alone with Keogh? What should she do?

"Halway! Halo!"

Then Heather got control of her nerves. Those men had come in the night to a camp By the ten of the hunters, from the Forks, they would be welcomed and fed if they were hungry. She must be Keogh up, open the door and see what they wanted

Fairly dragging the reluctant husky from the door she secured him to the spruce upright of the bunk with a heavy rawhide thong, lifted the cross bar and opened the door still holding her rifle.

Halway' she called as the final light from the jungle candle flamed behind.

From the gloom of the clearing came the reply: "You be Halway?"

Yes, he's tied up! Who are you?" Heather demanded in the calmest voice she could muster.

"Hunter from Cougar Rapids' some Ole reply in the same high voice of an Indian. "We rail cano' long rapids. We meet we shoot Water spoil flour."

Two blurred figures emerged from the mark of the clearing to stand in the doorway where the suspicious girl nervously fingered the trigger of her 30-30 Inside, the angry Keogh filled the room with his snorts

"Where's your guide? your camp?" she asked, doubtful of this story of a rapids in the rapids above the camp.

"We save canoe an' mak' fire on shore. We come to you. Ole Halway not dark—we not see set, be-fore."

The light from the door lit the sweet faces of the Montagnais to the girl. They had come to table and the meal was eaten in silence. Then Heather Ann asked: "Where is the Cougar River, they said. This time the girl shook her head. A sudden heart beat with apprehension Why had her father left her alone?

"You hungry?" she asked. The elder of the two men nodded. "Then come to the table Peter"

"Three men," she quickly replied. "They come back to-night"

"Ah-ah-ah" the Indians exchanged agonized glances. Men did not travel at night. Then they saw the swift river.

"You trade at Fort George?" she asked the elder man who had seen all the talking.

"Trade at Fort George Were you come?"

"Ayan Import House—Hickman." Again the Indians spelled doubtfully into each other's dark faces.

"Come table, eat, then I show you some supper." The men were hungry.

"Ole dog!" said the elder Hickman. "I see been on Fort George."

"Ole," replied Heather, starting to toss her own piercing notes cold carbine and bannock on the table, "he belongs to me."

The Montagnais ate ravenously Heather boldly met their furtive glances from where she sat on the bunk besides the fretting husky.

When the Montagnais had emptied the last bottle and cleared the table of food set before them, casting the bones with a gesture of satisfaction, the elder man turned to the girl catching him from the bunk.

"Ole dog, he lonely eat. We stay here" he said, with a gesture of the room

Boxing Contest

On all cards the midget class proved a real attraction with Sid and Claude Smith holding the spotlight. In Alix, Hugh Sloan, of Cardston, had a rib cracked, and at Lacombe Jim Lennox broke a thumb, which accounts for Reg Siddons fighting twice in Ponoka. The Alix Club was responsible for the tour and a small loss might be counted, as yet figures are not available. Injuries, and substitutes having to be found, made expenses more than figured on at the start. Boxers and Wrestlers comprising the north came from the following places: Alix, Mirror, Ardley, Lacombe, Innisfail, Ponoka and Red Deer.

Training will start on Friday, December 5th, for the Northern Eliminations. Read work however must be carried out in the meantime and the three boys from Mirror, also Jim Lennox, of Ardley, have been added to the Alix Club. This will mean that Alix can put on a first-class card with the help of only one outside club. Alix boxers ready for any card are as follows: J. Wilkinson, Reg Siddons, Jim Lennox, A. Crawford, F. Curson, Ray Thomas, R. Hay, J. Collins, Les Siler, Merv Pears, Danny Brookhart, Owen Jennings, Ken. Charle and Sid Smith. Ken Siddons and Wilson Wrestlers, Jack Walker, G. Tiessen, G. THE WORLD OF WHEAT

Crop Testing Plan

By H.G.L. Strange, Director "The

"The drought consumes me. There on high
The hills are parched, the streams are dry,
The drought consumes me. Still I strive,
And will not leave while I survive."
(Chinese poem from the Shi King Collection of Confucius)

That drought in the large wheat areas of the world is a common experience is revealed by this ancient Chinese poem, the author of which is unknown, but which was written certainly more than 2,000 years ago.

The farmers in the southern areas of our Prairie Provinces have suffered severely from a long series of bad drought years. Most of our farmers did not leave their land, but on the contrary they strived as long as they could survive, just as did that ancient Chinese farmer poet.

And this last year, their patience was rewarded, for normal rainfalls once again came, bringing with them beautiful harvests of grass, forage crops and of high quality grain.

This experience has demonstrated to the whole world, in a most dramatic fashion, the remarkable recuperative power of the soil and of the wheat plant, and most particularly the recuperative power of the courageous farmer himself.

NAMED TO HIGH AGRICULTURAL POST

DR. A. W. HEATH

Head of the Field Crops Department of the University of Alberta, who has been selected by the Line Elevator Companies as Director of the newly formed Agricultural Division of the North West Grain Dealers Association.

Line Country Elevator Companies announced today that they have formed an agricultural division of the North-West Grain Dealers Association. The new department will be under the direction of Professor K W Neatby.

For some considerable time past the line elevators have been giving serious consideration to the most effective and constructive manner in which they could assist in agricultural problems. The proper personnel to undertake such a work was their first consideration and they are now pleased to announce the appointment of Professor Neatby who is an outstanding authority on field crops and agriculture generally, said G W P McKillingan, president of the Line Elevators Association. "He will be given a free hand in dedicating the work of this new department to the welfare and advancement of farming in Western Canada. Particular thought will be given to seed grain and crop improvement work."

Professor Neatby spent his early years in Saskatchewan and in 1924 obtained his B.S.A. degree at the University of Saskatchewan. He performed graduate work in [illegible] breeding at the University of Saskatchewan in 1925-26 and at the University of Minnesota in 1927-28 in genetics and plant pathology where he obtained his M.S.A. degree. From 1926 until 1928 he was attached to the Dominion Rust Research Laboratory as cereal specialist and in 1935 was appointed head of the field crops department of the University of Alberta.

Personality Or Pattern?

The objective of education have been set forth in many ways and by divers persons from time to time. Many definitions have been given by many authorities and by some without authority. Some of these definitions are succinct, and a few are even comprehensive. Some are not broad enough to embrace the whole field. Some fall short of the real goal.

During recent years the popular conception of the ultimate aim of education has undergone a radical change. Time was when people thought the objective of education was the absorption of a mass of facts, data and information. The schools and colleges were regarded as factories and the students as receptacles for material, and often enough receptacles and undigested material host. They were, in brief, examining machines.

Hence the popularity (not with the students) of periodic examinations the passing of which was the be-all and end-all of a successful scholastic career. All this material might be of some use and importance if it were subjected to diagnosis all the facts, data and information with which he had been packed during the preceding period. But in the final report of the final course the "victim" was able to score a disagreed percentage of marks he was regarded as a finished product He had completed his "education".

Too often the result was an automaton, who was no more fitted to take his place in the life of the world around him than a baby who was unable to make its own bottle when human aid was not forthcoming and was unprepared to enjoy the richness of a full life.

* * * * *

A Changed Conception

Fortunately, the conception of the true aim of education, by a process of evolution of thought, has resulted a higher plane though, unfortunately, there still remain within the ranks of the priests and prophets of the educational system, some who have not altogether got the range of vision that distinguished the old idiom and the old shibboleths. Even these die-hards, however, are becoming converted and are ready to admit that there is much more to education—or should be—than the acquisition of learning.

Gradually in the minds of the general public, as well as those of educational leaders, the impression is being borne home that the real objective of education is not to prepare children on a common mould, not to turn them out to a common pattern, but that rather the child is a unit, and should be to develop a personality, and that this can only be done by tending the student to think for himself and to arrive at his own conclusions instead of having his thinking done for him. The student must be given facts, but he alone should be taught to base his own conclusions based upon these premises.

The mere production of a type-student may serve the purpose very well in countries where dictators hold the reins of power and where all that is expected of the citizen is blind obedience Dictators are best served when citizens are not allowed or expected to think for themselves Hence the first safety measure adopted by a dictator in office is to seize the youth and through the educational system mould them to the desired type.

Such an educational system, however, is the very antithesis of democracy. In countries where people still enjoy the right to rule themselves it is essential that they be able to think for themselves and arrive at their own conclusions. Otherwise a mob is furnished in which dictators can easily spring up and flourish. The very basis of successful democratic government is an enlightened public opinion and the development of such enlightened citizenship is built in to be found in the schools and colleges of the nation. If the foundation is strong, the superstructure will be sound and enduring.

* * * * *

Personal Control

The student who is guided to think for himself is the student who will develop initiative and personality Regimentation will not produce individuals to rank and. Hence, the importance of development of personality in the youth of the country, if democracy is to survive" and make progress.

And if personality is to be the objective of an educational system, it is highly essential that the teacher be the embodiment of personality. that the teacher's influence make the right impress on the lives of the students. If the teacher has personality it matters little what he teaches, his example and influence will be carried in the direction of the production of the right type of citizenship The result will be domestic well-adjusted citizens able to take their place in the democratic picture with credit to themselves and to their country So may democracy live and overcome its defeatists.

Legal Climax

London Sunday Times tells this story: I met a lady who was wondering whether any one in the country would be found willing to take care of her two dachshunds for her. "They were both born in this country," she said anxiously, "and so were their parents. They are really English dogs at heart."

Honored in the sense of the official report of parliament that is considered similar to the congressional record.

VILLAGE COUNCIL

Regular meeting of Council was held on Monday evening, with all members present.

The minutes of previous meeting were read and adopted, along with the financial state ment:

Calgary Power Co.	$60 00
R. E. Todd cleaning	1 00
T. Todd, 1 load of sand	1 00
L. S. Pollock, night latch	1 50
Mrs. Hodgson, rent	20 00
Matlock Bros., coal	22 50
Wong and Co., 1 bbl.	22 50
T. Wilson and Son, relief	32 00
Lund Tiles office	4 00

Mrs. Hodgson was present re price of Block J. The council offered to sell at $50.00 per acre.

A. A. Walker petitioned for three street lights on north side of C.P.R. tracks, and to have Bashaw street from Railway Ave. to NE of Village limits graded and graveled. This petition was passed on to new Council.

Mr. Mackie purchased the share of a crop of oats grown on Village land. The village share amounted to 633 bushels, Mr. Mackie paying $60.0.

Secretary reported that four dogs are not bearing license tags. The owner will have to buy tags to save the four fines. The Council voted $25 to the Red Cross.

The Council ordered a letter written to local milk dealer advising him that the Council was not responsible for unpaid milk bills.

Secretary instructed to write for an abstract of Lot 11, Blk. 2, plan 089 A. D., as there is a question of ownership.

The following letter from the Calgary Power Co. was read.

"We have your letter of Nov. 8, written on behalf of the Village Council, about the $ per month rate increase that on electricity used in dwellings. We shall be pleased if you will convey to your Council the reason the rate was made on total accounts, including service charge.

"In the Dominion Government's regulations controlling this war revenue tax, it is expressly ruled that the service charge, being part of the cost for electricity, is subject to the 6 per cent levy. The ruling is: Minimum charges, monthly service charges, monthly meter rentals, and other charges are regarded as part of the consideration in connection with the sale of electricity, and are held to be subject to this tax.

"Another question that might arise at your next meeting is whether or not it is correct to tax the total consumed when only part of the service is used for living or dwelling purposes, the greater part being used for business. In a case like this the government requires that the $ per cent be levied on the total account. The ruling concerning this is covered by the governments definition of the term dwelling. It reads: 'A dwelling is held to include business premises where the supply of electricity for both the business and the living quarters is run through a single meter.'

"In closing may we explain that our company sets only in the capacity of the government in the collection of the tax. We are not empowered to make a change in any of the regulations set forth in the special War Revenue Act, and our duty is to levy the tax according to the Government regulations and to pass on the total collection to authorities.

"Any time a difference arises as to whether or not a certain account is correct under regulations, we will be glad to have the case investigated."

Now tilles to Lots 31-32 Blk. 7, Plan K.R., and Block 1, 089 A. D. have been acquired.

The matter of P. A. Strath's assessment was then satisfactorily adjusted.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"God the Preserver of Man" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon to be read in Christian Churches on Sunday. The Golden Text is Psalm 121:8. One of the Scriptural citations is "Thou the Lord saved Israel that day out of the hand of the Egyptians" (Ex. 14:30). One of the correlative passages from "Science and Health" with a key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, is "Step by step will those who trust Him find that God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble."

The hog brooder is an adaptation of the Revelstoke idea for the winter farrowing of sows. In order to be in a position to market their hogs at the time of year when prices are strong, farmers must establish a means of having their sows farrow during the winter without danger losing their young pigs, and this makes the question of a properly designed building of the greatest importance. Mr. Whitfield, local manager for Alberta Lumber Co., is prepared to assist farmers with advice for the Revelstoke Hog Brooder.

Why Canada Fights

[illegible] Britain and France in the fight to crush Hitlerism and all that Hitlerism stands for, in the hope that as an outcome of the conflict peace and security for all nations may be guaranteed for a long time to come.

The foregoing in a general way sums up the average Canadian's reply to the question "Why are we in this war?"

The reply may sum up the reasons in a very general way, but it is essential that Canadians understand specifically and remind themselves constantly of the reason for the necessity of crushing Hitlerism and that the best be done by a careful and analytical review of the events of the past six years in Europe and Hitler's record of broken promises.

This has been very ably set forth by the London Times and reprinted in pamphlet form under the title "The Grammar of Aggression", in rainbow form. A summary of excerpts of speeches made by Adolf Hitler as Chancellor of the German Reich, combined with his various acts of aggression during the period under review constitute an indictment so clear that no one readily understand why war was inevitable

Submitted in brief form the following extracts from Hitler's speeches and his contrasting actions tell a story which cannot be refuted:

Berlin, Feb. 10, 1933. The first and best point of the Government's programme is that we trust the and we won't go cradle

Berlin May 17, 1935—The German people have no thought of bombing any country

Oct. 14, 1933—Germany left the League of Nations.

Berlin, Oct. 30, 1933—There are Germans and Poles in Europe, and they ought to live together in agreement. The Poles cannot think of Europe without the Germans and the Germans cannot think of Europe without the Poles.

Berlin, Nov. 10, 1933—When has the German people ever broken its word?

• • • •

The Right Of, Others

Berlin, Jan. 18, 1934—The assertion that the German Reich plans to overrun the Austrian State is absurd and cannot be substantiated or proved.

The assertion of the Austrian Government that from the side of the Reich an attack would be undertaken or planned I must emphatically reject. The German Government is always ready to hold out a hand for the free will of Austrian German. After the Saar question has been settled the German Government is ready to accept not only the letter but the spirit of the Locarno pact

March 14 1935—Germany announced conscription

Berlin, July 21 1935—Both we Nationalists and the Bolshevists are convinced that there is a gulf between us which can never be bridged.

So far as even this Bolshevism down Germany into its clutches we are the decidliest and most fanatical enemies. Germany neither intends nor wishes to interfere in the internal affairs of Austria, or to unset Austria, or to conclude an Anschluss.

March 7, 1936—Germany reoccupied the Rhineland and denounced Locarno.

Berlin, March 7, 1936—After three years I believe that I can regard the struggle for German equality as conclusively to-day . I believe, moreover, that thereby the first and foremost reason for our withdrawal from Geneva collective collaboration has ceased to exist We have no territorial demands to make in Europe

Nuremberg Sept 13, 1936. We see in Bolshevism a brutal, mad doctrine which is a threat to us. . . There are two worlds. In Bolshevist Russia there is devastation, grim murder and ruin Here is laughter, happiness and beauty

Berlin Jan 30, 1937—The period of so-called surprises is now over

Berlin Feb 20 1938—The Polish State respects the national conditions in this country, and Danzig and Germany respect Polish rights That it has been possible to find the way to an understanding which emanating from Danzig in spite of the assertions of many mischief makers has succeeded in removing all friction between Germany and Poland, and made it possible to work together in true amity.

• • • •

The Lost Demand

March 11, 1938—Germany invaded Austria.

Berlin, Sept. 26, 1938—The Sudetenland is the last territorial claim which I have to make in Europe I have assured Mr Chamberlain and I emphasize it now, that when this problem is solved Germany has no more territorial problems in Europe I have further assured him that at the foregoing when Czecho-Slovakia has solved its other problems—that is when the Czechs shall have come to an understanding with their other minorities—I shall not be interested in the Czech State any more. Germany as far as I am concerned, I can guarantee it.

Berlin-Graben, Jan. 5, 1939—In general we have but one wish—that in the coming year we may be able to make our contribution to the general pacification of the whole world

Berlin, Jan. 30 1939—Only the war mongers think there will be a war I think there will be a long period of peace.

March 15, 1939—Germany seized Czecho-Slovakia.

April 27 1939—Denounced Warsaw.

Berlin, April 28, 1939—The Czech nation, with its rare total of its skill and ability in industry, its diligence, its love of its nation and of its own national heritage, deserves our respect. . . . That which the best and wisest Czechs have struggled for decades to attain is, as a matter of course, granted to this people in the National-Socialist German Reich—namely, the right to their own nationality and the right to foster this nationality and to revive it.

Aug. 21, 1939—Germany signed a pact with Russia.

Sept. 1, 1939—Germany invaded Poland.

Berlin, Sept. 1, 1939—I will not war against women and children. I have ordered my air forces to restrict itself to attacks on military objectives.

The bombing of Polish open towns began on the first day of the war.

Sept. 3, 1939—The Allieds was sent.

Permit Is Required For Purchase Of Clothing In Germany

If you were in Glenmore-st-ear and wanted to buy a pair of socks don't think you could simply enter a men's furnishing store and buy socks at a price and color suited to your taste.

If you suitably felt you needed an extra pair of "undies" don't think the minority at a dry goods store would serve you without further advice.

In either case you would be asked "Where is your Reichsgarment"? Without it you become a naught word

It is a certificate entitling the holder to buy a stated article and sometimes it is hard to persuade a German merchant that you should have one as a undershear

Even the undertaker and the sweet city at numerous places there are "wear apparatus offices." If the officials can be persuaded of the absolute need of an artificial portion, he will issue a "wearing permit" authority to buy, which in turns up by the shopkeeper whose the purchase is made.

So long as a man can call two pairs of socks his own he must do some tall explaining before he is given permission to purchase still another pair

Owners of restaurants are also frequent visitors to the local or district war economy office They must be able to demonstrate that supply unusual care the wear and tear of their serviettes and table cloths has been such that replacement is essential for keeping up the good name of the establishment.

Hospitals are in a preferred class The authorities are that they must time it to more essential than ever that utmost cleanliness prevail Hence hospitals have no difficulty in obtaining "bezugschein" for all the material of laundry [illegible] they may need
